My Lords, when Dormer's Affair (tho' ſufficiently unfortunate) is conſidered by your Lordſhips, I hope that the noble Earl will not be thought to have acted otherwiſe than as became his Character: Upon the firſt notice of the misfortune, the Earl took all poſſible care both to ſave the Effects, and ſecure the Office; he ſent the two ſenior Maſters to ſearch his Chambers, and to ſtop the Transfers of all Stock, which ſtood in his Name, in any of the publick Companies. My Lords, had the Earl that Eye on Gain, had he had that apprehenſion of diſcovery, which is repreſented, he would ſcarce have taken this laſt ſtep, which muſt and did make a ſuſpicion of the Office publick: When Mr. Dormer was returned, and upon ſuch Terms as the Managers themſelves can't ſay were unreaſonable to grant to one, whoſe Perſon was out of reach, and whoſe Effects and Accounts were in the greateſt Confuſion: His Liberty was all he asked, and that upon Condition only of a full diſcovery and a fair Aſſignment of all he had. I ſay, my Lords, when Mr. Dormer was returned upon theſe Terms, which we hope he has honeſtly performed, his Office was Sold, and every Thing done, not to Conceal, but to ſupply the Deficiencies. I would not enter too minutely into the Compoſition with Mr. Wilſon: It will, I conceive, be a full and ſatisfactory Anſwer to the Charge, to obſerve, that as the Suitors were not Parties to it, they can no ways be injured by it. If the Compoſition be precarious, trifling, and unjuſt, the Suitors are ſtill at Liberty to proceed: If more could be had, they ſtill may have more; but till more is recovered, it muſt be admitted that the little, which is gained, is owing to the Compoſition. Had the Suitors been Parties, the Order ſo much complained of for its Irregularity would not have been made without a Notice; but as Mr. Wilſon, whoſe particular Intereſt it was to have them Parties, did not deſire it, we apprehend the Order to be in uſual Manner. My Lords, the Maſters (as is in Evidence) having in ſome Meaſure engaged themſelves to make good the Deficiencies, if any ſhould happen, the Earl could have no reaſon to doubt the Juſtice of the Propoſal of Mr. Wilſon, after Mr. Hiccocks had reported it, and Mr. Edwards, the Succeſſor in the Office, had prayed the Earl to order him to accept it:

It ſeems, my Lords, a very forced and unkind Conſtruction, which the Articles put upon the Accounts his Lordſhip had required of the Maſters: but the worthieſt Behaviour may be thus miſconſtrued. The Maſters themſelves had made the Propoſal of contributing, and it will appear that they all (except Mr. Lightboun) did pay their Money voluntarily. What occaſion then for ſuch Methods as are ſuggeſted to terrify and oblige them to this Contribution? Is it in Proof that the requiring the Accounts did influence one ſingle Maſter? No, my Lords, but, on the contrary, you will find that the Payment by the Maſters did not prevail on his Lordſhip to deſiſt; for it will be in Evidence, that the Earl ſtill perſevered, and that by the Earl's direction a Letter was wrote to the Maſters, after the ſeveral Payments were made, complaining of their Delay, and requiring their Accounts. The Earl, indeed, upon Repreſentations, did afterwards think the Method impracticable, which he is the better juſtifyed in ſaying, becauſe the very ſame Method has been ſince found ſo by the Honourable Committee for Inſpecting their Accounts, and departed from as ſuch.

Upon this Subject of Dormer's Deficiency, I muſt beg Leave to remind you of what Mr. Edwards told your Lordſhips. He ſaid, "That they "were all of Opinion, that the Deficiency would be "made up; and unleſs he had believed it, he would "not have entred into the Office." If Mr. Edwards, who was ſo much concerned, was in this Perſuaſion, why might not the Earl too with Innocence? And, my Lords, this Perſuaſion, this Expectation, is, I humbly conceive, a very ſatisfactory Reaſon, why the Earl, had he been obliged to have declared an Average ex officio in common Caſes, might be excuſed the doing it in this.

As to the Caſes of Chitty and Harper, when the Circumſtances which attend them, are laid before your Lordſhips, the Inferences drawn from each will appear equally unreaſonable: for the Earl can no more be ſuppoſed to have intended a Concealment of Dormer's Deficiencies by the Order he made, after he had expreſsly mentioned in open Court the ſeveral Accidents, by which they had happened, than he could by the payment of 1000*l.* to Mr. Lochman, when he told him, that it would be the laſt payment Mrs. Chitty was likely to receive, the reſidue being in great danger from Dormer's Deficiency. But when we prove to you the very great diſtreſs Mr. Lochman repreſented himſelf to be in, your Lordſhips will be convinced that the Money was by the Earl advanced from no other motive, than a generous and compaſſionate Regard to him: This at that time was Mr. Lochman's own Senſe of it, this he has often ſince acknowledged, tho' upon his Examination he was pleaſed to claim it as his Right, and own no Obligation.

I think

I think it will be (I ſhould ſay, it is already) very full in Proof, that the Earl deſired a thorough Reformation of his Court; and tho' Difficulties have obſtructed it, yet ſurely, my Lords, it can't be imputed to any omiſſion of his in the light the Charge would place it. There were Difficulties, not only with Regard to the Maſters and their Accounts, but to their Juriſdiction and Privileges: Difficulties of ſuch a nature, that one of the Witneſſes thought, they required the greateſt Reſolution to ſurmount them. If the noble Earl had not a Reſolution quite ſufficient, it might perhaps be his misfortune, but ſurely not his Fault. But what Propoſals of Security the Maſters could poſſibly make, which they eſteemed uſeful or convenient to themſelves, and the Earl ſhould refuſe, I can't conceive. I imagined from the Scheme, on which the Charge is founded, that their Intereſt had been the ſame, had been one, and what ſerved their purpoſe, muſt have ſerved the Earl's; and yet now we are told the contrary.

How the Learned Gentlemen have made out the ſeveral Deficiencies, muſt be conſidered, when we are upon their Evidence to that Article: I will only obſerve, that no permiſſion or encouragement of the Earl's has been proved, by which they are increaſed; that no Money has been compelled into Court by any Order he has ever made to advance their Offices, nor any Countenance given by him to any one ill Practice.

How far the Earl is guilty of obſtructing the inquiry his Majeſty had directed, or how far he was inſtrumental in deceiving the Council Board, we ſubmit upon their own Evidence: It appears, that at the meeting at Mr. Edward's Houſe, all of them declared they were able to anſwer their ſeveral Ballances; and when the Subſcriptions were Signed, they were believed to be as they had declared themſelves: If they were, where was the Fraud in the Propoſal to aſſiſt each other? Or how could it be underſtood to make a falſe Appearance with Propriety of Language, or common Juſtice? But it is remarkable, that this Advice, however fair and honeſt, was not given by the Earl, but by Mr. Cottingham, and without his privity or knowledge, and occaſionally in Converſation with the Maſters: And as to the Subſcription, which they added; did the Earl uſe any Arguments to perſuade them to it? Did he preſs them, or even deſire them to Sign it? No, they themſelves confeſs, that he but barely recommended it, as being what their ſenior Maſter had, and better in Form than ſome others, which were then produced: He uſed no Arguments, he preſt them not; and they, honeſt Men (as they themſelves have depoſed before your Lordſhips) made no Scruple or Objection to it; I beg Pardon: I ſhould do Juſtice to Mr. Thomas Bennet, who I think had his Scruple to the Word Demonſtration. So that if falſe Repreſentations have been made, they who have made them are the guilty, they have deceived the Council-Board, and not the Earl; the Action was their own, free and unſolicited.

But, my Lords, not to detain your Lordſhips longer; one of the Learned Managers ſeemed ſenſible of the force of one Evidence we have to offer in Vindication of the Earl from the Charge of Avarice; and therefore, without denying a publick Fact, he was pleaſed by his Eloquence to try whether he could not bring Charity itſelf under ſuſpicion: Whether he could not confound the difference between the moſt worthy Generoſity, and the Luxury and Debauchery, and the Riots of a CATILINE! What innocence is ſecure againſt the Power of ſuch Eloquence? My Lords, had he not thought this a Defence againſt the very Foundation of the whole Charge, he would not have ſurpriſed us with ſuch an Anſwer: He well knew that the Earl could have Orphans and Widows, the poorer Clergy, and the Youth of the Univerſity, to appear and acknowledge their Obligations to him; Obligations made greater by being unasked; I cannot ſay unexpected, becauſe every Object in diſtreſs within his Knowledge, had Reaſon to expect Relief. I would ask the Learned Gentleman, whether Expences of this kind were part of CATILINE's Profuſeneſs?

This, my Lords, will be an Anſwer to their oft repeated Imputations, and muſt clear the Earl from all ſuſpicion of ever having acted from ſuch ſordid motives, or from any thirſt or impotence of Gain. Is it likely that he ſhould incourage the higheſt Villany to raiſe a Sum, and then apply it to relieve the Poor and the Diſtreſt? Is it credible, at the ſame time, that Virtue and Baſeneſs ſhould thus jointly govern him? Hard indeed is the Condition of the Earl, when his very Virtues, when his moſt commendable Actions, are turned to his Diſgrace and Injury! But under all, it is a great Satisfaction to him, that your Lordſhips are his Judges; and he ſubmits his whole Conduct to your Juſtice.

Mr. Lingard, Common Serjeant.

My Lords, the Gentlemen that have gone before me upon this Occaſion, have ſo fully opened the Nature of the noble Earl's defence in general, that I ſhall not preſume to take up any more of your Lordſhips Time, by following them in that Method; but ſhall confine myſelf to the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Articles; and ſhall beg leave to inform your Lordſhips what we have to lay before you in relation to the Matters contained in thoſe Articles. But before I proceed, I ſhall beg your Lordſhips Permiſſion to go out of thoſe Articles, ſo far as ſhortly to obſerve, that in the Preamble to the Articles of Impeachment, where the ſeveral Favours and Advantages, which the noble Earl at the Bar received from the Crown, are enumerated, thoſe which were the peculiar Marks of his Majeſty's Royal Bounty to him, and thoſe which were the ordinary Benefits and Allowances, which the Earl enjoyed in common with his Predeceſſors in that Office, are ſo blended together, and ſet in ſuch a light, that at leaſt it gives an occaſion to miſtake ſome of the latter Sort, for thoſe of the former; if it does not amount to an Inſinuation to that Purpoſe, in order to enhance the particular Advantages which the noble Earl has received, above what they really were.

My Lords, I ſhould be injurious to that noble Lord, who is poſſeſſed with Sentiments of the deepeſt Gratitude to his Majeſty, ſhould I endeavour to leſſen the Inſtances of his Royal Munificence towards him: And I purpoſely omit mentioning any thing of the noble Earl's Merit upon this Occaſion (tho' I humbly apprehend that I ſhould be thought very excuſable in ſo doing) becauſe I am ſenſible, that he chooſes to owe every thing purely to his Majeſty's goodneſs: Yet as he has (very properly as we humbly apprehend) in his Anſwer, ſet one of thoſe Matters in its true Light; by informing your Lordſhips that the Annual allowance of 4000 l. per Ann. mentioned in the Preamble to the Articles, and which he admits to have been granted to him, during the Time he ſhould continue Lord Chancellor, is no way particular in his Caſe; but that the ſame has, for many Years paſt, been conſtantly granted to, and enjoyed by his Predeceſſors; give me leave, my Lords, for a Proof of what is ſo inſiſted on, to refer your Lordſhips to what appears upon your own Journal, in the Caſe of the Lord Somers, upon the Impeachment exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons, for high Crimes and Miſdemeanors; wherein the Introduction of the Charge in the 8th Article, this Appointment of 4000 l. per Ann. to him is alledged in Aggravation of that Charge againſt him. His Lordſhip, by his Anſwer thereto, admits, that during his Cuſtody of the great Seal, he did receive the Profits and Perquiſites thereto belonging, which before his Time were become very inconſiderable; and that he did alſo receive an Annual allowance from his then Majeſty of 4000 l. per Ann. being the like Penſion that had been allowed to ſeveral of his Predeceſſors. This, we humbly apprehend, plainly ſhews both that this allowance has been uſual, and likewiſe the Reaſon of making ſuch allowance; which is the inconſiderableneſs of the ordinary Profits and Perquiſites belonging to that high Station.

I ſhall now proceed to the Articles I propoſed to ſpeak to; in which the Matter, which is charged as Criminal upon the Earl, is, That he did illegally, corruptly, and extorſively, inſiſt upon, take and receive, the ſeveral Sums of Money therein reſpectively mentioned, for the admitting the ſeveral Perſons named in the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Articles, to be Maſters of the Court of Chancery; with a ſmall variation in the 8th Article, by way of Aggravation, that there was a deficiency in that Office; which is there taken notice of: And for permitting Thomas Bennet, as it is alledged in the 9th Article, to reſign his Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies; which is agreed to be a Charge much of the ſame Nature with that in the four preceding Articles; and is alledged to be againſt the good and wholſome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

It has been ſtrongly inſiſted on, by the Gentlemen appointed to manage this Proſecution, that this is a Matter which is Malum in ſe, and conſequently a Crime at Common Law, as well as expreſly againſt the Statute of 12. Rich. 2d. and 6th of Edw. 6th. and no Means, that could be thought of, have been wanting to repreſent it under all the moſt aggravating Circumſtances, and in the moſt odious and frightful Appearance, that the blackeſt Colours could give it.

My Lords, The Earl by his Anſwer denies that he did at any time inſiſt upon the Sum of 105*l.* or any other Sum of Money, to permit or accept of the Reſignation of Thomas Bennet, mentioned in the 9th Article; or did refuſe to permit or accept thereof, until the ſaid Thomas Bennet had agreed to pay the ſame, or any other Sum of Money on that Account: Which is a denial of that, which is properly the Charge in that Article: He does indeed admit, that he did receive a Preſent from Thomas Bennet, under the Circumſtances mentioned in the Anſwer to that Article; and likewiſe that he accepted the Preſents, which were freely and voluntarily ſent to him, by the ſeveral Perſons mentioned in the four preceding Articles; in two of which Inſtances, all, and in the other two, great part of what he ſo received, has been returned. But his Lordſhip very rightly (as we humbly apprehend) inſiſts upon it in general, that the acceptance of Preſents upon ſuch Occaſions has been long uſed and practiſed by his Predeceſſors; and that they have been reckoned as the antient and known Perquiſites of the ſaid Office: That it is not Criminal in itſelf, or by the Common Law, or againſt any Statute of this Realm; or ſubject to any Judgment, which can be prayed in this Proſecution.

The Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, my Lords, in order to ſupport what they have inſiſted upon, and to make it appear that ſuch an Acceptance of Preſents is Criminal, have cauſed the Statute of 12. Rich. 2d. to be read to your Lordſhips; and have produced Mr. Ayres, to give an Account of the Ceremony, which is annually practiſed upon the Occaſion of Nominating of Sheriffs.

I won't preſume to act the Caſuiſt, or trouble your Lordſhips with any Niceties, by queſtioning, whether what paſſes upon that Occaſion ought to be eſteemed an Oath or no; but, my Lords, I hope I may venture to ſay, that it is very plain, it is no Oath of Office in general, for this Reaſon, becauſe if it had been ſo, the once taking it had been ſufficient; and there would have been no occaſion of repeating it Annually, in the ſlight Curſory manner Mr. Ayres has given an Account of, upon one particular Occaſion; which likewiſe ſhews, that what is then done, is confined to that matter only, which is then tranſacting, and not intended to be generally obligatory in other Things.

If the accepting of Preſents, upon occaſion of recommending, or admitting Officers to Places, had been underſtood to be Criminal, in the Eye of the Common Law, or againſt the Statute of 12. Rich. 2d; no doubt, but in ſo great a length of Time, Precedents might have been produced, where Perſons had been cenſured, or puniſhed, for a Practice, which has been repreſented to your Lordſhips as the moſt vile, and pernicious Sort of Bribery and Corrup-

Corruption; and yet, notwithſtanding the many marks of the Severity of the Government againſt Bribery and Corruption, which have been taken Notice of, the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have been pleaſed to acknowledge, that there is no Precedent, no Judgment to eſtabliſh and warrant what they aſſert to be Law in this Point.

My Lords, I beg leave to ſay, that a ſtronger Argument than this, can hardly be thought of, to prove that this Behaviour is not illegal: It is a method of reaſoning in our Law, and, I conceive, conſonant to the general reaſon of Mankind; That where a thing never has been done, it is to be ſuppoſed there is no ground or foundation for the doing it. Nor can this way of Reaſoning be avoided, but by ſuppoſing that there never has been any Inſtances of this nature before, or thoſe ſo rare, and private, that the Government had no opportunity of taking notice of them: A Suppoſition, my Lords, ſo extraordinary, that there is hardly room to admit of it: and therefore, when we ſhall, with your Lordſhips Permiſſion, lay before you, Inſtances of this thing having been frequently and openly done; it will not be ſo much, in order to prove the contrary of ſuch a Suppoſition, as to give an opportunity to your Lordſhips, and to intreat you to reflect on the great Abilities, and unqueſtionable Integrity of thoſe excellent Perſons, who have acted in the ſame manner; the Notoriety and Openneſs with which this has been tranſacted, and the perfect Silence of the grand Inquiſitors of the Nation, and the whole Legiſlature in regard thereto: and then to conſider, the clearneſs and force of ſuch a Comment upon the Law, both from the Actions of thoſe, whoſe Characters will not allow of a Suſpicion, that they would act contrary to what they apprehended to be the Law: And from the Silence of thoſe, who ſhould and would, no doubt of it, have taken ſevere Notice of it, if it had been thought to have been ſo.

But ſuppoſe, after all that has been ſaid, that this was ſtill a doubtful point, would it not, my Lords, be extremely hard to rouſe up an old antiquated Law, which for ſo many Centuries has quietly ſlept, without exerting it ſelf, without fixing any Mark, or leaving any Traces of its Force and Vigour, to point out the Danger attending ſuch a Practice; a Practice that has been owned and countenanced by ſuch great and unexceptionable Men, and objected to by none; and which from thence, might well receive the Appearance of being fair and innocent: Would it not, I ſay, my Lords, be very hard, without ſome previous Notice of the Danger, to put this Law in Execution, to unſheath this ruſty Sword, to wound this Noble Earl with? We hope your Lordſhips would think ſo, if it were capable of hurting him, which we humbly apprehend it is not; and that, if there is any doubt remaining with your Lordſhips, as to the Legality of the Earl's Behaviour in this Point, that the Statute of 6th. of Edw. 6th. will clear it up beyond queſtion; and that it will manifeſtly appear by that Statute, that accepting of Preſents is neither Malum in ſe, againſt the Common Law, or the Statute of Richd. 2d. and that this Statute of Edw. 6th. muſt be looked upon as a declarative Law in thoſe Points, or otherwiſe, it muſt be allowed (which none ſure will ſuppoſe) that the Legiſlature of this Kingdom has made a Proviſion to ſanctifie a moral Evil; (for that is the Import of Malum in ſe) to allow, permit, and even encourage, contrary to the Statute and Common Law, a Practice not only immoral, and vile, but of the moſt pernicious Tendency and Conſequence, if the Repreſentation made of it by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons is to be regarded.

My Lords, I ſhall paſs by the fourth Paragraph of that Statute, whereby it is provided, that the ſaid Act ſhould not extend to Offices of Inheritance: tho', I preſume, the Largeneſs of the Eſtate can hardly be thought to alter the moral Nature of the Action. By the 6th Paragraph, there is a Saving for all Bargains, Sales, Promiſes, and Agreements, of or for any Office, made before the firſt of March; and ſuch Bargains, Sales, and Contracts, are exempted out of the force of that Act. Your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to obſerve, This Seſſion of Parliament began the 23d. of January; ſo that this ſaving Clauſe makes a Proviſion for futurity. My Lords, this would be to eſtabliſh Iniquity by a Law, if the accepting a Preſent on occaſion of admitting a Perſon into an Office, was immoral and criminal, as has been aſſerted. But if it were ſo, and likewiſe againſt the Statute of 12. R. 2d. and contrary to the ſuppoſed Oath, taken in purſuance of that Statute; what, my Lords, muſt be thought of the laſt Paragraph, which provides, that the Act ſhould not extend to the Chief Juſtices, or Juſtices of Aſſize, that then were, or thereafter ſhould be? Theſe all Annually take the ſame Oath (if it is to paſs as ſuch) upon the ſame occaſion of nominating of Sheriffs, as Mr. Ayres has informed your Lordſhips; and are conſequently, by virtue thereof, under the ſame Obligation in this reſpect, as a Lord Chancellor: And can your Lordſhips ſuppoſe that ſo many Reverend and Learned Perſons, who, from their known Duty of Attendance, muſt be preſumed to be preſent in your Lordſhips Houſe, whilſt this Law was there under Conſideration, would have forborn informing their then Lordſhips, how contradictory thoſe Parts of this Statute were to the Common Law, and the Statutes of this Realm, eſpecially that of Rich. 2d? Can it poſſibly be conceived, that the whole Legiſlature would paſs a Law, not only to allow, in ſeveral Inſtances, the Practice of what was ſo contrary to the Law of Reaſon, as well as the Common and Statute Law; but even to give a Licence, and Encouragement, to break an Oath preſcribed by Statute, and Annually repeated? And that no Body ſhould ever ſcruple the doing ſo, or diſcover the illegality of this Practice, but upon this unfortunate Occaſion? And yet, my Lords, monſtrous as theſe Suppoſitions are, they muſt (as I humbly conceive) be allowed of, or it muſt be granted that ſuch Acceptance of Preſents is not Malum in ſe, or contrary to the Statute of Rich. 2d,

2d. And I hope it is plain, that this Statute of Edw. 6th, is in effect a declarative Law in those Points.

My Lords, The Gentlemen of the House of Commons seemed sensible of these Difficulties; and therefore they have with great Industry, endeavoured to distinguish what the Earl has done, from the Common and Ordinary way of accepting of Presents, upon such Occasions. They have told your Lordships, that his method was Haggling and Extortive; and have given it abundance of other hard Names: they have, to confirm it, informed your Lordships, that the Prices lately given, have been higher than those formerly accepted upon the like Occasions: tho' they have not condescended to attempt the Proof of it.

My Lords, As the manner of the Earl's taking of Presents will depend in a great measure upon the Evidence, which has been offered to your Lordships, upon these Articles; I shall beg leave to take some short Notice of it. As to the 9th Article, Mr. Thomas Bennet has been pleased to inform your Lordships, that he did desire to have the Earl's Recommendation of Mr. Hammersley, to succeed him as Clerk of the Custodies; and that being told at the second meeting with Mr. Cottingham, that a Present would be expected, he said it was a very hard and unreasonable Thing to expect a Present from him, who had so lately paid a large Sum, upon his being admitted into his other Office: But upon its being insisted on, that an 100 Guineas should be paid, he was forced to comply therewith, and agree to pay it.

My Lords, I humbly insist upon it, that if an entire Credit were to be given to what Mr. Bennet has said upon this Occasion, it would not amount to a Proof of the Charge contained in this Article: The Corruption and Extortion therein complained of, being restrained to the Consideration of permitting and accepting the surrender of the Office there mentioned; all the other Parts of that Article being only introductory to, or in Aggravation of that supposed Offence. But Mr. Bennet has not mentioned to your Lordships one Syllable of the Earl's having refused to permit or accept a surrender of that Office, or of his having received any Sum of money in Consideration of his permitting or accepting Mr. Bennet's Surrender thereof.

But, my Lords, we must beg leave to submit it to your Lordships Consideration, what Credit is to be given to Mr. Bennet's Evidence, so far as it does go, for this purpose. The Gentlemen of the House of Commons have thought fit to call Mr. Cottingham, as a Witness to this Article; who owns that in his first Discourse with Mr. Bennet upon this occasion, he told him, he believed a Present would be expected to the Great Seal, and that Mr. Bennet freely offered 100 Guineas, before Mr. Cottingham spoke to the Earl about that Affair. He expresly contradicts Mr. Bennet in what he said of Mr. Cottingham's insisting upon 100 Guineas, and Mr. Bennet's Agreement to give that Sum at the second meeting, Mr. Cottingham swearing, that the offer of 100 Guineas was voluntary on Mr. Bennet's part; and that it was at their first meeting. There are several other Contradictions in their Evidence; but I shall only take notice of that, where Mr. Bennet pretends, that Mr. Cottingham asserted he did not know Mr. Hammersley, his next door Neighbour. This Mr. Cottingham denies, and Mr. Bennet is forced in some measure to retract what he had so positively sworn; and comes down to a Belief only, that Mr. Cottingham said so, but will not be positive.

It is something surprizing, that after they have done Mr. Cottingham the Honour to call him as a Witness, and given him a Credit by so doing, Hints should be flung out, that Mr. Cottingham knows no body, except where there is Gold in the Case; that Gold is a great clearer of the Eye-sight, and the like Insinuations, to the lessening his Character. But why then did they call him as a Witness? Surely, my Lords, if he is a Person not to be believed, it was not altogether so proper to produce him as a Witness before this August Assembly. But, my Lords, we shall ease them in that matter, by throughly establishing Mr. Cottingham's Reputation; tho' it is something unusual to support the Reputation of a Witness produced by the other side: And we hope your Lordships will then find no difficulty in determining, whether Mr. Bennet or Mr. Cottingham deserves most to be credited.

In support of the 5*th* Article, Mr. Kinaston is called as a Witness. I shall take no notice of any part of his Evidence, but what relates particularly to the Charge in this Article, the money paid upon his Admittance, and the Circumstances of that Transaction. Mr. Kinaston indeed has said, that he would willingly have paid but a 1000 l. upon his Admittance; and accordingly offered that Sum, which Mr. Cottingham would not hearken to; and therefore he submitted to pay 1500 Guineas; but he owns at the same time, that he has not a very exact Remembrance of what passed upon this occasion. Mr. Bayley, to whom Mr. Kinaston refers, and who was his Agent in this Business, in his Evidence has given your Lordships an Account, that Mr. Kinaston, when he understood that 1500 Guineas was apprehended to be the Present he intended to make, said, that he thought it was only 1500 l.; but mentions nothing of the Offer of a 1000 l. It is very strange, if that had been the case, that he should not have taken notice of that likewise. But Mr. Cottingham, who is again called as a Witness, shews the reason why no notice could be taken of such an Offer; and that is, because there really was none such. He denies that Mr. Kinaston offered 1000 l. and swears that the Sum offered by Mr. Kinaston, was 1500 Guineas, and withal declared, that he would aquiesce under what the Earl should think fit in that matter; and informs your Lordships, upon his being interrogated by the Gentlemen of the House of Commons to that purpose, that he never did acquaint the Earl with what passed upon that occasion, till the whole thing was agreed and settled; and that, when he was informed of it, he expressed himself to be well satisfied therewith. Surely, my Lords, here are no extraordinary Endeavours or Artifices used to enhance the Price; no haggling, by first naming one Sum, then another, ther; but at once the matter is propoſed, and at once agreed and concluded.

To prove the 6*th* Article, my Lords, Mr. Thomas Bennet is called again; and here again the like misfortune happens as before; Mr. Bennet differs widely from Mr. Cottingham, who is called upon the ſame ſide to prove the ſame Article. Mr. Bennet ſays, that he acquainted Mr. Cottingham, that he thought a 1000 l. was enough to give upon his Admittance, and with his Reaſons for ſuch Opinion; but that, however, he was willing to give a 1000 Guineas. Mr. Cottingham has Sworn that no ſuch Offer was made, that nothing of that Nature paſſed; but that Mr. Bennet, upon being informed what had been done before upon the like occaſions, freely offered fifteen hundred Guineas.

My Lords, The very nature of the Thing, upon the Circumſtances agreed on all Hands, ſpeaks ſtrongly in favour of Mr. Cottingham, and in contradiction to Mr. Bennet, as to what is aſſerted by each of them upon this occaſion. Your Lordſhips obſerve in what condition the Earl is agreed to be in at that time; had Mr. Bennet apprehended that he had ſo very hard terms put upon him, as he would not have your Lordſhips believe he did: Would he not have ſtayed ſome little time, to have ſeen the effect of ſo violent a diſtemper, as a Pleuretic Fever? which his Lordſhip then laboured under in a very high degree; eſpecially when Mr. Bennet appeared at the ſame time to be in no very good State of Health himſelf; of which he was reminded by Mr. Cottingham, who was ſo far from acting the rapacious part, in behalf of the Great Seal (which was not in a way to ſuffer, by the admiſſion of a Perſon likely to make a new Vacancy by Death) that perceiving Mr. Bennet to look yellow, and out of order, he deſired him to conſider what he was going to do, when he took a Place for Life in his Condition. Mr. Bennet told him, it was only a Cold; and that therefore he would proceed. This Gentleman, who was ſo cautious, as he pretends, as to the Sum he was to give upon his Admittance, and which he then thought to be ſo unreaſonable, hurries on this Affair, under theſe Circumſtances of his own, as well as the Earl's State of Health; and tho' out of order, as he himſelf owned, preſſes an extorted Sum of 1500 Guineas, into the Hands of, probably, a dying Chancellor. Will not your Lordſhips think it more likely, that Mr. Bennet apprehended, that as the Price of Things then went, he might not, under a new Chancellor, come into the Office upon ſo eaſy Terms as were then offered him; rather than that he thought himſelf to be hardly uſed upon that Occaſion? And here, my Lords, I beg leave to take Notice of what has been urged, to induce your Lordſhips to look upon this Acceptance of Preſents, by the Earl in particular, to be Extorſive; which is, that the Sums of money given upon theſe, and the like Occaſions, are lately greatly encreaſed. Your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to obſerve upon what has hitherto appeared, that the Sums taken by the Earl upon the Admiſſion of a Maſter into the Room of one deceaſed, have been conſtantly leſs, than what the Maſters, who have reſigned, have had as a Conſideration for ſo doing. And it is very eaſy to account for the late increaſe of the Sums given upon theſe Occaſions, without any Extortion in the matter. As perſonal Eſtates have vaſtly increaſed within theſe few Years, and Settlements, and Proviſions for Families, have been made out of the Publick Stocks and Funds, the Buſineſs of the Court of Chancery hath increaſed proportionably; and conſequently, People would be more deſirous of, and give more money for, the Purchaſe of theſe Offices, which were improved by ſuch increaſe of Buſineſs. And as the common Intereſt of money is grown lower, it is natural to ſuppoſe, that People would be the more ready to inveſt their Fortunes in thoſe Things, which were likely to produce a better Income, even in Proportion to the riſque that was run upon their Lives, than could be made of money in an ordinary way. But whether that, which I have mentioned, or whatever elſe may be the Cauſe of it, it is ſo plain and notorious that all Places and Offices have of late Years increaſed in their Value, that it would be miſpending your Lordſhips Time to enter into the Proof of it.

My Lords, As to the Admiſſion of Mr. Elde into his Office, and the Acceptance of a Sum of money upon that Occaſion, which makes up the Charge contained in the 7th Article; and as to ſo much of the 8th Article, as relates to the like Tranſaction with Mr. Thurſton; there is not the leaſt Colour or Pretence from the Evidence, which has been given to ſupport thoſe Charges, to ground a Suppoſition of Haggling, or driving a Bargain. On the contrary, from that very Evidence it appears, that what was done by Mr. Elde, and Mr. Thurſton, was perfectly free and voluntary; and attended with a good deal of Solicitude and Uneaſineſs in the latter, leaſt his Offers ſhould not be accepted; the Circumſtances of which I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with repeating. And tho', from the Troubles he has ſince met with in that Office, he has ſomething altered his Opinion of it, your Lordſhips will be guided by what he then thought, and acted. Your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to obſerve from the ſame Evidence, that great part of the money preſented by thoſe Gentlemen, has been returned to them again; and tho' it is ſome time afterwards before it was done, it was plain, there was a much earlier Intention of doing ſo. Mr. Elde has informed your Lordſhips, that in May following his Admiſſion the Earl intimated to him, that he would return part of the money: And Mr. Thurſton received ſeveral Meſſages, which plainly appeared to be in order to a Return of part of the money which he had given; tho', on Occaſion of his being out of Town, it was ſome time after before he knew the meaning thereof, or had the money returned.

My Lords, There is one particular Circumſtance in the 8th Article, which has taken up a great deal of your Time; that I mean of the Deficiency in Mr. Borret's Office. Why that matter was inſerted there, and why it has been ſo much laboured, and your Lordſhips troubled with ſo much Proof about it, I muſt own myſelf at a Loſs to conceive; unleſs it be allowed and admitted, that the taking of money, upon the Admiſſion of a Perſon to the Office of one of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery, is not purely and ſimply Malum in ſe, illegal, and contrary to the Statute of Rich. 2d: But that, if it be done to raiſe money to make good the deficiency in the Office, as was done in the Caſe of Mr. Edwards, which your Lordſhips have upon this Occaſion heard of, it is right and well. How otherwiſe can the Deficiency in the Office be an Aggravation of the ſuppoſed Crime of taking a Preſent upon the Admittance of a Perſon into it? Is it unreaſonable to admit a new Maſter into an Office wherein there is a deficiency? Is it not as neceſſary to fill up that Vacancy as any other?

Certainly more ſo, in order to have one, whoſe Duty obliges him to a more particular Care of the Affairs thereof, which ſeem more to want it. The Aggravation then of the Fault, or rather the Fault itſelf, muſt conſiſt in the not applying the money received, towards the diſcharge of the deficiency. But how can it be a Fault not to do ſo, unleſs there had been an Obligation ſo to have applied it? And how can there be an Obligation to make ſuch Application of the money, where there is ſo ſtrong an Obligation, as has been inſiſted on, not to raiſe any money at all by ſuch means? My Lords, we humbly apprehend, that the endeavour to aggravate what is charged as a Crime in this Article, has weakned, at leaſt, what is laid as the Foundation for its being a Crime; and this with little or no Succeſs in the Proof, attempted to be made of this matter; ſo far, I mean, as relates to the Earl's Knowledge of the Deficiency, or his want of Care to be informed of the State of that Office.

I won't repeat what Mr. Godfrey has ſaid upon this Occaſion; your Lordſhips perceive that he and Mr. John Bennet were thought the fitteſt Perſons to inſpect the Affairs of Mr. Borret, after his deceaſe; and were accordingly appointed to do ſo: And upon having examined Things, as well as they then could, were both of Opinion, as Mr. Godfrey ſays, that there was no Likelihood that there would be any Deficiency; and with this the Earl was acquainted. Mr. Bennet indeed, differs ſomething from Mr. Godfrey, as to the Account which he gave of this matter; but not ſo much, tho' his Account was to be taken, as would anſwer the Purpoſe for which he was called; the aggravating the Charge in this Article againſt the noble Earl, who, there is no Room to doubt, would have acted as generouſly in this Caſe, as he did in the Caſe of Mr. Edwards, upon his coming into Dormer's Office, if the Circumſtances, as repreſented to him, had been in any near degree alike.

My Lords, I have thus ſtated the matter of theſe ſeveral Articles, to the beſt of my Remembrance, in its true Light, as it ſtands upon the Evidence already given: We ſhall beg leave to call ſome Witneſſes to prove, that ſeveral noble and great Perſons have taken Preſents upon theſe Occaſions: Men of excellent Characters, ſome of whom ſeveral of the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have taken ſuch Notice of, that I may ſafely venture to ſay, that they will concur in the Opinion, that they were Perſons of ſo much Integrity, that they would not have taken ſuch Preſents, if they had thought it illegal ſo to have done; and of ſo great Abilities, that their Judgment muſt be of the greateſt weight in this Point. We ſhall further trouble your Lordſhips to explain the nature of the Payment of 64*l.* which Mr. Thomas Bennet told your Lordſhips he made, over and above the 100 Guineas, paid by him on Account of the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies. He might, no doubt, if he had pleaſed, have informed your Lordſhips, that the moſt part of this 64*l.* was either paid to the Clerks of the Office, or belonging to other Officers, and that not above 33*s.* came to the Great Seal; and we apprehend that to have done ſo, would have been more agreeable to the Sincerity, with which a Witneſs ought to ſpeak, than to have left it in that general manner, where it might look like another Payment to the Earl. And I hope your Lordſhips will excuſe my obſerving upon this Occaſion, the unhappy Circumſtances of the noble Earl at the Par: If he takes a ſmall Sum, as this of the 100 Guineas for Inſtance, it is poor, pitiful, and a Proſtitution of his Honour; if a larger Sum is taken, he is avaricious, greedy, rapacious, and I don't know what: Tho' your Lordſhips will obſerve, the Sums accepted are regulated according to the Nature of the Office, on Account of which they are given. My Lords, his very Care in other Inſtances is made his Fault, his Actions muſt be all ſuppoſed to be done with corrupt Views; and yet his not Acting is equally blamed; it is Careleſneſs, and Neglect. This is the Light in which his whole Behaviour has been ſet before your Lordſhips, and that with all the Aggravations and Vehemence imaginable. But it is your Lordſhips, who, in a ſuperior and calmer Station, are to weigh and judge of theſe matters. It is from you the noble Earl is to expect Judgment; and it is his Happineſs, that it is ſo. And in order thereto, when we have laid this Evidence before your Lordſhips, together with an Order, which ſhews the Payment of the moneys received from Mr. Thomas Bennet and Mr. Kinaſton, into the Court of Chancery; we ſhall ſubmit the matter of theſe Articles to your Lordſhips. And notwithſtanding all the ſevere Things which have been ſaid upon this Occaſion, we humbly hope your Lordſhips will be of Opinion, that the noble Earl at your Lordſhips Bar, is not guilty of any of the Charges contained in theſe Articles.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we now proceed to call our Witneſſes, and to prove the ſeveral Facts we have opened; and we beg leave to proceed in the ſame method as the Gentlemen, who are the Managers for the Houſe of Commons, have done. As they began with the 9th Article, ſo we in our Evidence ſhall likewiſe begin there; and ſhow that Preſents have conſtantly been made to the Great Seal upon all Admiſſions into the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies; and that in many other Offices under the Direction of the Great Seal, Preſents have been uſually made by the reſpective Officers on their Admiſſions; and this hath been the known uninterrupted Uſage; and every Chancellor hath taken them as cuſtomary Preſents. We deſire, in the firſt place, that Mr. Roger Lewis may be called.

Mr. Roger Lewis ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire he may be asked, how long he hath been concerned as a Deputy in the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies?

Mr. Lewis. I have aſſiſted as Clerk of the Cuſtodies of Lunaticks and Idiots, for the ſpace of about 35 Years.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, who was the firſt that came into the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies in his Remembrance?

Mr. Lewis. Mr. Henry Wynne was the firſt that came in after I was Clerk there.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Who ſucceeded Mr. Wynne?

Mr. Lewis. Mr. Roger Thompſon?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether Mr. Thompſon be now living or dead?

Mr. Lewis. Mr. Thompſon, as I have been informed, hath been dead about theſe 9 or 10 Years paſt.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether any Preſent or Compliment was made to the Great Seal on Mr. Thompſon's Admiſſion?

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I object to the Anſwering of that Queſtion; and deſire to know, whether your Lordſhips will have Evidence againſt Gentlemen that are dead, who are no way capable of Anſwering for themſelves before your Lordſhips here? If my Lord can ſhew any Title or Right he had to ſell this Place, we are ready to hear him; but to give Evidence againſt a Perſon that is dead, and cannot ſpeak for himſelf; I ſubmit that to your Lordſhips.

Mr.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, this matter is very proper to be objected to now, and it is very neceſſary for your Lordſhips Determination in the Beginning of this Affair. I ſee by this Queſtion, and their Opening, what large Compaſs the Gentlemen have taken, not only as to theſe Offices, but as to many other Offices Preſents were given. I take the proper Queſtion before your Lordſhips to be, Whether this be lawful by the Laws and Statutes of the Realm? and if that be the Queſtion, I ſubmit it whether it is material to give an Account what other Perſons have done? Whether, when a Perſon is brought upon a Proſecution for an Offence againſt the Law, it be material for him to ſay, that other Perſons have been guilty of the ſame Crimes? This is a Queſtion at Law upon the Conſtruction of the Statute; and they ſay it is neceſſary for them to give theſe Inſtances, to ſhew the Judgment of thoſe great Perſons upon the Act of Parliament; but ſure I am, it was never yet attempted to give in Evidence the Actions of other Perſons in order to expound a Statute. The Expoſition of a Statute muſt be founded on the Words of the Law, and not on the Actions of other Perſons. In all the Experience I have had in caſes of Proſecutions for Crimes founded on the Common Law, or on Acts of Parliament, Gentlemen argue from what the Law is, what Authorities have been in thoſe Caſes, and what the Conſtruction hath been in former Judgments. My Lords, this is a matter of great Conſideration to your Lordſhips, not only upon the Account of the Precedent, but alſo upon the Account of the Time that your Lordſhips are like to ſpend, if you are to go through all the Offices of the Law, to ſhew how many great men have accepted Preſents. It will take up a great deal of Time, without any Fruit at all. But, my Lords, there are other Conſiderations which will prove it unreaſonable to admit of this Evidence: At preſent your Lordſhips have under your Conſideration the Caſe of this noble Lord within your Bar; but would they in Defence of him impeach others, not here to defend themſelves? Many of them are dead, others are living: Will you try Perſons not accuſed, and without being preſent to anſwer for themſelves? But, my Lords, with reſpect to our ſelves, is it reaſonable for us to take upon us the Examination of ſeveral Facts, without knowing who the Perſons charged are, what the Circumſtances of the Caſe were? Are we to ſhew the Difference, or ſtate the Circumſtances? It is impoſſible for us to do it. My Lords, this being the Nature of the Caſe, it is a matter for your Lordſhips Judgment, now in the Beginning, that your Lordſhips may ſee the Extenſiveneſs of the Evidence they have hinted at, and intend to produce. That which we inſiſt upon is two things, that it is not material, and that there is no manner of Notice for the Perſons ſo charged to make any Defence, or to ſhew how the Circumſtances of the Caſe were. So, my Lords, we muſt beg leave to have your Lordſhips Judgment in this matter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, if the noble Lord produceth any one to make out his Innocence, we do not oppoſe it. But if the noble Lord endeavours to ſhew what the Law is from the Practice of other People, it is altogether improper. It is impoſſible that the Law can be judged of by the Practice of other People in committing the ſame Facts. That can't have the Weight of the Opinion of a great Man. The Opinion of a learned Perſon, not concern'd in the Queſtion, is an Opinion of weight; but the Opinion of a Perſon concerned in the Queſtion, is not to be look'd upon as of any Authority. If the noble Lord makes Uſe of this Kind of Evidence, by way of mitigation, or of leſſening his Offence, in that View it can be of no Significancy: Becauſe the Aggravation or mitigation of the noble Lord's Offence muſt ariſe from the particular Circumſtances, Manner, and Facts of his Offence. We muſt ſubmit it therefore to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether this is a proper Inquiry or no.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we beg leave to inſiſt upon it, that this is a proper Queſtion, and very material for the noble Earl's Defence. He hath inſiſted in his Anſwer, 'That what is objected to him in this Inſtance, hath been long 'uſed and practiſed in the Time of his Predeceſſors; and that ſuch Preſents have been reckoned 'among the ancient and known Perquiſites of the 'Great Seal; and the making and accepting there'of hath been notorious to all the World, and 'never before looked upon to be criminal, or 'complained of as ſuch; and that he humbly 'hopes, that the giving or receiving of a Preſent 'on ſuch an Occaſion, is neither criminal in it 'ſelf, nor by the Common Law of this Realm; 'and that there is not any Act of Parliament, by 'which the ſame is ſubjected to any Puniſhment 'or Judgment, which can be prayed in this Pro'ſecution; and the ſaid Earl further hath ſaid, 'that he thinks himſelf obliged humbly to lay this 'before your Lordſhips, not only in his own De'fence, but in Vindication of the Honour of ſo 'many great and excellent men, who have been 'his Predeceſſors in the ſame Office, and have all 'along done the ſame, for which he is now com'plained of; and alſo of others, who have been 'Lord Chief Juſtices of the King's Bench, and 'Common-Pleas, Maſters of the Rolls, and Judges, 'who have likewiſe received Preſents in money, 'upon the Admiſſion of the ſeveral Offices under 'them in the reſpective Courts of Juſtice wherein 'they preſided; and who, the ſaid Earl is aſſured, 'never apprehended themſelves to be guilty of 'any Crime againſt any the good and wholeſome 'Laws or Statutes of this Realm: And there'fore we take it to be our Duty to give proper E'vidence to ſupport this Part of the noble Earl's 'Anſwer. But, my Lords, it is objected by the Gentlemen that are Managers for the Houſe of Commons, that they are not prepared to enter into this Proof, becauſe they had no Notice that ſuch Evidence would be given: In Anſwer to which we humbly ſubmit it, that the Anſwer the noble Lord hath given, that ſeveral preſiding Officers in the Courts of Law and Equity have always received ſuch Preſents, is ſufficient Notice to them to be prepared to anſwer ſuch Evidence as might be offer'd to ſupport this Allegation. My Lords, as to the other Objection, that the Opinions of great men are not Evidence in their own Caſes, we ſubmit it that in this Caſe it is a material Circumſtance. Though the Precedents of great men, (whoſe Names they are unwilling to hear) who have taken Preſents in like Caſes, and not thought it criminal, may not controul your Lordſhips Judgment in this Particular, yet I humbly apprehend that ſuch Inſtances cannot but have great weight in the Event of this Caſe. They are material Circumſtances, ſtrong Inducements to incline your Lordſhips to believe, that this noble Lord had no avaritious, no corrupt Deſign, in accepting the common cuſtomary Preſents that were voluntarily tendred to him. And ſince it is made ſo material a Part of his Defence, and that he might well think himſelf innocent and ſecure in following the Examples of ſo many honourable and learned Perſons, of which we are prepared to give your Lordſhips many Inſtances in Evidence; and ſince they have Notice of it, and that the noble Lord hath inſiſted upon it in his Anſwer, we humbly beg your Lordſhips will admit us to give the ſeveral Inſtances in Evidence.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I beg your Lordſhips Patience. My Lords, we humbly apprehend this is very proper and regular Evidence. I think there can be no Evidence more proper. If the noble Lord ſhould have the Misfortune to be thought culpable, will he not appear under another View to your Lordſhips, when he hath had the Concurrence of ſeveral great Perſons, of whoſe Integrity, Honour, and Knowledge, no Queſtion hath ever been made? If he himſelf hath introduced this Practice, and ſet it up by himſelf, it will then moſt certainly be an Aggravation; if he hath done no more than others have done, it will be an Extenuation. My Lords, taking it in that Light, there is no Reaſon why this Evidence ſhould not be given. But, I hope, your Lordſhips will further conſider of the preſent Caſe: Here is a Law inſiſted upon of ſeveral Hundred Years ſtanding, that makes this Criminal: It is owned that there hath been no Determination or Judgment at Law, that this is Criminal: Practice, eſpecially in Reſpect of old Statutes, hath oftentimes been allowed and admitted to explain the Senſe and meaning of thoſe Statutes. There are no Records preſerved of this, and therefore we are under a Neceſſity to confine our ſelves to ſuch Evidence as we can produce of living Witneſſes, and therein we apprehend we are proper, as it is Part of the matter in Iſſue before your Lordſhips. Your Lordſhips are as well to try the Earl's Anſwer, as the Common's Articles. Another Circumſtance they are pleas'd to mention againſt receiving this Evidence, is, the taking up of your Lordſhips Time. Your Lordſhips have had the Goodneſs and Juſtice to hear, with great Patience, a very long Evidence, with repeated Obſervations and Openings of the Articles, in order to prove a noble Peer, one of your own Body, to be Guilty: Can it be ſuppoſed that your Lordſhips will not have that Patience, which is due to all People in Favour of Innocence, and when one of your own Body ſtands impeached? For theſe Reaſons we humbly hope that this Evidence ſhall be admitted; and that the noble Earl ſhall have the Benefit of this Explanation, what the Senſe of ſo many great and excellent men hath been of this old and doubtful Statute.

Mr. Robins. My Lords, we apprehend your Lordſhips will not be of Opinion, that this will be to defend the preſent Impeachment, by the Impeaching of others. We lay it down as the Foundation of our acting, that our Predeceſſors have done the ſame, notwithſtanding this Statute of Edward the 6th. and therefore it is a reaſonable Inference, that this was not taken to be within the ſaid Statute. We apprehend it cannot reflect upon any that are either Dead or Living; and that, as we are in Defence of this noble Lord, we are at Liberty to examine Witneſſes, to prove that other Perſons, his Predeceſſors, have done the ſame.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I apprehend we have the ſame Right to juſtify our ſelves by Precedents, as they have to accuſe us by Precedents. What the noble Earl's Predeceſſors in other Inſtances have done, hath been mentioned by Way of Aggravation. The Caſe of Dr. Eddisbury hath been mentioned over and over by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons; and they have aggravated the Offence of the noble Earl, for not following that Precedent; and as they had a Right to aggravate the Earl's Offence, by not following the Precedents of his Predeceſſors, ſo we think we have the ſame Right to ſhew in other Inſtances, that we have followed the Examples which have been ſet us by our Predeceſſors. But they ſay, this is againſt Law: Whether that is ſo, or not, is the Queſtion; and it will be material for the Deciſion of that Queſtion, to take into your Conſideration, what hath been the Opinion of great Men in all Ages, upon this Act of Parliament. Continual Uſage, from Time to Time, even from the making of the Act of Parliament, is the beſt Expoſition of that Law. Contemporary Uſage, or the Opinion of thoſe, who were at the Time of the making of a Law, hath always been eſteemed the beſt Interpretation of that Law; and therefore, as we ſhew the Uſage to be conformable to what we now inſiſt upon, I humbly hope it will have a great Influence upon your Lordſhips, as to the Expoſition to be now put upon this Act of Parliament: It hath been ſaid, This Way of Proceeding tends to accuſe great Perſons of Honour, &c. ſome that are Dead, and ſome that are now Living; we ſhall not enter into ſo nice a Debate: it is ſufficient for us that it is proper and neceſſary Evidence for the Defence of our Client. It is a material Evidence in this Caſe, whether other Perſons have diſpoſed of theſe Offices, and have incurred any Penalty; if they have done it, I humbly apprehend that no Objection remains againſt our entring into the Evidence of that Kind. Whatever is your Lordſhips Judgment in Point of Law, it is material for your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether this noble Lord hath ſet this on foot of his own Accord, or hath not trod in the Paths of his noble Predeceſſors? Your Lordſhips will take it into your Conſideration, and whatever the Point of Law may happen to be, it muſt be ſaid, that if this noble Lord did err, he erred with his Predeceſſors.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I would not trouble your Lordſhips, if I did not think it neceſſary to inſiſt upon your Lordſhips admitting this Evidence: Indeed, if I thought it would impeach the Character or Reputation of any of the noble Lords, who have been my Predeceſſors, whether they be now dead or alive, I would undergo any Puniſhment rather than do it. But I hope it was innocent, both in them and me; and that its being done by Perſons of ſuch unblemiſhed Honour, will be one ſtrong Argument of its being ſo; and, my Lords, I proteſt their Example was the ſingle Reaſon with me for doing of it; and if it had not been done before, I would not have done it: This was the true Ground of what I have done. For what theſe Gentlemen ſay, my Lords, that this is not material, and that the Law muſt be proved by Law Books and Judgments, I thought the Common

Law

Law was common Uſage, and that which hath conſtantly and openly been done without being cenſured or blamed, cannot be contrary to Common Law. If this be not allowed, I am highly obliged to theſe Gentlemen, that they have not accuſed me for taking Money in many other Inſtances, relating to my Office; to inſtance in one only, upon the paſſing of every Patent there is a ſmall Fee due, and conſtantly paid to the Great Seal; if they had accuſed me of this, and called it criminal, I know not what to have ſaid to it, unleſs Uſage and Cuſtom had juſtified it; I claim it as a Right, and unleſs Uſage will prove the Right, I know no other Way. I own this is ſomething different: In that Caſe, I inſiſt on a particular Sum by Uſage: I do not inſiſt in this Caſe that there is a particular Sum due as a Fee, but that I had a Right, or Liberty, to accept of ſuch a Sum as the Party ſhould give: But, ſay the Gentlemen, this Evidence is to make other Perſons Criminal; That is very true, if this be a Crime. Theſe Gentlemen take it for granted; but whether it be a Crime or no, will be for your Lordſhips final Determination: And I hope your Lordſhips will not be of Opinion, that it is a Crime. If it ſhould come out to be in your Lordſhips Judgment a Crime, it will be a great Cenſure upon my Predeceſſors, who all, as it is well known by every Body, did the ſame Thing. But if this be underſtood to be a Matter, that is admitted to have been practiſed, and to need no formal Proof, I had rather let this Examination alone: It is uneaſy to me, to enter upon any thing that can draw a Reflection upon any Perſon: therefore I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, The Managers are accountable to the Commons for any Thing they admit without their Direction; therefore, unleſs they are ſatisfied and convinced that they ought to admit it, it is not to be expected for the Managers to do it. It is ſaid, that the Things offered are in Extenuation; that it would be a greater Guilt, if there were not former Examples to juſtify it: I apprehend for that Reaſon it is an improper Time to inſiſt upon this now: Becauſe Matters of Aggravation or Extenuation muſt come ſubſequent to your Lordſhips Determination on the Articles, and will be the Conſideration of your Lordſhips, when you come to conſider of the Judgment that is to be given. I have known by frequent Experience, in Proſecutions of a Criminal Nature, that where the Defendant hath been convicted, he hath been allowed to lay Circumſtances before the Court in Mitigation of the Puniſhment: And if, hereafter, this comes to be conſidered of in this Manner, the Managers will have an Opportunity to give a proper Anſwer thereto. If in this Anſwer he had inſiſted on it as an eſtabliſhed Fee ſupported by Cuſtom, and had claimed it as of Right, it had been proper to have examined Witneſſes in Support of that; but when he inſiſts upon it as a Matter of Diſcretion, and of Explanation of an Act of Parliament, we cannot admit it. It is not proper to give in Evidence that, which doth not make good the Defence in Anſwer to the Articles. We cannot admit a Thing of this Nature, which may be attended with great Inconveniencies. We do not know what may be grafted on ſuch an Admiſſion; therefore we beg Leave to ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Determination.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, It is ſaid very roundly, That this is an old doubtful Statute, and therefore you ought not to take Notice of it. As to the Doubtfulneſs of it, I believe it is too plain; as to the Obſoleteneſs of it, it is a Statute that is read every Year in the Court of Exchequer. And therefore whatever Doubts may be of this Matter at the Common Law, yet this Statute makes it plain. And I deſire the Councel for the Noble Lord to tell us, where any Statute is more plain and poſitive; and wherein they have ſhewn the leaſt Doubtfulneſs in the World, but rather object that it hath gone too far. Doth any Judge, in Point of Evidence, on an Indictment for Breach of a Statute-Law, permit Perſons to give Evidence, that others have been guilty of the ſame Facts, and that therefore it is no Breach of the Law? Suppoſe this is to be conſidered as doubtful, on Conſtruction of the Statute, what then is the common ordinary Method? It is well known, that the Jury find the Fact ſpecially, and it is referred to the Court for their Opinion on the Law. My Lords, give me Leave to mention how this Matter is; here is an Act of Parliament, a general Act, the Judges are to take Notice of it, it is plain and poſitive. The Councel make a Doubt on the Conſtruction of this Statute; it is inſiſted upon that other People have done it, and have not been puniſhed; and would ſuch a thing be ever permitted to be found by a Jury, or would any Regard be had to it if found? I apprehend the noble Lord, who hath been a great Maſter of Evidence in his Time, would not have permitted it to be done: they have ſhewn no Precedent for it: In its own Nature it is unreaſonable. Are we to examine into the particular Manner and Circumſtances of every particular Caſe of the ſeveral Perſons that are now either Dead or Living? It is unreaſonable, it is unprecedented, to offer ſuch Evidence; and I hope your Lordſhips will not admit of it.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, the Councel for the noble Lord take that for granted which we deny. The admitting theſe Witneſſes to be examined, is admitting that it is not a Crime. Reputation is of great Value, and great Care ought to be taken of it; and we are willing to take Care of the Reputation of the noble Lord's Predeceſſors. I am not a Lawyer, but I never heard that that was not a Crime, which an Act of Parliament ſays is ſo. And that this is a Crime, I beg Leave to remind your Lordſhips, that he himſelf declared ſo to the Maſters in Chancery, that they had bought their Places againſt Law. I take that to be a fair Confeſſion that his Opinion was, that it was a Crime.

Lord Lechmere. Before the Councel withdraw, I would have this Queſtion explained to me by the Councel of the noble Lord, whether this Practice be inſiſted on as a Proof of a Right in the Great Seal to take this as a Perquiſite, or whether it be offered as an Extenuation?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we inſiſt upon it in both Reſpects.

Then the Managers and Councel were order'd to withdraw; and after ſome Time, being called in again,

Lord Chief Juſt. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, It is their Lordſhips Judgment that you are at Liberty to proceed in your Evidence, as you were going on.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Roger Lewis may be called again.

Mr. Lewis called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire this Witneſs may be asked, how long he hath been a Deputy in the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies?

Mr. Lewis. About five and thirty Years.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Who was then in the Office?

Mr. Lewis. Mr. Henry Wynne.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How long did he continue in that Office?

Mr. Lewis. About Twelve Months.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Do you know who ſucceeded him?

Mr. Lewis. Mr. Roger Thompſon.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether any Preſent was made by Mr. Thompſon, on his Admiſſion into the Office?

Mr. Lewis. I do not know of any Preſent made by Mr. Thompſon.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. By Mr. Wynne, or Mr. Thompſon?

Mr. Lewis. No; but Mr. Wynne told me ——

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Is Mr. Wynne living or dead?

Mr. Lewis. He is Dead.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave to object to this, what a particular Perſon told him is not Evidence, we hope this ſhall not be admitted.

Mr. Lutwyche. They know this was never allowed.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If the Man be living, the Objection is good, but now he is dead, we hope it may be allowed.

Mr. Com. Serj. The Gentlemen object, that we are not at Liberty to ask what hath been declared concerning that Matter by a Perſon that is now dead; we humbly apprehend it is within the Rule of Evidence, and I muſt appeal to the Memory of your Lordſhips, whether it is not good Part of the Evidence that hath been given by the Managers.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, what we are giving Evidence of, is of a Thing tranſacted thirty five Years ago; the Parties are all dead: he is about to give you an Account of what he did, and was ſaid to him at that Time by his Maſter, in his tranſacting that Affair. If the Perſon that ſaid it were now alive, to be examined to it himſelf before your Lordſhips, it would not be Evidence without examining him; but if dead, what he ſaid concerning this Fact may be given in Evidence, it is concerning the Party's own Act, and what he told him at the Time it was doing. Therefore we hope they will not oppoſe this Evidence, which in the Nature of the Thing is all that poſſibly can be now given.

Mr. Soll. General. My Lords, I hope this is what your Lordſhips will not ſuffer to be done. I never knew the Sayings of a dead Man given in Evidence to prove a particular Fact: They have been only admitted in Proof of general Uſages and Cuſtoms; but as for a particular Fact, lying in the Knowledge of a particular Perſon, by his Death you have loſt your Evidence.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, if they will inſiſt upon it, we muſt withdraw.

Mr. Plummer. This Man here is upon his Oath; but the Evidence that he muſt give of the Saying of another, muſt be of a Saying not upon Oath.

Lord Trevor. If there be a Difference in Opinion between the noble Lord and the Managers, they muſt withdraw. But I don't ſee any Reaſon to withdraw. I will tell my Opinion, that ſuch an hearſay Evidence is no Evidence.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, whether he knows any Thing as to the Tranſaction of his own Knowledge?

Mr. Lewis. I know that Mr. Wynne, whether he had ſurrendred, or was going to ſurrender, I don't remember, but he told me ——

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, they are going on again in the ſame Way.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Do you know any Thing of your own Knowledge?

Mr. Lewis. I had Money in my Hands of Mr. Wynne's. He told me ——

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Evidence of this Sort is by your Lordſhips Judgment not to be permitted.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. He informs your Lordſhips, that he hath known this Office thirty five Years. Now, I deſire that he may declare what hath been the Uſage on Surrenders and Admittances into this Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, whether any Preſent, or Gratuity, hath been made to the great Seal?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. This is the ſame Thing again.

Mr. Soll. General. If Gentlemen put this general Queſtion with no other View but to draw out what your Lordſhips have determined to be no Evidence, we muſt oppoſe it. It is a plain Queſtion, Whether he knows of his own Knowledge that any Money was given? And we deſire he may be confined to his own Knowledge.

Earl of Macclesfield. The Gentlemen ſay, that as to Matters of Uſage, it is uſual to enquire what old Men have ſaid and declared. I apprehend this is a Matter of Uſage we are now inquiring after; but if your Lordships are of Opinion that this should not be asked, I believe he doth not know any Thing of his own Knowledge of the Money being actually paid to the great Seal.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we desire that Mr. William Oaker may be called.

Mr. Oaker sworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Oaker may be asked whether he knows of any Demand, or Claim, made upon the Admission, or Surrender, of the Clerk of the Custodies, and by whom?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, this Question is contrived in an odd Manner. The Question must arise upon the Fact, not antecedent to the Fact. The Question of any Claim before, should be whether he knows of any Money paid, and in what Manner?

Earl of Macclesfield. It is the stronger, if it is claimed and paid: But I apprehend, if it were only claimed, it is Evidence.

Mr. Oaker. I don't well understand the Question as it is put, but I remember in my Lord Cowper's first Time, in the Year 1710, that Office was transferred from Mr. Thompson to Mr. Edwards; I was then Secretary of the Lunaticks, and I remember I inquired of one or both of those Gentlemen, if any Present was made to my Lord on that Occasion, and was answered, that nothing had been usually given in the Case of that Office, and that they had satisfied my Lord thereof. Afterwards, when my Lord Cowper had the great Seal again, and I was again Secretary of the Lunaticks, his Lordship was pleased to observe to me, that he had suffer'd himself to be imposed upon in several Matters, when he had the Seal before, and instanced particularly in the Affair of transferring the Office of Clerk of the Custodies; and said he was very well satisfied those Gentlemen had imposed upon him, by assuring him that nothing had usually been given on transferring that Office; for he was well assured there had been Presents on that Occasion, and did not see any Reason why there should not: And his Lordship ordered me to enquire, as particularly as I could, what had been given, and by whom, that he might know what to do if a Thing of that Kind should happen again.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I believe this Gentleman was Servant to my Lord Cowper, when he was Chancellor last; I desire to know if any Vacancy of this Office happen'd in the last Time that he was Chancellor.

Mr. Oaker. There was a Vacancy in the last Time. I don't know what Sum of Money was given for it?

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I desire this Witness may be asked, if he ever knew that my Lord Cowper did take any Thing for the Surrender of this Place?

Mr. Oaker. I don't know, I believe he had nothing the first Time, but he thought himself imposed upon in it, and bid me inquire about it. As to the second Time, I never could inform my self what was done in it.

Lord Lechmere. I desire he may be asked, Who it was that surrendred this Place of Clerk of the Custodies, and to whom? Name them.

Mr. Oaker. The first was Mr. Thompson, who surrendred to Mr. Edwards, he surrendred to Mr. John Bennet, and Mr. John Bennet surrendred to Mr. Thomas Bennet.

Mr. Onslow. My Lords, I desire before Mr. Oaker goes, that he may explain himself which of those two Times it was that my Lord Cowper said he was imposed upon?

Mr. Oaker. It was the first Time.

Mr. Onslow. I desire to know if he took any Thing at either Time?

Mr. Oaker. I don't know, otherwise than as I have before declared.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Edward Dupper may be called.

Mr. Dupper sworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I desire that Mr. Dupper may be asked, whether he knows of any Sum of Money that hath been paid, or received on the Surrender, or Admission, of any Clerk of the Custodies?

Mr. Dupper. I did not see any Money paid: I did give my Lord Macclesfield an Account that there had been 250 Guineas paid upon a former Surrender of that Office before this Mr. Hammersley was admitted.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. From whom had you that Information?

Mr. Dupper. My Lords, I don't know how far I may be permitted to name that Person's Name.

Many Lords. Name him.

Earl of Macclesfield. Was it from one that had the Custody of the great Seal?

Mr. Dupper. Yes, my Lords.

Lord ——— Who was it from?

Mr. Dupper. I had it from my Lord Harcourt. My Lords, I cannot say I saw the money actually paid; neither can I say, that his Lordship received this money. But I was a Servant to my Lord Harcourt, and his Lordship kept an Account of the Profits of the Office of Lord High Chancellor in his Time, in his own Writing; and I made two Copies of that Account in a large hand-writing for his Lordship's Use; and I generally made two Copies of each, for fear one should be lost or mislaid when wanted. One of these Copies I kept by me, which I have here; in it is an account of the yearly Profits of that Office, and there is this particular; Item, of 250 Guineas received for the Surrender of the Office of Clerk of the Custodies, which I copied from a Memorandum, or Account of his Lordship's own hand-writing.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I don't know what he is going to do. I hope there is very little notice to be taken of what he hath said. A Man tells a Story that is a Servant: I hope no Credit will be given to what he says.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I desire he may inform your Lordships, when it was that he gave an Account to the Earl of Macclesfield, that so much money had been paid, and upon what Occasion it was?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Give an Account! he knows nothing.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I hope you will not think it an improper Question. He says, that he gave an Account, I desire to know what he he gave an Account of, and if he knows upon what Occaſion it was?

Mr. Dupper. My Lords, the Reaſon of my giving this Account was, There was a Diſcourſe between Mr. Cottingham, who was my Lord Macclesfield's Secretary, and my ſelf, about the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies. Mr. Cottingham told me, that Mr. Bennet was going to ſurrender his Place of Clerk of the Cuſtodies: I asked him, to whom? He told me, it was to his Neighbour Mr. Hammerſley. I anſwered, I am very glad to hear it; there will then be a piece of money for my Lord Chancellor. Mr. Cottingham ſaid, That is more than I know; was there ever any money paid upon the Transfer of this Office? I ſaid, Yes, I remembred there was, and I never knew any Offices or Places under the Great Seal transferred without an Acknowledgment paid to the Great Seal. He asked me what? I told him I had a Copy of the Account of the Profits of the Great Seal, kept by my Lord Harcourt in his Time, and that I would look into that Copy, and tell him what had been paid on the Surrender of that Office. I did look into that Copy, and the next day I told Mr. Cottingham, that 250 Guineas had been paid on the Surrender of that Office. And afterwards, and before the Transfer, I told my Lord Macclesfield of it.

Mr. Strange. When Mr. Hammerſley was named, I deſire to know if Mr. Cottingham did not at that time call him his Neighbour?

Mr. Dupper. I did not know Mr. Hammerſley at that time; but Mr. Cottingham called him his Neighbour.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, if he told my Lord Macclesfield of this before Mr. Bennet reſigned to Mr. Hammerſley?

Mr. Dupper. Yes, I did my Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire to ask him one Queſtion. I think he is pleaſed to ſay there is no Place under the Great Seal, but what an Acknowledgment is taken for: I deſire to know whether he himſelf hath not a Place given him by that noble Lord for his Life?

Mr. Dupper. No, my Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. Had you no Place at all given you?

Mr. Dupper. I have the Reverſion of a Place, which is not fallen as yet.

Mr. Lutwyche. What Place is that?

Mr. Dupper. The Sealer's Place.

Mr. Lutwyche. Do you enjoy that Place?

Mr. Dupper. No.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any Money given for that Place?

Mr. Dupper. No, Sir: It is what I had for fifteen Years Service. I was his Clerk, and I acted as his Steward, in Town and Country, a great many Years; and his Lordſhip was pleaſed to give me that Reverſion as a Reward for the Labour and Pains I took in his Service.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, how long after it was that he carried this Account to Mr. Cottingham, that he ſpeaks of, how long after he had found it?

Mr. Dupper. I don't exactly remember: But as near as I can gueſs, it was the next Day, the firſt time that I ſaw him afterwards.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether at that time he gave Satisfaction to Mr. Cottingham, that it ought to be inſiſted upon?

Mr. Dupper. I told him ſo much had been given for the Surrender of that Office, and I never knew of any Office under the Great Seal transferred without Money.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire Mr. Dupper may acquaint your Lordſhips what the yearly Value of that Office is, that was given to him?

Mr. Dupper. I never was in Poſſeſſion of it.

Mr. Lutwyche. Do you know what is the yearly Value of it?

Mr. Dupper. No.

Mr. Lutwyche. Can you give no Account of it?

Mr. Dupper. No: The Man hath been in Poſſeſſion of it, I believe, theſe threeſcore Years, and I believe he will live theſe threeſcore Years longer.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Laiton may be called.

Mr. Laiton ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether he was not formerly a Curſitor?

Mr. Laiton. I was a Curſitor almoſt three and forty Years.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire that he will inform your Lordſhips, whether any Money was paid, either by him, or any other?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave to underſtand your Lordſhips Reſolution, whether it extends to allow an Examination as to the ſelling of any other Offices not contained in the Articles?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we ſhall endeavour to prove that Acknowledgments have been anciently and uſually paid upon Admiſſions into all Offices under the Great Seal. And this is Part of this noble Lord's Defence, That it is uſual for the Great Seal to take Money for the transferring of thoſe Offices. This Witneſs was one of the Curſitors in the Court of Chancery; therefore I hope it is proper to give Evidence of Money given for thoſe Offices, as being Offices under the Great Seal. Therefore, my Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he hath known of any Money paid to the Great Seal upon the Surrender, or Admiſſion of any Curſitor?

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I ſubmit it whether it is proper for your Lordſhips to let them into this Evidence. I take it, that the immediate Queſtions before your Lordſhips are only upon two ſorts of Offices, one of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies, the other the Maſters in Chancery. Now whether your Lordſhips will let them into an Evidence of all the Offices of the Kingdom, which is very extenſive, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips Conſideration.

Mr. Plummer. Your Lordſhips obſerve, that we have not gone upon the 10*th* Article, where we have laid that he ſold ſeveral other Offices: conſidering the great Extenſiveneſs of it, and that it would draw this Tryal into a great length, we have waved it; and therefore ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether he ſhall make his Defence to any thing we have not yet given Evidence to.

Earl of Macclesfield. This would be to put a great difficulty upon me. The Charge againſt me being founded upon a Suppoſition, that the taking taking money upon admitting Persons into Offices in the Court of Chancery is criminal; part of my Defence is, that the constant practice of my Predecessors shews the general Opinion to be otherwise; and therefore I have by my Answer insisted upon it generally, that not only for the one particular Office of the Clerk of the Custodies, or Masters in Chancery, but for all other Offices under the Great Seal, money hath been given; therefore whether the Office for which I prove the money to be given, be one of the Offices charged in the Articles, and proceeded upon, or another not charged, or charged and waved, it will be the same thing. The Argument is the same with respect to the foundation of the Accusation, if in all other Offices, of which Persons now living can give an Account, monies have been taken without Crime, and without Blame; by parity of Reason it may be taken in these: I offer this Evidence, not to shew I am not criminal with respect to the Cursitors Offices, their waving that general Article which comprises them, admits it; but to make out that Branch of the Induction, in order to infer from the whole my not being criminal in the Particulars they do proceed upon; for if it was no Crime to take money from the Cursitors, and all the rest, besides the Masters in Chancery and Clerk of the Custodies, it is no more so to take it from them: If this Objection be allowed, the Proof, which in its full Latitude would be of great Extent, and go to all my Predecessors within 50 or 60 Years, will be confined to a very narrow compass, when restrain'd to what Account can be given in only two Sorts of Offices, by Persons who saw the money paid, and happen to be still alive. Besides, for strengthening that Argument from other Instances, I have in another Part of my Answer insisted, that other Persons of great Wisdom and Honour, have likewise, without Scruple, and without Censure, disposed of other Offices for money; that this hath been constantly practised in the Disposal of all Sorts of Offices in Westminster-Hall, money hath been taken for them all along; this Proof I must be cut off from too, if I am to give Evidence only of what was done in the case of those Offices for which they proceed against me: I hope therefore the Gentlemen will not oppose the going on to make the Proof proposed by my Councel.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, if it be put in this general manner of all other Courts, and in all other Instances, we apprehend it will be a very extraordinary Examination. A Person is charged with a particular Charge of one Fact, and he would examine to another, with which he is not charged. This is besides the Issue, and not before your Lordships. Here is a Charge by the Commons of Great Britain, and an Answer and Defence to that, which can go only to those particular Offices charged. Now to introduce an Evidence of this Nature, is exceeding any Rule or Instance that hath been ever heard of. If they apprehend by proposing and insisting on it in this High Court of Judicature, they shall be allowed to proceed in a method wholly new, we can't tell the Consequence of such an Allowance; and it is to no purpose for the Managers to come prepared to examine to a particular Fact stated between us, when there may be ten thousand things insisted on that are not in Issue.

Lord Viscount Townshend. I can't say this is within the Rule your Lordships laid down. If it is insisted upon, the Councel must withdraw.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I don't know whether this will not go through a great part of my Defence, which will be to shew that other Offices have been disposed of by the Master of the Rolls, the Chief Justice, and other Judges. This is in my Answer: The Commons had Notice of it; and they have joyned Issue upon it. I wonder to hear it said they have not joyned Issue, when in the Answer it is insisted upon, and they have replyed thereto. This is a Thing that those Gentlemen are very well aware of; it is so general and universal a Thing, that every body knows of it. I don't know whether it is intended to make any Distinction between this Case, and what is done in other Cases; if they do, I would be glad to hear it; if they do not, then I would beg your Lordships Determination upon it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we are not to declare our Opinion, whether there is any Difference, or not; the Question is in Point of Evidence.

Mr. Sol. General. My Lords, I don't apprehend that we have joyned Issue on every Thing that the Noble Earl hath thought fit to put in his Answer. The Commons have charged him with several Crimes: He hath answered to those Crimes: The Commons reply, that they are ready to make good their Charge. By this, Issue is joined upon every Thing in the Charge; but not upon every foreign Thing that he hath put into his Answer. We insist that he is not to give Evidence of the Sale of any other Offices, but of those that he is particularly charged with. As to the Cursitors Office, and other Offices that he is not charged with, we say he is to give no Evidence.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, because it is insisted upon, that whatever this Noble Lord hath said in his Answer, we have replyed to; I would observe that the very Replication takes Notice of this very Thing, and was one of the Things considered of by the Commons, and therefore the Reply is, "That he hath endeavoured to "evade the Enquiries into his own Crimes, by "insinuating Facts not material to the matters "charged." And therefore, my Lords, we insist that he may not enquire into those matters which we have not charged.

Mr. Com. Serj. I don't know whether I may be at Liberty to add, that I humbly apprehend, that what the Gentlemen of the House of Commons now insist upon, is contradicting your Lordships Resolution already taken.

Then the Managers and Councel were order'd to withdraw, and being afterwards called in again, and returned.

Lord Chief Just. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, The Lords have resolved, that the Councel for the Earl of Macclesfield be not permitted to give Evidence touching the Sale of the Office of Cursitors, for that no Evidence hath been given in Relation thereto by the Managers of the House of Commons.

Mr. Ser. Probyn. Then (if it be your Lordships Pleasure) we beg leave to call one Witness more, in Opposition to the Evideuce given by Mr. Thomas Bennet, in Relation to a Sum of money paid by him upon the Surrender of his Office of Clerk of the Custodies; he gave your Lordships an Account that he had paid the Sum of Sixty four Pounds, (besides the Sum of One hundred and five Pounds, which he at first agreed to give the Great Seal) upon his Surrender of that Office. Now, my Lords, we shall shew your Lordships, that no part of that Sum of Sixty four Pounds was really paid to the Great Seal, as Mr. Bennet ſeems to inſinuate, but was all laid out in the Fees and Expences of paſſing his Patent through the ſeveral Offices that are proper upon that Occaſion. And to this End we deſire that Mr. Tench may be called.

Mr. Tench ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Tench may inform your Lordſhips, if he was imployed in taking out the Patent for Mr. Thomas Bennet, upon his Surrender of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies?

Mr. Tench. My Lords, I was imployed by Mr. Thomas Bennet to ſue out the Patent, and I paid the Fees of every Office of paſſing the Patent, which comes to between 60 and 70 l.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire he may tell us what Officer he is?

Mr. Tench. I am Clerk of the Patents to the Attorney General, and Deputy Clerk of the Patents in Chancery.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, what part of thoſe Fees are paid to the Great Seal?

Mr. Tench. There is a Dividend of the money ariſing from the Patents, of this 1 l. 8 s. 4 d. and 3 s. went to the Great Seal.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether any more came to the Great Seal out of the 64 l. than 1 l. 11 s. 4 d?

Mr. Tench. I don't know that there is any more of the Dividend of the Patent. The reſt went amongſt others for their ſeveral Fees at the ſeveral Offices.

Mr. Com. Serj. I won't trouble your Lordſhips to ask to whom the reſt of the money belongs, but whether the Remainder is paid over to other Offices?

Mr. Tench. I don't know that any thing is paid to the Great Seal, upon paſſing the Patent Office, but the Dividend of 1 l. 11 s. 4 d.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, whether the Remainder is paid to other Offices?

Mr. Tench. Yes, to other Offices, to the Hanaper Office, the Secretary's Office, the Signet, and Privy Seal.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we ſhall trouble your Lordſhips with no further Evidence on this Article: But beg your Lordſhips Favour to begin our Evidence on the 5*th*, and other Articles.

Mr. Sandys. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, where he found the Warrant for paſſing the Patent at that Time?

Mr. Tench. I had the Warrant from the Secretary's Office.

Mr. Sandys. I deſire he may be asked, if he knows how it came there, and by whoſe Direction, if he knows who procured it?

Mr. Tench. My Lords, I drew a Petition by Mr. Bennet's Direction, to the Secretary of State, upon that the Petition was referred to the Attorney General, and upon his Report, there was a Warrant. I know of no other Proceedings relating to it.

Mr. Sandys. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, at whoſe Inſtance he drew up that Petition?

Mr. Tench. I drew it up at Mr. Thomas Bennet's Requeſt.

Mr. Sandys. To what Purpoſe was that Petition?

Mr. Tench. The Petition recited that the Patent was granted to his Brother, and that upon his Brother's ſurrendring, it might be granted to him.

Mr. Sandys. It is the laſt Petition we deſire to be informed of, what the Purport of that was; not the Petition of Mr. John Bennet, when he ſurrendred to Mr. Thomas Bennet, but the Petition of Mr. Thomas Bennet, when he ſurrendred to Mr. Hammerſley?

Mr. Tench. It was a Petition reciting the Grant to Mr. Thomas Bennet, and that he might reſign to Mr. Hammerſley's Uſe, who was a Perſon well affected to his Majeſty and the Government.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we now proceed to the other Articles, which relate to the Preſents made by the Maſters in Chancery to the Earl of Macclesfield.

Upon this the Houſe adjourned to the next Morning Ten a Clock.

Thurſday the 13*th of* May, 1725. The Sixth Day.

The Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, and the two Proclamations being made as on the former Days:

LORD Chief Juſt. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, you may go on with your Evidence.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we beg leave to lay before your Lordſhips ſome inſtances, where, upon former Admiſſions of Maſters in Chancery, Sums of Money have from time to time been taken by the Great Seal. We deſire Mr. Meller may be called again.

Accordingly Mr. Meller appeared.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire Mr. Meller may be asked, whether he knows of any Sum of money paid to the Great Seal, upon the Admiſſion of a Maſter in Chancery, and what Sum?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, I humbly apprehend, that the Subjects of Great Britain are not compellable in any caſe to give an Anſwer to any matter that may be to their Prejudice. I ſpeak it with the greateſt Submiſſion to your Lordſhips. For my part, I am very unwilling to do any thing that may any ways leſſen the Security of the Subject, therefore I humbly hope your Lordſhips will not compel me to give an Anſwer to any Queſtion of this Nature. I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Judgment.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, the Queſtion he is asked is a general Queſtion, whether he knows of any money paid to the Great Seal by any Maſter in Chancery upon his admiſſion. Whether he knows, or doth not know it?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg leave to acquaint the Houſe of the Circumſtances of Mr. Meller, from whence the Objection riſes. He was formerly a Maſter, but before the late Act of Parliament he quitted that Office, and hath no Indemnification, demnification, as the preſent Maſters have by that Act. Therefore, as I apprehend, his Objection is, that he can't give an Anſwer to this Queſtion, without ſubjecting himſelf to a Penalty, and accuſing himſelf of an Offence againſt the Law.

Mr. Lutwyche. This general Queſtion tends to make him accuſe himſelf, and ſubject himſelf to a Penalty.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I would gladly know whether theſe Gentlemen object to this Queſtion or not; if they object themſelves to it, they have a right ſo to do, and to offer their Reaſons, and they muſt be left to your Lordſhips Judgment. But they have no Right to inſtruct a Witneſs.

Mr. Lutwyche. I never endeavoured to inſtruct any Witneſs. It is very well known I never attempted any ſuch thing; and that noble Lord knows it. I am now here, not as Councel, but as one of the Managers for the Houſe of Commons, and by their Command, and ſo have more Reaſon to take Notice of this Reflection. We do not inſtruct Witneſſes, this is no ſuch thing. It is an Objection which we have a Right to make. We have done it already, and have had your Lordſhips Determination upon it. It is not ſo very long ago, but the noble Lord may remember this very Queſtion was directly asked of Mr. Bennet, and then refuſed; the next Day asked again by a ſide-wind, whether he knew any, and what money had been given for the Place? and rejected by your Lordſhips; and then a Queſtion was asked, How much he knew the Place ſold for? and your Lordſhips likewiſe refuſed that: Here now is a Queſtion asked of a man that hath been a Maſter in Chancery, and not indemnified by the laſt Act, whether in Effect he paid any money for his Office? Your Lordſhips thought this induced a penalty, becauſe you thought it neceſſary to paſs an Act of Parliament to indemnify the preſent Maſters; but it is well known it doth not extend to thoſe who were Maſters before; and therefore as there is a Penalty annexed to it, he ought not to anſwer this Queſtion. Beſides, for the ſake of our Proceedings, it ought not to be anſwered, and we have a Right thus to interpoſe, that when your Lordſhips have refuſed the ſame thing in another man, the ſame is not to be inſiſted upon again.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, it is the Duty of the Managers to take Notice of the Behaviour of the Lord impeached. Whether he apprehends that he hath a Right to controul the Managers in this Houſe, and whether that ariſes from the Seat he enjoys, your Lordſhips will conſider the Conſequences of this Behaviour. When the firſt Day we were told, that we were working up the Witneſſes, and now that we are inſtructing them, whence could this Lord have this Imagination, but from his own former Practice?

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, as to that Gentleman that thought himſelf reflected upon, he greatly miſtakes me. I did not intend to reflect upon him as going to inſtruct the Witneſs in his Evidence; I believe him as far from it as any man in England. I know him to be a perſon of too much Honour; and I had not the leaſt Thought when I ſpoke it, of his inſtructing a Witneſs in that Senſe. But here a Witneſs is making ſome Difficulty in anſwering a Queſtion, and I thought that that Gentleman who ſpoke firſt, was ſtating that which made the Witneſs's Objection; which I apprehended did not belong to the Managers to do. That is what I meant by inſtructing. The Queſtion that is asked is, whether he hath known of any money given to the Great Seal, upon an Admiſſion of a Maſter in Chancery? Say they, he was a Maſter in Chancery himſelf, therefore it may include his giving money upon his being admitted: But be that ſo, he may know of other Perſons beſides himſelf that gave money. My Queſtion therefore is general, whether he knows of any money given to the Great Seal on Admiſſion of a Maſter in Chancery? The Queſtion your Lordſhips reſolved was as to Mr. Bennet himſelf, and confined to his ſingle Office; and had I asked Mr. Meller what he had given on his Admiſſion to his own Office, it had been another matter, and within your Lordſhips Reſolution. But the Queſtion that is now asked, includes what he knows hath been given by other Maſters; therefore he may give an Anſwer without charging himſelf. If he anſwers that he doth not know of any money given by any other Maſter except himſelf, then it will come to the Queſtion the managers would bring it to. In the mean time give me leave to ſay, that thoſe Gentlemen, by being Managers of the Houſe of Commons, have not a Right of treating Perſons in a different manner than what they ſhould do if they were not Managers. That that Gentleman ſhould ſay, that what I ſpoke about inſtructing of Witneſſes, ariſeth from a Practice of my own, is Language unbecoming the Dignity of your Lordſhips Bar. Is this a Way of treating Mankind? Is this a fit method of carrying on a Proſecution? Is this decent ſpeaking before ſo auguſt a Judicature as this? What I ſaid of inſtructing a Witneſs, imported no faulty way of Inſtruction. —— (After a ſhort Pauſe) I have a great deal of Preparation not to be diſturbed at any Expreſſions that fall upon this Occaſion. It is a faulty Way of inſtructing a Witneſs, to tell him what he ſhall ſay; but to tell him he hath a legal Objection to a Queſtion that is asked, I know no Crime in that. My Lords, I beg Pardon for taking ſo much Notice of this matter; but I inſiſt upon an Anſwer to this Queſtion, whether he knows of any money given to the Great Seal, on an Admiſſion of a Maſter in Chancery? He may anſwer affirmatively, without at all affecting himſelf; and I ſubmit, whether he ought not to do it.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, if the Councel for the Noble Lord have done, I beg Leave to reply. The Noble Lord ſays, that this Gentleman may poſſibly anſwer, and not accuſe himſelf. But if by the Anſwer he may accuſe himſelf, it is a Reaſon why he ſhould not anſwer. The method propoſed, that he may ſay, he doth not know of any but himſelf, it is accuſing himſelf. As for the other Point about inſtructing Witneſſes, it is not our Witneſs, but his own Witneſs, who refuſes to anſwer.

Mr. Onſlow. The Managers cannot but obſerve the indecent Behaviour of this Lord, and his unworthy manner of treating us. What we ſay here, we are ready to ſay any where. We do not think the Lord at the Bar ſhould be directing the Managers, as if he ſat in his Place as Judge: If we do any thing unbecoming, we are ſubject to your Lordſhips Judgment. We appear not here as common Proſecutors, and are not to be treated as common Councel by him, as he would have treated Councel in another Place. We are here Advocates for all the Commons of Great Britain, to demand Juſtice againſt this Earl; and ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether he is to treat us in this unbecoming manner. As for the Queſtion, the very Reaſon he now gives for asking it, i the ſome that was given by him for examining Mr. Bower, and your Lordſhips then over-ruled it. It is only by a nice Wind aſking a Queſtion of a Witneſs the Anſwer whereto will unavoidably charge him with a Crime: He cannot anſwer without charging himſelf. This Lord hath laid a Trap for the Witneſs to accuſe himſelf. He ſays he may anſwer that he knows nothing of any money given by any Maſter but himſelf; which is directly laying that he himſelf hath given money. We hope therefore this Queſtion ſhall not be aſked; and we inſiſt upon the Objection.

Mr. Palmer. In Duty to the Houſe of Commons, I think my ſelf obliged to take Notice of the ſtrange Behaviour of this Lord in this Inſtance. According to your Lordſhips own Rule, tho' he ſits within the Bar, yet he is not a Judge; and therefore I muſt beg for my ſelf, in the Names of the Managers, and in the Names of all the Commons of Great Britain, that no ſuch Language or Behaviour be again uſed; if it ſhould, we cannot bear it, but muſt retire.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire the general Queſtion that I have propoſed may be asked; I do not know what is your Lordſhips Pleaſure; I think I have a Right to have it anſwered.

Mr. Plummer. I object to the Lord's going on. The Lord hath anſwered; we have replyed; and I inſiſt upon it he hath not a Right to ſpeak any more.

Duke of Argyle. I hope they will withdraw.

Ordered to withdraw.

Then the Managers and Councel withdrew, and being called in again, and returned:

Lord Chief Juſt. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, the Queſtion propoſed by the Noble Earl to Mr. Meller was, whether he knew of any money paid to the Great Seal by any Maſter on his Admiſſion; and Mr. Meller inſiſting that he had been a late Maſter in Chancery, and was not obliged to anſwer the Queſtion, becauſe it might tend to accuſe himſelf; the Lords upon Debate are of Opinion, that he is not bound to anſwer that Queſtion.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, then we deſire he may be asked, whether he knows of any Sum of money paid by any other Perſon, except himſelf, upon the Admiſſion of any Maſter?

Mr. Com. Serj. I would not preſume to ask any Queſtion that is improper, I underſtand your Lordſhips Reſolution to be, that we are not to ask the general Queſtion of Mr. Meller, becauſe it might affect himſelf; this Queſtion, we think, will not; whether he knows of any Sum of money given upon the Admiſſion of any other Maſter?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we ſubmit it, whether this Queſtion differs at all in Conſequence; tho' it be not in the ſame Words, yet it is to the ſame Effect: It is in other Words to ask the ſame Queſtion over again. We hope they will not give your Lordſhips this Trouble.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, the Queſtion implies that he gave money himſelf.

Lord Lechmere. If the Councel would explain themſelves more particularly, name the Maſter, the Perſon who received it, or any other particular Fact; then it will appear whether that be a proper Queſtion.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we humbly apprehend, that we are at Liberty to ask this Queſtion in the Form propoſed, otherwiſe we ſhall in a great Meaſure be precluded from the juſt Defence of the Noble Earl. We could not preſume to ask theſe Witneſſes beforehand, who were the Perſons that gave, or the particular Perſons that received; but as theſe Perſons have been in the Office, and muſt know the Nature of admitting the Maſters in Chancery; we hope they will explain it in their Evidence, and name the particular Perſons, who either gave, or received Money upon that Occaſion. We are not proper to ask more particularly.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I ſhall be very loth to give any Diſtaſte to this Honourable Houſe, therefore I beg Leave to know, whether or no we have Liberty to ask this Queſtion, and whether your Lordſhips Reſolution extends to it? I humbly take it, we are at Liberty to ask the Queſtion, and the Witneſs is not obliged to anſwer, if he apprehends that as the Queſtion is formed he cannot anſwer without an Inconvenience to himſelf. I would not willingly ask any Queſtion that I thought the Houſe would think improper.

Lord Trevor. If the Noble Lord inſiſts upon this Queſtion, it is proper that he ſhould name ſome Perſon, concerning whom he would ask; otherwiſe, it is indirectly to overthrow your Lordſhips Reſolution.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I am very unfortunate in this Matter. I would ask him the Queſtion in ſuch a Manner, as ſhould not carry any the leaſt Imputation on him: but if I ſhould firſt name one Maſter, and afterwards another, in ſo great a number of Maſters, it would be tedious; I only ask in ſhort, what he knows of any Money taken by the great Seal for, or on the Admiſſion of other Maſters? I don't ask him concerning himſelf, but only concerning other Maſters; Whether he knows any thing of the Tranſactions of other Maſters Admiſſion beſides his own? I hope your Lordſhips will think this may be asked, with this Explanation and Declaration, that it don't extend to any thing relating to himſelf; but only whether he knows any thing concerning any Money paid by any other Perſons? and to name them particularly.

Lord Chief Juſt. King. You hear the Queſtion.

Mr. Meller. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that I ſhould anſwer to the Queſtion as it is now form'd? My Lords, I don't know, or remember, that ever I had a Diſcourſe with any Maſter about what he gave, or what he was to give, for any Place; except I have heard Dr. Eddisbury ſay——

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we object to this as not being Evidence, but only hearſay.

Mr. Meller. Except Dr. Eddisbury, I don't know one indeed.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Lovibond may be called.

Mr. Lovibond called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we hope that Mr. Lovibond, being one of the preſent Maſters, and conſequently within the Indempnity of the late Act of Parliament, may be examined, as to what happened in his Caſe: And we deſire that he may be asked what Sum of Money was paid to the Great Seal, on his being admitted a Maſter in Chancery?

Mr. Lovibond. My Lords, as to that Tranſaction, it is many Years ago, above twelve Years ago, I will recollect what I know of it to the beſt of my Remembrance. My Lords, I never had any Treaty in that Affair with the Great Seal, nor with any Officer belonging to the Great Seal; nor did I employ any Body in it. But there was an Acquaintance of mine, a Maſter in Chancery, ſince deceaſed, who apprehending it to be for my Service, without my Knowledge tranſacted it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Who was it?

Mr.

Mr. Lovibond. Mr. Browning, He came to me, and told me, I have ſettled the whole Matter, you muſt be ſworn in this Night, and you muſt ſend to Mr. Cottingham or Mr. Appleby, then Officers under the Great Seal, 700 l. in Money or Bank Bills. I did ſend it that Night, and was then ſworn in.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be particular as to the Time: It is neceſſary he ſhould be certain.

Mr. Lovibond. Mr. Browning ſaid, he had ſettled it with the great Seal, that I ſhould be ſworn in that Night; my Lord Harcourt was then Chancellor.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, Whether he was admitted upon a Death or a Surrender?

Mr. Lovibond. I was admitted upon a Surrender.

Mr. Strange. By whom?

Mr. Lovibond. Mr. Pitt.

E. of Strafford. Before the Witneſs goes, I deſire to ask him how much he gave to Mr. Pitt upon his Surrendring?

Mr. Lovibond. It was 2000 l.

L. Harcourt. My Lords, If the Gentleman is not gone, I deſire to ask him a Queſtion or two.

Mr. Lovibond called again.

L. Harcourt. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, Whether he was worth ſo much Money as to pay 2700 l. of his own Money at that Time?

Mr. Lovibond. Yes, my Lords, and much more.

L. Harcourt. I deſire he may be asked, Whether he paid it out of his own Money, or out of the Suitors Money?

Mr. Lovibond. I paid it out of my own Money.

L. Harcourt. I deſire he may be asked, Whether Mr. Pitt, at the Time of his Admiſſion, transferred and actually delivered over to him all the Money of the Suitors that then was in his Hands?

Mr. Lovibond Mr. Pitt, to the beſt of my Belief, delivered over every Thing that was in his Hands to me.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We deſire that Mr. Cottingham may be called again.

Mr. Cottingham called.

Mr. Serj Probyn My Lords, We deſire that Mr. Cottingham may be asked, Whether he knows any thing of any Tranſaction relating to the Payment of any Sum of Money on the Admiſſion of Mr. Holford.

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, if I remember right, there was 800 l. paid.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How long ago?

Mr. Cottingham. It is ſeveral Years ago: There was 800 l. or 800 Guineas given or paid on his Admiſſion, ſeveral Years ago.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. To whom?

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, Sir Richard Holford deſired me to recommend his Son to the noble Lord that then had the Great Seal.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Who was it?

Mr. Cottingham. The Lord Harcourt, Sir Richard Holford was my old Friend and Acquaintance: I accordingly did recommend him; Mr. Holford came under a good Character to my Lord Harcourt; my Lord agreed to admit him, but he firſt deſired to know whether he had any Eſtate in Poſſeſſion ſufficient to anſwer the Suitors Money? Upon my ſaying this to Sir Richard Holford, Sir Richard ſaid, He had none in Poſſeſſion, but agreed to ſettle an Eſtate upon his Son: and to the beſt of my Remembrance, it was either 800 l. or 800 Guineas that was given on his Admiſſion, for the Uſe of my Lord Harcourt.

L. Lechmere. To whom was it paid?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't ſay whether it was paid to me, or to Mr. Appleby.

Dr. Sayer. Who carried the Propoſal?

Mr. Cottingham. I carried the Propoſal. Sir Richard Holford, as I told you, being my Friend and Acquaintance, deſired me to do it: Accordingly I tranſacted the whole Matter; being an upper Secretary, it was left to me.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire to ask this Witneſs one Queſtion as to this Matter. He ſays, That Mr. Holford was recommended as a Man of a good Character; I deſire to know whether he hath not ever ſince maintained that good Character?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, he hath made an admirable good Maſter as ever I knew; and hath executed his Office with as much Honour and Integrity as any Maſter. I never heard any Complaint againſt him in my Life.

Mr. Lutwyche. Can you recollect who paid the Money, Mr. Holford, or Sir Richard Holford?

Mr. Cottingham. Sir Richard, I believe: I can't recollect. He was a Young Man, I preſume, Sir Richard Holford, his Father, paid the Money.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, whether it was on a Death or Surrender?

Mr. Cottingham. As I told you before, It was on a Surrender: Upon the Surrender of Sir Robert Legard, If I remember right.

L. Harcourt. My Lords, If that Witneſs is not gone, and the Councel for the Earl, and the Managers for the Houſe of Commons have done with him, I deſire to ask him, If he can tell whether any Account was taken of the Suitors Money by his Predeceſſor, and whether all the Suitors Money was delivered up by Sir Robert Legard to Mr. Holford at the Time of his Admiſſion?

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, I believe it was. But I was not privy to that, I did not tranſact that Matter; I have heard that an Account was made up.

E. of Strafford. I would not ask the ſame Queſtion twice; I think no Body hath asked it already; I deſire to know, If he knows of his own Knowledge, what was given to Sir Robert Legard for his Surrender?

Mr. Cottingham. I know nothing of it.

L. Harcourt. My Lords, If I might have your Lordſhips Indulgence, in order to have this Matter a little further explained, I deſire Mr. Holford himſelf, or Mr. Appleby, or both of them may be called.

Mr. Holford called.

L. Harcourt. I deſire to know of Mr. Holford, Whether at the Time of his Admiſſion, when he was ſworn Maſter, Sir Robert Legard transferred and delivered over to him all the Effects of the Suitors?

Mr. Holford He did, my Lords.

L. Harcourt. I desire to ask him, Whether the Money, that it was said he presented to the great Seal on his Admission, was his Father's Money, or his Money, or whether it was out of the Suitor's Money?

Mr. Holford. My Father paid it before any thing was delivered to me.

E. of Strafford. I desire to ask the Gentleman this Question, What Money he paid to Sir Robert Legard on his Admission to his Place?

Mr. Holford. My Lords, I did not give it my self; I can tell your Lordships what I believe was given, and I have some Reason to think I know the Truth; I believe it was 2000 l.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I desire he may be asked, How long it was after his Admission before these Accompts and Effects were delivered over to him?

Mr. Holford. My Lords, When I came to my Lord Harcourt to be sworn in, my Lord Harcourt had an Account delivered there of what was in Sir Robert Legard's Hands. My Lord Harcourt took the Paper in his Hand, and asked me, If I was satisfied to be charged with that? I told him, Yes. I was then sworn in, and a Day or two after the Things were delivered over to me by Sir Robert Legard.

Mr. John Bennet called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I desire he may be asked, What Money was paid by him to the great Seal on his Admission?

Mr. Bennet. I gave Mr. Woodford the Secretary of the great Seal at that Time 500 l. I don't know that it was given to the great Seal; I gave it with that Design.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When was it?

Mr. J. Bennet. About two or three Days before I was admitted.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When?

Mr. J. Bennet. It was in March, 1716.

Mr Serj. Probyn. Who was Chancellor then?

Mr. J. Bennet. My Lord Cowper was Chancellor.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether was it paid before his Admission?

Mr. J. Bennet. It was paid before my Admission.

Mr Com. Serj. I desire he would inform your Lordships, Whether he came in upon a Surrender or a Death?

Mr. J. Bennet. It was upon a Surrender.

L. Ch. J. King. Upon the Surrender of whom?

Mr. J. Bennet. Of Mr. Medlicot.

L. Bathurst. I desire he may be asked, Whether he paid it out of his own Money?

Mr. J. Bennet. It was my own Money.

L. Bathurst. I desire he may be asked, Whether he had any Account of what was in the former Master's Hands, and when delivered over to him?

Mr. J. Bennet. The Effects were all deliver'd over to me in a Week's Time, except some very small Matters.

L. Bathurst. What was the Money that was given to your Predecessor?

Mr. J. Bennet. 3000 l.

L. Bathurst. Was that paid out of the Suitors Money, or out of your own?

Mr. J. Bennet. It was paid out of my own Money.

Sir Thomas Gery called.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, The Question that I shall propose to Sir Thomas Gery, is under the Apprehension that I mentioned before, that we are at Liberty within the Meaning of your Lordships Resolution to propose it, he being at Liberty to answer or not to answer, if the Question carry any Imputation upon him. I would not ask a Question that is improper: I desire that Sir Thomas Gery will inform your Lordships what he knows hath been paid to the great Seal, upon the Admission of a Master in Chancery?

Sir Tho. Gery. My Lords, I never did know, of my own Knowledge, of any Sum paid to the Hands of any Lord Chancellor whatsoever.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I desire he may answer the Question, Whether he hath known any Sum of Money paid to the Use of the great Seal, or of my Lord-Keeper or Lord-Chancellor, upon the Admission of any Master?

Sir Thomas Gery. I can't tell how that may affect me; I refer that to your Lordships. I think I am not bound to answer.

E. of Macclesfield. I think he said, He doth not know of any Money paid to a Lord Chancellor. Doth he intend to include Lord-Keeper?

Sir Thomas Gery. Neither Lord-Keeper, nor Lord-Chancellor.

E. of Macclesfield. It may be, not into the Hands of a Lord-Chancellor or Lord-Keeper. I desire he may be asked, If he hath not known it paid to the Use of the Lord-Chancellor or Lord-Keeper?

Sir Tho. Gery. That, I hope, I shall not be obliged to answer. I submit that to your Lordships.

M. Serj. Probyn. If the Gentleman is not pleased to give a more particular Answer, we must submit.

L. Harcourt. I desire to ask this Witness one Question, which will not draw him into any Inconvenience, Whether ever he was required in any Lord-Chancellor's or Lord-Keeper's Time, to make up an Account of the Suitors Money, and whether ever he did so?

Sir Tho. Gery. Yes, I did it three several Times; once in my Lord's Cowper's Time; and when the noble Lord that asks me the Question was in that place, I did the like; and I did it again when my Lord Cowper was Chancellor. At all those Times I gave a particular Account of the Sums of Money in my Hands, the Time it came in, and how it was disposed of, and the distinct Securities, in distinct Columns.

E. of Strafford. He says twice in my Lord Cowper's Time: I take it, he means both the Times that my Lord Cowper was Chancellor?

Sir Thomas Gery. Yes, my Lords; and the same in my Lord Harcourt's Time.

L. Harcourt. I desire he may be asked, Whether all the rest of the Masters did so as well as himself?

Sir Thomas Gery. I believe they did; I have heard them all declare so.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We have now called all the living Witnesses that are willing or compellcompellable to ſpeak to this Article. We have a great many other Witneſſes that would ſpeak to this, as a conſtant Uſage time out of Mind: But we apprehend it to be againſt your Lordſhips Reſolution to call and examine any Witneſſes but to what they can ſpeak of their own Knowledge, and them we have produced. We ſhall now beg leave to proceed to prove, That the Offices in the Court of Chancery are increaſed in their Value beyond what they were formerly, that not only theſe, but all other Offices, as they have increaſed in Value, have increaſed in the Price; all Offices have riſen in Value, and the Price given in this Inſtance, is no more than in Proportion to the Prices given for others.

Mr. Common Serj. We apprehend, my Lords, it is ſo notorious, that all Sorts of Offices have riſen in their Value, that a very ſmall Evidence will be ſufficient. We have a great many Witneſſes to this purpoſe, we will only call ſome few. We deſire Mr. Steele may be called.

Mr. Steele ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire to know before they proceed, Whether they deſign to ask as to thoſe Offices your Lordſhips gave them Direction laſt Night not to ask to. Your Lordſhips gave them Directions not to ask any Queſtions, but to the particular Offices mentioned in the Articles; this is a Piece of Dexterity to elude that Reſolution.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, Whether this Attempt is not directly the ſame as that which was over-ruled Yeſterday. If the Witneſs is to give an Account whether the Price of the Curſitor's Office, or other Offices have riſen, they muſt then ſhew that they were ſold; which is the very Queſtion your Lordſhips determined they ſhould not ask to.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We were then directed by your Lordſhips not to prove any Money was paid to the Great Seal for any other Offices, but thoſe particularly mentioned in the Articles. We don't pretend now to ask as to the Payment of Money to the Great-Seal, but only whether Offices in General have not much advanced in their Prices?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, It is extraordinary Uſage to tell us of Offices in General; there are private Offices, there are Offices in other Courts in Weſtminſter Hall. We apprehend your Lordſhips Determination is ſo ſtrong againſt what is now attempted, that they would not urge it, unleſs they thought that the Managers had forgot every Thing that happened.

Mr. Common Serj. My Lords, The Queſtion we ask is, as to Employments in General, Offices in the Law, or any other Offices; we deſire to inform your Lordſhips in General, that the Value of all Employments, not of the Law only, hath riſen.

E. of Macclesfield. I will inform your Lordſhips how the Matter is. I believe this Gentleman is not intended to be asked what Offices belonging to the Great-Seal are Worth, but what Difference there is in the Value of other Offices, to what they were heretofore; particularly how the Prices of the Seats in the Six Clerks Office are increaſed, that they were once at ſuch a Rate, and what they are now; that is the Matter, as I take it.

Mr. Lutwyche My Lords, I apprehend the Direction was given to the Noble Lord, not to ask concerning the Sale of any Office but what was in the Articles, and the Managers had given Evidence to. Now to ask the Difference or Increaſe of the Prices of a Clerk in Chancery's Place, is, we apprehend, to ask to the very Thing that your Lordſhips have over-ruled already.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, this is not like the Curſitors-Office, which is in the Diſpoſition of the Great-Seal; your Lordſhips Reſolution was, That the Witneſs was not to anſwer as to their giving Money to the Great-Seal. The Evidence we are now upon, is an Inquiry that relates not to any Money given to the Great-Seal, but what thoſe Perſons paid to one another for an Office that doth not belong to the Great-Seal

Mr. Onſlow. At the End of your Lordſhips Reſolution Yeſterday, the Reaſon given why they ought not to be let into the Examination as to the Offices then in Queſtion, was, becauſe no Evidence had been given thereto by the Managers, and it was not charged nor mentioned in the Articles, altho' the Noble Lord did inſiſt that he ſhould be let into that Examination, becauſe in the Preamble of his Anſwer, he had taken Notice of thoſe Offices. This Caſe is ſtronger, becauſe the Offices now deſired to be Examined into, are neither in the Articles nor Anſwer, nor hath any Evidence been given to them; and therefore we hope he ſhall not be let into this Examination.

Mr. Common Serj. We humbly hope your Lordſhips will permit us to Enquire whether the Buſineſs of thoſe Offices in the Court of Chancery is not greatly increaſed, and whether the Value of the Offices be not increaſed with it?

Mr. Serj Probyn. Notwithſtanding your Lordſhips Direction in the former Queſtion, we ſubmit whether we may not be permitted to ask this Queſtion, Whether the Offices in the Court of Chancery are not increaſed in Value much beyond what they were Seven Years ago?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, That is the very Queſtion that we Object to.

E. of Macclesfield. What I before offered was, that there had been a Uſage to make Preſents to the Great-Seal; I apprehend your Lordſhips over-ruled it as to the Curſitors-Office, becauſe there was no need of an Excuſe as to that Office, as there is no mention made of it in the Articles, nor any Proof offered againſt me. This is not of any Payment to the Great Seal, but goes by way of Excuſe as to the Sums, to ſhew the Increaſe or Difference of the Prices of Offices in General. It is notorious that Money now carries a leſs Intereſt, and that the Price of all Offices is increaſed. I don't know whether the Gentlemen will deny it. If they do not, I will not trouble your Lordſhips any farther about it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We have no Occaſion either to Confeſs or Deny any Thing that is not before your Lordſhips in Judgment. Therefore, if they expect any Anſwer, we give this, That it is not before your Lordſhips in Judgment.

Mr.

Mr. Lutwyche. I apprehend the Reaſon of your Lordſhips Reſolution Yeſterday, was, That there was no Charge in the Articles concerning thoſe Offices; the ſame Reaſon equally holds to what they are asking now in relation to Clerks in Chancery.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I ſhould be extreme ſorry to make any Objection to any Evidence that is Material: But, if he is pleaſed to Examine this Gentleman how far by the Increaſe of Buſineſs the Value of any Office is riſen, that muſt be of the Annual legal Value, and not according to the Liberties he left to his Maſters.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, Whether he doth not know that the Prices of Offices are greater now than they were formerly?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we don't underſtand they have any ſuch Permiſſion to ask that Queſtion. To repeat the ſame Thing over and over again, we apprehend they think we are aſleep.

E. of Macclesfield. Your Lordſhips ſeem not to be of Opinion that this Queſtion ſhould be asked; therefore to ſave your Lordſhips time, I will wave the Queſtion.

Mr. Goldesbrough ſworn.

Mr. Serj Probyn. We will proceed in the next Place, in Confirmation of that Part of the Anſwer to this Article, That two Sums of Money, mentioned to be paid to my Lord Macclesfield by Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Bennet, were both paid back into the Court of Chancery. We deſire Mr. Goldesbrough may be asked, Whether he knows of the two Sums of 1500 Guineas, and 1500 Guineas, that were paid by my Lord Macclesfield into the Court of Chancery.

Lord Lechmere. My Lords, I beg pardon. I think the Queſtion that the Noble Earl hath waved, if I miſtook not, was about the Riſe and Increaſe of Value of the Offices in Chancery. Now, notwithſtanding the Noble Lord hath waved, yet it may be proper for your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether he ſhould not have Liberty to ask it, if he thinks fit.

E. of Straff.rd. I think what the Noble Lord hath ſaid is conſiderable, and it may be proper for our Judgment.

Ld. Viſc. Townſhend. I move that they may withdraw.

Ld. Lechmere. It may be proper to have the Queſtion repeated again. I therefore deſire that the Councel for the Earl would repeat the Queſtion again that they would have asked of Mr Steele.

Mr Serj. Probyn. My Lords, The Queſtion is, Whether the Price of Offices in the Court of Chancery, and in the Six Clerks Office, particularly, are increaſed now more than antiently they were.

Thereupon the Managers and Councel withdrew, and being returned,

Ld. Ch. J. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, the Lords have conſidered the Queſtion on which you whithdrew Their Lordſhips are of Opinion, That you are at Liberty to ask the Queſtion, Whether the Price of Offices in the Court of Chancery, and in the Six Clerks Office particularly, be increaſed now more than heretofore they were?

Mr. Steele. My Lord, I came to be a Clerk in the Chancery Office in the Year 1687. I ſerved my Clerkſhip in the Office, and in that Year, and for ſeveral Years afterwards, I know that waiting Clerks Places were bought at 50 Guineas, or leſs, and after I was out of my Clerkſhip, I was offered a Waiting Clerks Place in the Office for 50 Guineas. They are not ſworn, nor have Power to take a Clerk; and ſince that Time I have known them Sold for 3, 4, and 500 l. My Maſter was a ſworn Clerk, and he ſold his ſworn Clerks Place for 230 l. It was a Clerk at the Seat; and by the Cuſtom of the Office, he that hath one Clerk cannot take another till the firſt Clerk be provided for; but I having a Propoſal to go into a Seat of greater Buſineſs, that induced me to give a Note to the Gentleman that bought the Seat, that I would not be an Incumbrance on the Seat, otherwiſe he would not have given ſo much. Since that Time I have known a ſworn Clerks Place Sold for 800 l. Particularly I tranſacted a Sale upon a Brother-in-Law's Account, I contracted for 500 l. and then there was a Clerk upon the Seat that had not ſerved half his Clerkſhip out.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What Sum of Money had they upon taking a Clerk at that Time, and what now?

Mr. Steele. I did treat in Order to put my Brother-in-Law Clerk to one Mr. Atkinſon, in the Office.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What time was that?

Mr. Steele. To the beſt of my Remembrance it was in 1703, or 1704, and he had 100 Guineas. Since that time, my Brother-in-Law, while he was there, had 300 l. or 300 Guineas with a Clerk.

Mr. Common Serj. I deſire he may Explain to your Lordſhips what he means by a Clerk being an Incumbrance to a Seat?

Mr. Steele. By the Cuſtom of the Office, he that is put a Clerk, muſt be provided for before his Maſter can take another. The Maſter ſo taking him, cannot take another Clerk, till he is provided for by a ſworn Clerks Place, or a waiting Clerks Place.

Mr. Lutwyche. If the Councel have done, I deſire to ask one Queſtion, that is, The Gentleman ſays, he came into the Office in the Year 1687. I deſire to know how many Clerks there were at that Time?

Mr. Steele. There were at that Time but 60 ſworn Clerks; there was an Addition made, to the beſt of my remembrance, in my Lord Jeffery's time, Sir John Trevor was then Maſter of the Rolls, I think there was an Addition of 30.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to know whether they are not reduced from 90 to 60 again?

Mr. Steele. They are not at preſent yet reduced.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether they are not intended to be reduced?

Mr. Steele. If any one Dies without ſurrendring his Office, they don't fill up the Place of that Perſon with another; but any one may ſurrender.

Mr. Lutwyche. How many are there now?

Mr. Steele. I have been told there are about 12 or 13 leſs than 90: They are to be reduced duced from 90 till they come to the ancient Number of 60; and they are reduced as they die without ſurrendring.

Mr. Lutwyche. We don't expect you to give an exact Account; How many may there be?

Mr. Steele. I can't take upon me to ſay how many; but, as I have been informed, I believe there are about 16 or 17 above the 60 remaining: I may be miſtaken, I am not certain; but there are ſeveral Gentlemen here, who can give an exact Account.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to know whether the Offices are not a great deal better, by there being fewer of them?

Mr. Steele. Certainly, I believe that is pretty Natural; the fewer the Offices are the better; but the Offices are not ſo good as they were when I came Clerk. They have reduced ſeveral Profits belonging to them ſince I came out of the Office, by the Act of Parliament made For the Amendment of the Law.

Mr. Lutwyche. You ſay they are ſold for more than formerly they ſold for; I deſire to know whether ſome of thoſe Clerks, whoſe Predeceſſors have had good Buſineſs belonging to the Office, have not made that Seat ſell better?

Mr. Steele. Certainly it doth; if the Perſon ſurrendring had good Buſineſs, that Seat will ſell for more than a Seat of leſs Buſineſs

Mr. Common Serj. I deſire that he will inform your Lordſhips, when it was in point of Time that theſe Offices ſold at ſo low a Rate?

Mr. Steele. It was in the Year 1694 that the Gentleman to whom I was Clerk ſurrendered his Seat.

Mr. Common Serj. And when was it you knew 50 Guineas paid for the Place of a Waiting Clerk?

Mr. Steele. The 50 Guineas I ſpeak of for a Waiting Clerk's Place, was in the Year 87, or thereabouts.

Mr. Common Serj. Whether was that before the Increaſe of the additional Number of Clerks?

Mr. Steele. Much about the Time that the Additional Number of Clerks was added.

Mr. Common Serj. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, whether the Prices began to Riſe before any Reduction was made?

Mr. Steele. Yes, before the Reducing of them.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When was the Reduction of them made?

Mr Steele. I can't tell the exact Time. There was an Order made, that they ſhould not be filled up as they died without Surrender.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, Whether there was not a Difference of Price between thoſe Seats which were full or empty of Buſineſs, or whether they were all at a Par?

Mr. Steele. The Price always varied, as there was much or little Buſineſs.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. But every Seat, whether great or leſs, had a Riſe in Proportion?

Mr. Steele. Yes.

Mr. Cary. I deſire he may be asked, Whether there hath not been an Act of Parliament ſince the Time he mentions, which hath been Beneficial to the 60 Clerks?

Mr. Steele. There was an Act of Parliament, called, An Act for the Amendment of the Law; by which the 60 Clerks had the Term Fees inſtead of the Tenour Bill, which was a conſiderable Profit; and to make up that to them, the Fees of the ſmall Writs were given to them, and the Term Fees; but in my Apprehenſion, the Tenour Bill was a greater Advantage than thoſe Fees that have been given in Lieu of it.

Mr. Common Serj. That worthy Gentleman's Queſtion hath occaſioned me to deſire, That he would inform your Lordſhips, Whether, upon the whole of the Act, the Six Clerks Offices are better or worſe?

Mr. Steele. In my Opinion, they were better before the Act, than they are now.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we have more Witneſſes to this purpoſe; but we apprehend that Mr. Steele hath ſpoken ſo fully to it, that we ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with any others, as to this Matter. The next Witneſs which we ſhall beg leave to call, is in Relation to the two Sums of 1575*l.* that were paid into the Court of Chancery by the Noble Earl, for which we did call Mr. Goldesbrough.

Dr. Sayer. Before your Lordſhips enter into an Examination of this Fact, I will only beg leave to take Notice as to the Time of this Repayment: The Learned Managers were right in their Obſervations, That it was after the Vote for the Impeachment; but it was before the Articles were Exhibited. This is miſtaken in the Anſwer, but I am ſure the Honourable Houſe of Commons will be ſo candid as to think it was a Miſtake only, and that 'tis impoſſible it could be with any View of Deceiving the World, ſince both Facts were upon Record; the Earl was ſo very impatient to have his Anſwer in, that no Delay might be charged upon him, that I aſſure your Lordſhips the Anſwer was not ſettled till 3 or 4 a Clock in the Morning of that Day that it was delivered in. In ſuch a Hurry, a Miſtake of this Nature, I hope will not be taken amiſs, nor be looked upon by the Houſe as deſigned. My Lords, I thought it my Duty to obſerve this before your Lordſhips entred into this Examination.

Mr. Goldesbrough called.

Mr. Common Serj. There are two Sums of Money taken Notice of to be given by Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Bennet to my Lord Macclesfield, I deſire you would inform my Lords, whether thoſe two Sums were paid back again, and when, and in what Manner?

Mr. Goldesbrough. My Lords, The 23d of February laſt my Lord Macclesfield came into Court, and depoſited in Bank Notes and Money to the Value of 3000 Guineas. The Lords Commiſſioners were pleaſed to direct the inveſting it in South-Sea Annuities, in the Names of Mr. Holford and Mr. Lovibond, the two Senior Maſters of the Court, for the Benefit of the Suitors of the Court.

Mr. Common Serj. I think, my Lords, we need not ask whether Mr. Goldesbrough be the proper Officer?

Lords. No, No.

Mr. Common Serj. I would with Submiſſion ask another Queſtion of Mr. Goldesbrough; I would beg leave to inform your Lordſhips what the Queſtion is. There hath been an Examination on the Part of the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons into the Nature of theſe Offices, and I hope it will not be improper, Mr. Goldesbrough being now at Your Lordships Bar, to ask him as to the manner of the Money coming into the Masters Hands, whether it be by Compulsion, or at the Instance of the Parties.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. This must appear by the Order. No Money is paid in but by Order.

Mr. Com. Serj. The Orders are infinite, but Mr. Goldesbrough being the Register, may be properly asked, what the Practice and Usage of the Court is in this Instance. It is usual to ask the Officers of the Court, what the Practice and Usage of the Court is. If we should produce 20 Orders, they might object that others are not so; and therefore I beg Mr. Goldesbrough, the proper Officer, may inform Your Lordships, what the Practice of the Court is.

Mr. Goldesbrough. Upon Decrees, when Causes are heard, the Councel pray what Decree is proper: Where Estates are to be sold, they order the Money to be brought before the Master.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I desire to ask one Question; Mr. Goldesbrough is a very experienced Officer of the Court, hath been a good while in the Place, and probably may give Your Lordships some Light into this Matter. The Question I would ask, is, When he first knew the Office, whether it was usual to direct the Money to the Masters, in the manner it hath of late been directed?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I can't say it was.

Mr. Lutwyche. The next Question is, When the present Usher of the Rolls had given Security, whether there were not some Orders made by the late Lord Chancellor, as well as by the Masters of the Rolls, for Payment of Money to the Usher of the Rolls; that is, into Court?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, there was.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire him to explain the Difference between paying the Money into Court, and paying the Money to a Master. What is understood by paying it into Court?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Paying it into Court, is paying it to the Usher.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know, whether there were not some Orders made, after Mr. Trevor the present Usher had given Security, for Payment of Money to him?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, there were.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know, how soon after those Orders were varied?

Mr Goldesbrough. I can't remember when the Orders were varied; as to those made before Hearing, and for continuance of an Injunction, I don't know they are altered yet.

Mr Lutwyche. What I ask is, Whether he had any Directions touching the varying of Orders, for the Payment of Money; any Direction, I mean, from my Lord Macclesfield, to vary the Order?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Money paid before Hearing, was paid into Court; Money paid upon the Decree, was brought before the Master. I had no Direction from my Lord Macclesfield to vary the Order.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any Variation or Difference in drawing up the Order, for some time after the Usher gave Security, from what it was some time before?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Upon interlocutory Motions, the Money was brought before the Usher, and so it hath been ever since.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was it always so?

Mr. Goldesbrough. It hath been so ever since.

Mr. Lutwyche. Ever since what time?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Ever since the time that Mr. Trevor gave Security.

Mr. Lutwyche. What I would know is, Whether the Orders and Directions at first were not in general, to pay the whole Money into Court?

Mr. Goldesbrough. No, my Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. How was it?

Mr. Goldesbrough. On all Orders interlocutory before Hearing, it was paid in to the Usher: On all Orders for Money, subsequent to the Hearing, it was brought before the Master.

E. of Macclesfield. This Question hath been asked Mr. Goldesbrough, with relation to the paying of Money into Court, and being brought before a Master; I desire he would inform Your Lordships what the Difference between them is?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Money brought into Court, is Money brought in before Hearing, and is subject to the Order of the Court, to be paid out either before the Hearing, or after, as the Nature of the Case requires. Money brought in after Hearing, is Money to be put out on Security, and is brought before the Master.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether when Money is ordered to be brought in to be disposed of, as upon a Purchase, or upon a Decree, to pay Debts &c. The Course of the Court in all his Time hath been to bring it into Court, or before a Master?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I can't say it hath been so in all my Time: Since the Revolution it hath been generally brought in before the Master, before it was brought into Court.

E. of Macclesfield. Have the Orders made by me, since the Usher gave Security, been made in the same manner as those by myPredecessors?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, They have been the very same.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire to know, when first the Money paid into the Hands of the Usher went into another Course, that is, upon the Usher's Death, or not giving Security; and what Method was taken then?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I believe, after the Revolution, there was looked upon to be a Defect in the Security of the Usher, and it was upon that Consideration, that the Money was ordered before the Master.

E. of Macclesfield. And afterwards was there not an Alteration made of all the Money that used to be paid to the Usher? Was it not ordered to be brought before the junior Masters?

Mr. Goldesbrough. In my Lord Cowper's Time, when there was a Difference between the Usher and his Deputy, my Lord Cowper, upon that, did order the Money to be brought, and lodged in the two junior Masters Hands. They were each to keep a Key, and the Usher another: When any Money was paid, it was paid out of the Chest, kept under those Keys; and the Money that was paid in, was paid in there.

E. of Macclesfield. Was not the Money that used to be paid in to the Usher's Hands, directed in to the junor Masters Hands?

Mr. Goldesbrough. It was so.

E. of Macclesfield. As to the Money appointed to be disposed of, for payment of Debts, or otherwise, how was that paid? was that put into the Chest, or into the Hands of the respective Masters, to whom it was referred?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I think it was put into the Cheſt; there was then no Difference at all.

E. of Macclesfield. Had no other Maſters then any Money brought before them? was all brought before the junior Maſters?

Mr. Goldesbrough. The general Order was, for the Money to be brought before the junior Maſters, to be kept in a Cheſt there.

E. of Macclesfield. Mr. Goldesbrough miſtakes the Queſtion. I don't ask how the Money was uſually brought, but had no other Maſter Money brought before him in my Lord Cowper's Time?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, My Lords.

E. of Macclesfield. What Money was that? upon what Occaſion?

Mr. Goldesbrough. The bringing the Money to the two junior Maſters, was found to be inconvenient; whereupon, after that it was altered, and the Money was brought before the Maſters, to whom the Reference was in Court.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether the Money that was paid in to the two junior Maſters, was not ſuch Money as was before ordered to be paid into Court?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire you would recollect, whether you was not preſent at a Meeting of the Maſter of the Rolls, and Uſher, and others; whether this was not under Conſideration, what Money ſhould be paid into Court, and what ſhould be brought before the Maſter?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether you was not then asked, whether Money directed after a Cauſe is heard, to be diſpoſed of, was not brought before a Maſter?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, I was asked that Queſtion.

E. of Macclesfield. What Account did you give of the Courſe of the Court in that Particular?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I gave the ſame as now, That the latter Practice had been to bring it before the Maſter, to whom the Cauſe was referred.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you remember, whether the Uſher was not asked, whether he had any Precedents of Money paid into his Hands, to be diſtributed amongſt Legatees, or Creditors, and what the Anſwer was?

Mr. Goldesbrough. He ſaid he had none.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you apprehend the Courſe of the Court to be, that Money brought in before Hearing, is to be paid in to the Uſher; and Money after Hearing, to be brought in before the Maſter?

Mr. Goldesbrough. Yes, I do.

E. of Strafford. I deſire he would inform Your Lordſhips, what the Security is, and how much, that is given by the Uſher; and whether it is the ſame now, as it was before my Lord Cowper made that Alteration?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I can't ſay any thing as to that, I know nothing of it, it doth not lye in my Province.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to remember, in the Caſe of Mr. Elde, though he paid 5250 l. all the Money was returned, except 1850 l. So the ſame as to Mr. Thurſton, 5250 l. that all was returned in a reaſonable Time, except 2000 l. ſo that to theſe Facts, we ſhall not trouble Your Lordſhips with any Witneſſes. But now we ſhall beg leave to lay before Your Lordſhips another Evidence, that when Mr. Thurſton was admitted into this Office, upon the Payment of 5000 Guineas, another Gentleman offered 6000 l. Mr. Cottingham proved the ſame as to Mr. Elde. This we do to ſhew, that his Lordſhip was not that avaritious Perſon, as he hath been repreſented; he refuſed 6000 l. and took leſs from another. We deſire Mr Ellis may be called.

Mr. Ellis Sworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire Mr. Ellis may be asked, what he knows of any Sum of Money that was offered for the Maſterſhip in Chancery, to which Mr Thurſton was admitted, and what that Sum was?

Mr. Ellis. Upon the Death of Mr. Borret, Mr Richard Lucas came to me at my Lord Macclesfield's, and told me, That his Brother deſired to have the Place of a Maſter in Chancery, then vacant: And he ſaid, that as I was in my Lord Macclesfield's Family, I might be of Service to him, in conveying Mr Lucas's Propoſal to my Lord. He then told me, what I was to offer my Lord Macclesfield for that Place; he ſaid he was ſo ſenſible of my Lord Macclesfield's Honour and Generoſity, that he would leave it entirely to his Lordſhip, what he would have in Conſideration of his coming in. But if my Lord Macclesfield did not approve of a Propoſal ſo undetermined as that was, I was to offer 6000 l. or 6000 Guineas; I don't remember which of thoſe two Sums, but one of them I am certain it was. I did offer it to my Lord, who told me Mr Lucas had been well recommended to him, and he was ſatisfied with his perſonal Character, and with this Offer. My Lord Macclesfield ſaid no more; and I could not preſs his Lordſhip to explain himſelf any further. I returned that Anſwer to Mr Lucas, and heard nothing further of that Matter, till my Lord Macclesfield had declared that Mr Thurſton ſhould have it.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether the Gentleman that applyed to him, was not his Friend and Acquaintance?

Mr Ellis. Mr Richard Lucas was my Acquaintance; when he deſired me to do this, I told him it was not proper for me to apply about Matters of ſuch Nature; but in Friendſhip to him, I would ſpeak to my Lord about it.

Mr. Plummer. I don't know whether the Counſel have done; if they have, I deſire to ask this Witneſs what Mr. Richard Lucas is himſelf?

Mr. Ellis. He is a Clergyman.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to ask him, If Mr. Richard Lucas did not, at the ſame Time that he propoſed the 6000 l. lay ſome Reſtriction or Condition, upon which he was to pay it. Had not you ſuch Inſtructions?

Mr. Ellis. No, I don't remember he did any.

Mr. Plummer. Then I deſire to ask you, If he did not ſay, provided Mr. Borret's Deficiency was made good?

Mr. Ellis. He mentioned no ſuch Condition to me; he did ſpeak of Mr. Borret's Deficiency; I told him I had heard there would be no Deficiency there. Upon which he ſaid, he had been aſſured there would be none by a Gentleman known to us both; but however that be, ſays he, my Brother is willing to enter into a Treaty with my Lord Macclesfield upon theſe Terms.

Mr.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we ſhall trouble your Lordſhips no further upon theſe Articles we have been upon, the other Gentlemen will anſwer what is to follow.

Mr. Robins. May it pleaſe your Lordſhips, I am likewiſe by your Lordſhips Permiſſion aſſigned of Counſel with the noble Earl, who has the Misfortune to lye under the Weight of ſo heavy a Charge, as an Impeachment of the whole Body of the Commons of Great-Britain, and ſhall beg Leave to open to your Lordſhips the Nature of his Defence, and the Strength of his Evidence, with regard to the Eleventh and Twelfth Articles of this Impeachment.

I am ſenſible, my Lords, that the Solemnity of this Proſecution, from the Weight and Number of thoſe, who are become the Accuſers of this noble Earl, and the awful Appearance and Wiſdom of thoſe who are to be his Judges, and the Name of an Impeachment in Parliament, may ſeem to carry an Argument of greater Crimes and greater Guilt, than are to be met with in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice below.

But, my Lords, with the greateſt Submiſſion, if the Solemnity of the Proceedings on this Occaſion has not altered the Nature of Things, and imprinted a Guilt where there is no Guile, we humbly hope we ſhall be able to lay before your Lorſhips ſome few Obſervations and Circumſtances of Evidence, that will, at leaſt, extenuate, if not wholly abate and take out the Sting and Malignity of the ſeveral Crimes, whereof this noble Earl ſtands accuſed.

Your Lordſhips, without Queſtion, will have long ſince obſerved, That the Loſſes and Sufferings of Widows, of Orphans, and others, who, from the Diſtreſs and Impotence of their Condition to help or defend themſelves, have fled to the Court of Chancery, when this noble Earl preſided there, for Sanctuary and Protection; that theſe have been juſtly made uſe of as the greateſt Aggravations of the Crimes wherewith he is charged, and they have been diſplayed with the utmoſt Force of Eloquence, and in the moſt moving Strains of Commiſeration and Pity.

And I believe, my Lords, every one that heard them have ſhared and gone along with the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, in the Concern and Indignation they have ſo juſtly ſhewn towards thoſe, who have been the Authors and Contrivers of them.

Theſe, my Lords, are Subjects, wherein the richeſt Fancy may almoſt loſe it ſelf, and the pooreſt can never be at a Loſs for ſomething to offer to move and affect the Paſſions of Mankind.

And the learned Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Commons, have adorned and ſet off their Charge againſt the noble Earl on this Head, with ſo many Beauties of Expreſſion, and ſo great a Propriety and Choice of Language, to engage and win over all the Paſſions of Humane Nature to their Side, that 'twill be difficult, if not impoſſible, for Us, who may ſeem to have undertaken an Argument leading to diſprove and reaſon againſt the Force and Truth of all theſe, to hope for Succeſs, but by ſhewing to your Lordſhips, that the noble Earl entirely joins with the learned Managers in their juſt Reſentment and Concern on this Occaſion, that he is deeply affected with the Loſſes, the Depredations and the Havock, which has been made of the Fortunes of the Unhappy Suitors of the Court of Chancery.

That he has long been endeavouring to put a Stop to them, that at one Time he has contributed his Reaſon, his Judgment, and his Underſtanding, to find out effectual Methods for the Cure of them; at other Times has made Uſe of his Power, his Authority and that Majeſty wherewith, as Lord Chancellor, he ſeems to be inveſted, to enforce and haſten the compleating of them.

That he has conven'd the Maſters, the Regiſters, and the ſeveral Officers belonging to his Court, to conſult, adviſe and aſſiſt, in finding out Means to ſtop the growing Evil; that he has aſſiſted with his Purſe, has advanced conſiderable Sums of Money of his own, and when Nothing would do, when the Miſchief appeared too big for his ſingle Endeavours to oppoſe, that he then at laſt preſumed humbly to lay the Whole before his Majeſty in Council, as well for his Majeſty's Aſſiſtance and Direction, as to teſtify how much he had at Heart the finding out a Remedy for the Cure of thoſe overgrown Diſeaſes, this Epidemical Contagion, which was ſpreading through every Part of the Court where he preſided, and ſeemed to threaten Deſtruction and Ruin to the whole.

Theſe, my Lords, we humbly hope will prove the noble Earl not to have been an idle and unconcerned Spectator at the Tragedy that was acting around him; that he ſaw and felt the Commotions it had raiſed, and was fully determined to put an End to them as ſpeedily and effectually as he could.

But when, my Lords, a Stop was put immediately to his Endeavours; when he was diſarmed almoſt in the very Beginning of his Onſet, and when the great Seal, and therewith his Power to proceed further, was taken from him, your Lordſhips will not impute it to him, that he was forced to ſit ſtill, and leave it to others to effect what he had, ſo proſperouſly and happily, begun.

Your Lordſhips, without Queſtion, will have already obſerved, That theſe fatal Miſchiefs did not ſpring up all at once, That they had long been growing, That the Seeds of them had lain buried and concealed for a conſiderable Time, and, That they hardly appeared at all, till they were grown too ſtubborn and obdurate, to yield to an eaſy Cure.

Your Lordſhips will likewiſe, no doubt, have obſerved, that however in the ſtricteſt way of conſidering Things, the Chancellor may poſſibly be thought to be anſwerable for them; yet, that they did not originally proceed from him, that he had not the immediate Cuſtody or Ordering of the Suitors Money or Effects.

That the Maſters in Chancery, who are no leſs than Eleven in Number, by the Conſtitution of the Court, and the Nature of their Office, were neceſſarily to be entruſted with that Part of the Buſineſs thereof.

And when Your Lordſhips ſhall likewiſe be pleaſed to obſerve further, That enough, and more than enough for the ſtrongeſt Conſtitution of Body, and the greateſt Abilities both of Mind and Underſtanding, remained ſtill for the Chancellor's own Share, in the Diſpatch of the daily and neceſſary Buſineſs of the Court where he preſided, the innumerable Avocations, by his Attendances on Your Lordſhips, on His Majeſty, and the Council, and other Services, which the Duty of his High Station required from him; Your Lordſhips, no doubt, will eaſily reflect, that he had but little leiſure, ſuddenly, and immediately to go through ſo arduous, ſo difficult, and ſo tedious an Undertaking, as the ſtating and ſetling of the Maſters Accounts, for no leſs than almoſt a Million of Money, which has now appeared to be in their Hands. And, your Lordſhips, we are perſuaded, are no ſtrangers to the many and almoſt inſuperable Difficulties, which even at laſt have attended the Proſecution of that Affair, the great length of Time it has taken up, the number and variety of Meetings and Conſultations with Perſons of the greateſt Abilities and Experience, to go to the bottom of it, and whether even yet they have been able fully to effect it, or have fix'd on ſuch Methods of Enquiries as have laid open the whole Scene, or will certainly prevent the like Miſchiefs for the time to come; theſe, my Lords, we humbly apprehend are Conſiderations that will not be thought altogether unworthy of your Lordſhips Notice, in determining the Guilt or Innocence of this noble Earl of the Crimes laid to his Charge.

It muſt indeed be admitted that they have for the preſent, taken away the Money, Effects, and Securities of the Suitors out of the Maſters Hands, and ſo have prevented any loſs for the time to come on their Part.

But whether, my Lords, they are even yet diſpoſed of in ſuch Manner as fully to Anſwer the Ends propoſed, whether the Eaſe and Convenience of the Suitors of the Court will appear to be more effectually provided for, than they were before, by the Methods that have now been taken to diſpoſe of their Money and Securities; theſe, my Lords, I am afraid are Queſtions more eaſily asked, than anſwered.

But, my Lords, all I would be underſtood to mean by this, is, and I mean nothing more by it, than that the ſettling and adjuſting of the Maſters Accounts for ſuch great Sums of Money, placed and diſpoſed of in ſuch variety of Hands, ſo difficult to be throughly conſidered or underſtood; and ſo little to be depended on if they were underſtood; that this, my Lords, was rather the work of Perſons at full leiſure, of Perſons converſant in the Nature and Manner of Accounts, that 'twas the work of variety of Perſons of different Capacities and Abilities, and ſo the taking of theſe Accounts lately has abundantly verified and proved them to be.

And then, my Lords, we humbly hope that the ſingle Endeavours of a Chancellor to the ſame end, by being unſucceſsful, will not be made Criminal, and that he will not be obliged under the pain of an Impeachment in Parliament, to do what, with the greateſt Submiſſion, has never yet been attempted, or if attempted, has met with the ſame ill Succeſs with the Endeavours of the preſent Earl, and could never hitherto be compleatly or perfectly effected.

But, my Lords, with great Submiſſion, if the ſtating and ſettling of theſe Accounts, on a juſt and laſting Foundation, ſhould be admitted to be the Duty and Office of a Lord Chancellor, and that he is bound under Pain of an Impeachment to take care of them, yet as this is a Work of the greateſt Moment, Judgment, and Conſideration, and muſt unavoidably take up a very great portion of Time, and put a total Stop and Obſtruction for the preſent to all the other Branches of his high Office, we humbly hope, my Lords, that his being cut off in the midſt of his Endeavours of that kind, and thereby prevented from further Purſuit of them, that this will be a Conſideration of the greateſt Weight with your Lordſhips in determining the Fate of this noble Earl, and that he will not be made Criminal for leaving it unfiniſh'd, when his Power of proceeding further therein, was ſuddenly and unexpectedly taken from him.

My Lords, your Lordſhips very well know that the Buſineſs, not only of the Court of Chancery, but of all the other Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, and even of your Lordſhips Supream Court of Judicature, is, and muſt neceſſarily be diſtributed and diſpoſed of into variety of Hands, that ſome are aſſigned to one Province, ſome to another, and all of them concurring to the ſame End, the carrying on the Buſineſs of the reſpective Courts to which they belong.

And, my Lords, the Officers and Miniſters of each of theſe Courts of Juſtice, on their being admitted thereto, give each of them the ſecurity of an Oath, or ſome perſonal Security for the due and faithful diſcharge and execution of their Duty, whilſt they continue in their Offices.

Now, my Lords, what can be the End of requiring and reſting on theſe Securities, but to relieve and eaſe the Minds of their Superiors from the neceſſity of prying and examining daily into their Behaviour and Conduct, to the hindrance and neglect of their own greater and more immediate Duty?

The Officer is at the Peril of his Oath, or the Security he has given, nay, even at the Peril of the Office itſelf, to diſcharge his Duty as he ought, and juſtly forfeits his Office by a neglect or breach of any part of his Duty therein; and if one or two of them ſhould have no regard to all or any of theſe Tyes, muſt the ten Righteous that are left, nay, muſt the Chancellor himſelf be puniſhed for their Sakes?

But, my Lords, Maſters in Chancery are generally, if not always, choſen from the Profeſſion of the Law, and the manner of their Education and the nature of their Studies are juſtly ſuppoſed to ſet them above the Temptation of mean, of baſe, or little and unjuſt Actions.

Many of that Profeſſion your Lordſhips will permit me to obſerve, do now, and have in all Ages, worthily adorn'd even the Auguſt Body of the Houſe of Peers, and have been advanced to the higheſt Dignities in the State.

And then, my Lords, I humbly hope 'twill not be thought an Obſervation altogether improper, that when one of this liberal Education, when one brought up in the ſtudy and practice of a Profeſſion, whoſe very Principles conſiſt in the knowledge of Virtue and Honour, of the Rules of Juſtice and Equity, and all the Accompliſhments which can adorn Life, or make him uſeful to his King and Country; I ſay, my Lords, I humbly hope 'twill not be improper to Obſerve, that when ſuch a one applies for an Office in the Civil Government, which he is in any Degree qualify'd for, 'tis no wonder that he ſhould meet with a more favourable Reception than other Perſons, who perhaps may have nothing but their Eſtates or Fortunes to recommend them.

The very Profeſſion of ſuch a one is, my Lords, almoſt a ſufficient Security and Recommendation of itſelf, and immediately induces a Perſuaſion and Belief, that they will do nothing to forfeit their Honour, their Reputation, or that Credit and Eſteem, which they ſo juſtly do and ought to Regard and Value.

But when, my Lords, 'tis remembred that the additional ſecurity and ſanction of an Oath is likewiſe required from them, when they invoke the Majeſty of Heaven to Bleſs them as they perform their Duty, what higher, what greater or better Security can be taken from them for the due and faithful diſcharge of their Duty in the Office they are entring upon?

The Oaths they take upon that Occaſion, your Lordſhips have already heard, and no doubt will have obſerved, that they differ little from the Oath, which even the Lord Chancellor himſelf takes on his being admitted to his own high Office.

And as they ſit with him in Judgment on the Bench, ſhare with him in carrying on the moſt important Buſineſs of that Court, which is next in Dignity to the Supream Court of Judicature we are now before, when they are in moſt Caſes neceſſary for the diſtributing and dealing out Juſtice and Equity, and fixing the rules and bounds of Property to the Suitors there. Can it, or will it, my Lords, be eaſily or readily imagined, that they ſhould have no Regard to all theſe ſacred Tyes of Duty, that they ſhould proſtitute their Honour, their Conſcience, and every Thing that is dear and valuable to them, for the ſake of any worldly or temporal Conſideration whatſoever?

Theſe, my Lords, we humbly apprehend are ſome of the Reaſons, which may be offered, why no perſonal ſecurity has ever been required from a Maſter in Chancery, on his Admiſſion into that Office, any more than from the Chancellor himſelf.

And if this be ſo, tho' there could be no need, or occaſion for the Chancellors making any Declarations concerning their Ability or Subſtance, yet we humbly hope we ſhall be able to ſhew to your Lordſhips, that this Declaration, which is made one of the Articles of an Impeachment againſt this noble Earl, that even this too, was not without it's juſt Foundation of Reaſon and Truth.

And this, my Lords, leads me to obſerve a little on the Eleventh Article of this Impeachment.

[Article XI.] My Lords, the Eleventh Article contains a two-fold Charge againſt the Earl; Firſt, That whilſt he continued in the Office of Lord Chancellor, in order to advance and increaſe the illegal and corrupt Gain ariſing to himſelf from the ſale and diſpoſal of the Offices of Maſters in Chancery, he did admit ſeveral Perſons to thoſe Offices, who at the time of their Admiſſions were of ſmall Subſtance and Ability, unfit to be truſted with the great Sums of Money and Effects of the Suitors lodged in their Hands.

The Second Charge againſt the Earl in this Article, is, That he did publickly in open Court falſly repreſent the Perſons by him admitted to the Offices of Maſters of the Court of Chancery, as Perſons of great Fortunes, and in every reſpect qualified for the Truſt repoſed in them.

Theſe, my Lords, are the two Branches of this Article againſt the Earl, and I would beg leave to obſerve upon it in general, that 'tis not ſo much as charged or inſinuated in any part of it, that the Earl knew or had the leaſt Notice of any inſufficiency or inability in the Maſters at the Time he admitted them to take upon them that great Truſt.

If that had been the Caſe, or could have been clearly made out, the Commons without doubt would not have omitted ſo material an Aggravation of this part of their Charge againſt the Earl.

They have indeed proved, that the Earl did not think fit to take the Maſters own Words for their Abilities and Fortunes, and therefore never ask'd them the Queſtion.

But, my Lords, we hope we ſhall be able to ſhew to your Lordſhips, that the Earl took a much more proper and effectual Method, to be ſatisfied of the Truth of their Circumſtances and Abilities, than by any Appeal he could have made to themſelves; that he did not content himſelf with barely asking the Queſtion for the ſake of an Anſwer, which he ought to have had no regard to, whether true or falſe, but that he weighed, conſidered, and judged of the Account he received of them on his Enquiry from others, and determined accordingly, whether they were or were not fit to be placed in an Office of ſo great Truſt.

That in Conſequence thereof, he abſolutely rejected ſome, though their Friends offered him a greater Preſent, or if it muſt be called ſo, a greater Price for their Offices than others, for want of an Eſtate or Fortune in Poſſeſſion of their own, that might be ſome ways adequate to the great Charge they were going to be entruſted with.

That from the ſame Views of Security to the Suitors of the Court, he refuſed to admit others, from an Apprehenſion that the Sums they offered, though conſiderably greater than was offered by others, would too much exhauſt and leſſen their own Fortunes, to be able with any Degree of Eaſe or Credit to ſupport themſelves, or be conſiſtent with the Safety and Security of the Suitors Money and Effects, to be entruſted with them.

Theſe Inſtances, my Lords, we ſhall be able to produce to your Lordſhips; and when we have ſo done, we hope we ſhall need to be in very little Pain for the Second Part of this Charge, which the Earl by his Anſwer has partly admitted to be true, that is, that he believes he may upon ſome Occaſions have declared, That he thought the then Body of Maſters as good, with Reſpect both to their Eſtates and Ability for the Diſcharge of their Office, as had been at any Time before.

This, my Lords, the Earl owns by his Anſwer, That he may on ſome Occaſions have ſaid; and if it were true, where was the Crime of it? 'twas indeed more than he needed to have ſaid, as no One had Authority to require him to make any Declaration at all about the Maſters.

But, my Lords, if he ſaid more than he needed to have ſaid, and yet his ſaying was true; we hope, my Lords, that will never be imputed to him as criminal.

Indeed, my Lords, the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, both in their Opening, and the Courſe of their Evidence, have tack'd to this Declaration a Circumſtance ariſing from the Death of Mr. Fellows, one of the Maſters, which happened juſt before this Declaration was made, from whence they would infer, and one of them was pleaſed to ſay, 'Twas a neceſſary Declaration to be made at this Time, to give Notice that the Office was worth buying, or to that Effect.

But, my Lords, we humbly hope, how ingenious ſoever the Obſervation may be, that it will have no Weight with your Lordſhips, if the Truth and Nature of the Caſe it ſelf will ſupport the Declaration that was made upon that Occaſion.

But, my Lords, before I leave this Article, I would beg Leave to add one Obſervation more to what I have already ſaid upon the firſt Part of it, concerning the Obligation on the Maſters in Chancery to be faithful in the Diſcharge of their Duty, from the Honour of their Profeſſion, and the Nature and Sanctity of the Oath they take on their being admitted Maſters.

And, my Lords, I the rather chuſe to take Notice of it, becauſe 'tis an Argument, which the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons have themſelves furniſhed us with.

Your Lordſhips were pleaſed to obſerve, That in the very Beginning of their Evidence, they took great Care and Pains to exalt and dignify the Office of Maſters in Chancery as high as poſſible, and therefore they read to your Lordſhips ſeveral Commiſſions, and put in others to the Table, from the Time of Edward the VIth, down to this Time, to prove, That the Maſters in Chancery were joined in Commiſſion with the Maſter of the Rolls, and the Judges themſelves, for the hearing and determining of Cauſes in Equity, in the Abſence of the Chancellor

And 'twas ſaid by one of the learned Managers in the firſt Day's Opening upon that Occaſion, That the Maſters in Chancery were next in Power to the Chancellor himſelf, after the Maſter of the Rolls.

From which I would humbly preſume to infer, That if this be ſo, if they are Perſons of ſuch Eminence and Worth, and ſo nearly related to Juſtice it ſelf, on their commencing Maſters, 'tis ſtill a higher Obligation on them to be careful in the Diſcharge and Execution of their Office; and then, whether theſe Conſiderations, whether the Tyes of Honour, of Conſcience, and of the Venerable Company they are from thenceforth joined with, and made equal to; whether theſe may not in a great Meaſure be ſuppoſed to ſuperſede that ſtrict Enquiry, which a Lord Chancellor would otherwiſe think himſelf obliged to make; this, my Lords, we humbly hope will not be thought an Argument altogether foreign to the preſent Queſtion before your Lordſhips, but will, we hope, at leaſt extenuate, if not wholly wipe off any Guilt, that for want of ſuch Enquiry might poſſibly be imputed to the Earl on his Admiſſion of Maſters.

But, my Lords, there is one Obſervation further, which I cannot let paſs on this Occaſion, though 'tis not ſtrictly to the Article I am now upon.

And that is, my Lords, what the ſame learned Manager obſerved in his Reaſoning upon that Point, That the Offices of Maſters in Chancery being Offices of ſuch great Truſt and Dignity, that no Offices were more improper to be bought and ſold than they, except thoſe of the Judges themſelves.

This, my Lords, might, and no doubt, was a very juſt and proper Obſervation to be made, in ſupport of the Point they were then endeavouring to maintain.

But, my Lords, it falls out very unfortunately, to diſparage and weaken another Part of their Articles, which, without doubt they have equally at Heart to maintain, and that is the obliging theſe great Men, theſe Judges, theſe Maſters in Chancery, to give Security for the Suitors Money and Effects in their Hands, as if they were not to otherwiſe to be truſted with them.

They are juſt before made a ſort of Petty Chancellors, equal in Dignity and Power to the Judges themſelves, and fit to be entruſted with the Diſpoſal of the Properties and Fortunes of all the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, and therefore their Places muſt not be bought or ſold; but here they are reduced and abaſed to the low and ſervile Condition of a common Receiver or Rent-Gatherer, and muſt give Security for all the Suitors Money or Effects that ſhall happen to come to their Hands for fear they ſhould run away with it.

All, my Lords, I ſhall preſume to add further under this Head, is, That though one of the Maſters has indeed frankly owned, That he was worſe than Nothing when he came into his Place of a Maſter in Chancery, yet from another part of his Evidence, he owns, and it fully appears, that he groſsly abuſed and impoſed upon the Earl in concealing it from him, of which the Earl, when he came to have Notice, very juſtly complained and expreſſed his Surprize and Reſentment, that he ſhould pretend to come into an Office which he was not able to pay for.

And how far the ſame Gentleman will in time to come remember the kind and generous Return made him by the Earl, of the Fifteen Hundred Guineas, when he came to find him in Diſtreſs afterwards for want of it: This, my Lords, muſt be left to his own Conſcience, and the Gratitude of his own Heart; as muſt alſo the like Return of Fifteen Hundred Guineas made to another of the Maſters under the like Diſtreſs and Inability to bear the Want of it; Theſe, my Lords, are Inſtances of the greateſt Generoſity, Honour and Tenderneſs, I had almoſt ſaid Charity, in the Noble Earl, that perhaps can be produced in Private Life on the like Occaſions, however, they have been diſfigured and diſguiſed, by the Learning and Ingenuity of the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons.

In the mean time, my Lords, I would beg leave to obſerve, that the ready Paying and Producing of theſe Sums to the Earl, for their Places at firſt, their not giving him the leaſt Notice or Intimation that it was not their own Money, and the Figure and Appearance they made in the World; theſe all concurring might eaſily miſlead the noble Earl into a Perſuaſion and Belief, that they really were what they appeared to be; that they were well able and ſufficient to bear the Expence of it. And neither of theſe Two, or of the other Maſters, have given any Sort of Evidence, that the Earl knew, or had reaſon to entertain the leaſt Suſpicion to the contrary: And if now, at laſt of all, the Deficiencies of theſe, and of all the other Maſters placed in by the Earl ſhall appear to have been already made good, or to be ſo far ſecured, as to prevent any Danger of a Loſs to the Suitors of the Court, from their ſeveral Offices (which we humbly hope, on the ſtricteſt Examination, will appear to be the Caſe) We may then humbly preſume to hope, that the Earl will not be thought to be Criminal under any Part of this Article; but that Your Lordſhips great Juſtice will acquit him wholly of it.

[Article XII.] But, my Lords, I would now humbly beg leave to offer a few Words and Obſervations on the Twelfth Article, which comes next to be conſidered of. This

This, my Lords, charges that whilſt the Earl was Chancellor, an unjuſt and fraudulent Method was practis'd in the Court of Chancery, on the Sale of Maſters Places, and on the Admiſſions of new Maſters; that the Sums agreed to be paid for the Purchaſe thereof, were paid out of the Suitors Money, either by way of Retainer, or by replacing the ſame again, in the Hands of the Selling Maſter, immediately after the Admiſſion of the new one: And that by this Practice the Price and Value of theſe Places was greatly advanced, and Perſons of ſmall Ability and Subſtance were encouraged to contract for the ſame, which has occaſioned great Deficiencies.

This Part, my Lords, ſhews only the Contrivances amongſt the Maſters themſelves, how to get into thoſe Offices; and ſo far the Earl ſeems to be but little concerned in it.

But then comes the Charge againſt the Earl, that though this Practice was notorious and publick, and the Earl was fully acquainted therewith, yet, for his own unjuſt and corrupt Profit, in the Selling of thoſe Places, he took no Meaſures to prevent or reform that Abuſe, either by cauſing Schedules to be taken of the Money and Effects of the Suitors, delivered over to the new Maſter, or by appointing any Perſon to ſuperviſe or inſpect the Transfer, and Delivery thereof: But on the contrary, ſuffered that fraudulent Practice to continue without controul, whereby great Embezzlements have been made of the Suitors Money and Effects.

My Lords, the noble Earl, by his Anſwer, ſays, That he was totally ignorant of this Practice amongſt the Maſters; but admits, that he never gave any particular Directions for Delivery of the Suitors Money and Effects, by a Schedule to the ſucceeding Maſter; and ſays, he never heard that his Predeceſſors ever ordered ſuch Schedules to be made; but ſays, he believes ſuch Schedules were made, between the new Maſter and the old, on the general Order of Transfer, made of Courſe on the Admittance of the new Maſter.

This, my Lords, is the Earl's Anſwer to this Article. And as he has in general denied his Knowledge of theſe Practices amongſt the Maſters, it was certainly expected by Your Lordſhips, that the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, would have fully proved it upon him, and thereby have ſatisfied his Anſwer to this Part of the Charge.

But, my Lords, if I did not greatly miſtake the Evidence to this Point, it has proved nothing more, than that the Earl knew of this Practice, at the ſame time that all the reſt of the World did, that is, a little before Chriſtmas laſt; when the Curtain drew up, and diſplay'd the Maſters in their true Colours.

Then it was, and not before, that the Earl was let into this Secret by the kind Aſſiſtance and Help of Mr Thomas Bennet, and the Affidavits that were made by him and others on that Occaſion.

But, my Lords, with great Submiſſion, the Earl's knowing of it at that time was a little too late for him to give any Orders for preventing or redreſſing it for the time to come; for the great Seal was taken from him ſometime before, and then all his Knowledge after could be of no uſe to him, but only to ſhew how treacherouſly he had been dealt with, in not being let into this uſeful Part of Learning, whilſt it might have done him any good.

And, my Lords, if this be ſo, as it can be no ways Criminal in the Earl not to put a Stop to a Practice he was wholly ignorant of and which the Maſters kept private amongſt themſelves, We humbly hope, how ill ſoever the Maſters may be thought to have deſerved of this noble Earl, that the Earl himſelf will not be thought to have deſerved ill of Your Lordſhips, in not endeavouring to prevent it; and that in Conſequence thereof, Your Lordſhips great Juſtice will acquit him of this Part of the Impeachment.

And, my Lords, As to the laſt Part of this Charge, the not cauſing proper Schedules to be taken of the Suitors Money and Effects, delivered over to the ſucceeding Maſter, as a Method, which might in all probability have prevented the Practices amongſt the Maſters, complained of in the firſt Part of this Article; this, my Lords, we humbly apprehend, neither can, nor is intended, even by the Articles themſelves, to affect the Earl further or otherwiſe, than as a Means he ought to have made uſe of, to put a Stop to theſe dangerous Contrivances, formed and ſet on foot amongſt the Maſters, to diſpoſe of their Places to the beſt Advantage

But, my Lords, If the Earl himſelf knew nothing of theſe Contrivances, if he was wholly a Stranger to, and unacquainted with the Miſchief, 'twill ſurely, we hope, be no Crime in him, that he did not look out for a Cure

But, my Lords, It may, perhaps, be worth while, juſt to conſider of the wonderful Diſcovery that ſeems to have been made of theſe Schedules, and how far they would have anſwered the Ends propoſed, admitting the Earl had known of theſe Practices amongſt the Maſters and had been better diſpoſed than the Commons are pleaſed to think he was, for the Remedying of them.

And, my Lords, I am afraid this would have proved very far from being an infallible Method of remedying theſe Evils for the time to come; for, my Lords, if the Maſters would but truſt one another, or any Body would truſt them for a very few Days, might they not have done juſt the ſame thing they did before? might they not have immediately replaced the Money again in the Hands of the Selling-Maſter? or have paid off a Bond or any other Security they had given on the Borrowing of the Money, as ſoon as ever they were admitted, and had got the Suitors Money into their Hands? And if they had ſo done, and this had been diſcovered and complained of, would it not, with great Juſtice, have been called inſtituting a trifling and fallacious Method of Security for the Suitors, which could do them no manner of Service, but tended only to amuſe and deceive them; and then whether this would not have made a better Figure in an Impeachment, than what is here fixed upon, may we humbly hope, be thought deſerving of Your Lordſhips Notice; eſpecially, my Lords, when it might have been ſo eaſily explained and urged as no doubt 'twould have been by the learned Managers, that the very taking of theſe Schedules was for the ſake of ſeeing into the Nature and Value of the Office to be ſold, that he might the better know how to ſet his Price upon it.

But, my Lords, I ſhall only beg leave to add one or two very ſhort Obſervations more upon this Head, and then call ſuch Witneſſes, as we have, to ſpeak to theſe two Articles.

And, my Lords, the firſt Obſervation I would beg leave to mention, is, that the Earl by his Anſwer ſwer owns that he did not, neither did he ever hear, that any of his Predeceſſors ordered ſuch Schedules to be made; neither is there the leaſt Proof on the Part of the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, that any ſuch Schedules ever were made, or thought of, 'till Mr. Lightboun very happily hit upon them.

Indeed, the Earl owns by his Anſwer, that he believes ſuch Schedules were uſually made between the Old Maſter and the New, on the General Order of Transfer made of Courſe in the Admittance of the new Maſter.

But, my Lords, theſe are not the Schedules the Articles mean, as I apprehend, or, if they are, the Earl at leaſt was to have one Part of them; or elſe they could be of no Uſe to him in guarding againſt any fraudulent Practices of the Maſters. And if he had had one, what Security that could have been to the Suitors of the Court, if the Maſters ſhould have been diſpoſed to make Uſe of their Money afterwards; this, my Lords, I have already endeavoured to conſider of.

The next Obſervation, my Lords, I would beg leave to make under this head, is, That if ſuch Schedules had been made, what Security would this have been to the Earl, that they were in all Reſpects true, or with any certainty to have been depended on?

Some, my Lords, even of the Maſters themſelves, in the Hurry they were lately obliged to give in their Accounts, diſcovered afterwards ſeveral Miſtakes and Omiſſions therein; and though they were given in upon Oath, yet on a Review, and a more narrow and careful Inſpection and Examination of them, 'twas found they were not altogether to be relied on; and therefore the Maſters were forced to ſet them right in their Poſt-Accounts, given in at ſome diſtance of Time after; and whether any, or what other, or better Security for the Truth of thoſe Accounts has been yet found out, I am wholly ignorant of.

My Lords, the Third, and laſt Obſervation, I would beg leave juſt to mention, and ſubmit to your Lordſhips under this Head, is, Whether there be any, and what real Miſchief in the Practice it ſelf, ſo grievouſly complain'd of in this Article?

It is, my Lords, notorious, That in every one of the Offices of theſe Maſters in Chancery, there is always neceſſarily a much greater Sum of Money lying dead in the Office, than goes to pay for their Places, either for want of Securities whereon to place the Money, or from the different Claims of Perſons entitled thereto; or to ſatisfy the Demands of Creditors, and other Perſons, as they ſhall from Time to Time come in and prove their Debts, and from ſeveral other Cauſes, which I need not here enumerate.

And then, my Lords, Whether there be any great Difference between paying for their Places out of the Suitors Money, lying dead in their Hands, or raiſing ſo much Money out of their own Eſtates and Fortunes, in order to let the Suitors Money lie dead; whether a Practice of this Nature, which does no Sort of Hurt to the Suitors, is of no Advantage to the Maſters, and which the Earl himſelf was wholly a Stranger to, and which, if he had known, could not have been prevented; whether this can be heightned or improved into ſo heinous a Crime in the Earl, as to need or deſerve the moſt ſolemn Proſecution, which we are acquainted with, a Proſecution by the Repreſentatives of the whole Body of the Nation; this, my Lords, we humbly hope will deſerve to be thought of. In the mean time, as the Commons have choſen your Lordſhips to be the Judges, the Earl himſelf with the greateſt Pleaſure joins with them, and humbly appeals to your Lordſhips Juſt and Impartial Judgment.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, the Evidence, which we have next to lay before your Lordſhips, relates to the 11th Article, by which it ſtands charged that ſeveral Maſters admitted by the Noble Earl, were Perſons of ſmall Subſtance and Ability; and in that reſpect very unfit to be truſted with the Great Sums of Money, and other Effects belonging to the Suitors, which were lodged in their Hands by Order of the ſaid Court; notwithſtanding which the Noble Earl did publickly in open Court declare them to be Perſons of great Fortunes, and in every reſpect qualified for the Truſt ſo repoſed in them, to the manifeſt Deceit and Prejudice of the Suitors of the ſaid Court: But, my Lords, tho' the Charge of this Article be conceived in general Terms, yet I apprehend we are now only to account for the Abilities and Circumſtances of ſuch of the Maſters, as they have deſcended into any particular Evidence againſt, upon that Head: Now the Maſters, who have been admitted in by his Lordſhip, and againſt whom any Inſinuations of this kind have been levelled, are Mr. Kinaſton, Mr. Bennet, Mr. Elde, and Mr. Thurſton: But I ſhould in the firſt Place obſerve, as to Mr Elde and Mr. Thurſton, that there is not the leaſt Pretence of any Deficiency in either of their Offices, from any Evidence that has been yet offered by the learned Managers, they ſtand both of them without Objection in point of Subſtance; as to Mr. Kinaſton, indeed, I do own, That at the Time, when he delivered in his Accounts, there appears to have been a Deficiency in his Office; but ſince that Time he hath given ſuch Security, as the Court thought fit to accept of, for anſwering it to the Suitors concern'd. At the time of his Admiſſion he appears to have been a Man of Fortune; he had a good Eſtate in Land, and a conſiderable ſum of Money in Bank; and had a great deal of Wood upon his Eſtate: If he really was a Man of a conſiderable Fortune at that time, and if he appeared ſo, and came well recommended in other reſpects to the noble Lord, what Foundation is there left to ſupport that part of the Charge againſt the noble Earl? As to Mr. Thomas Bennet, indeed, tho' he did make an Appearance in the World, equal to a Man of Fortune, yet he now pretends it was far from being ſo, tho' he had an Eſtate in Land; yet he has told your Lordſhips it was incumbred; but, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, it doth not appear that any of theſe Incumbrances were made known to the noble Earl; on the contrary, he appeared to him in the ſame Light as in the Year 1720. when he ſaith he was worth 20,000 l. and that theſe Incumbrances being private, it is impoſſible the noble Earl ſhould then know them; we ſhall ſhew that at this time he was not only a Man of viſible Subſtance, but of real Subſtance, equal to thoſe, who are uſually admitted into theſe Offices; and if he was equal, both in Reputation and Fortune, with thoſe admitted by the noble Earl's Predeceſſors, we hope it ſhall not be imputed a Crime in him, to have trod in their ſteps in that particular: In order to make this out againſt Mr. Bennet, we ſhall prove that about the time when he applied to Hiccocks, to get back part of the 7000 l. he then declared his Subſtance was ſo good, that if he could but have 2000 l. he would pay the reſt himſelf; he denied before your Lord-ſhips that he ſaid ſo, but we have Perſons of undoubted Character to prove, that he did ſay ſo. And when that appears, we hope you will give the leſs Credit to Mr. Bennet's Teſtimony in any other particular, which concerns his Fortune; we ſhall likewiſe prove, as to Mr. Hiccocks and Mr Rogers, that the Sums of Money, which they retained, are now ſubmitted to be returned by them reſpectively to the Court, to anſwer any Deficiency, ſo far as the Eſtates of their Succeſſors ſhall fall ſhort in ſatisfying the ſame; ſo that upon the whole, the Suitors are in no poſſibility of ſuffering by any Tranſaction of Bennet or Kinaſton. We ſhall beg leave to call our Witneſſes, and prove the ſeveral Facts I have opened to your Lordſhips upon this Article.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we humbly apprehend, that in this Caſe the noble Earl is not reſponſible for the bad Circumſtances of the Party; if he, upon inquiry, have received ſuch an Account as is proper to rely upon, and to ſatisfy a reaſonable Man, it is ſufficient: The greatneſs of the Truſts repoſed in theſe Maſters, hath been magnified, and great it is; but your Lordſhips will pleaſe to conſider, that it is not to be expected from the Nature of the Thing, that Perſons of great or overgrown Fortunes, ſhould take upon them thoſe Offices. They have informed your Lordſhips, that 120,000 l. hath been in one of theſe Gentlemens Hands. I believe no Perſons of ſuch vaſt Eſtates as 100,000 or 150,000 l. would give themſelves the trouble of executing theſe Offices, attended with ſuch riſque, and requiring ſo great attendance. I believe the Office of a Maſter in Chancery will never find either ſuch buyers or ſellers; all that can be expected is, that they muſt be Men of reaſonable Fortunes, Perſons of 4 or 500 l. a Year, brought up with a liberal Education; Perſons, who are of good Characters as to their Integrity and Abilities; this is all that can be reaſonably expected, and we apprehend it hath appear'd to your Lordſhips, that theſe Maſters, which the Evidence hath been given of, were ſuch, and ſuch a Repreſentation was made of them to the noble Earl. My Lords, I muſt ſubmit it upon the Evidence given in that behalf by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons in this Proſecution, that Mr. Kinaſton did appear no way unfit, but a Perſon proper to be admitted into ſuch an Office; no Objections are made either to Mr. Elde or Mr. Thurſton As to Mr. Thomas Bennet, it will appear that his deficiency will be made good, and that is the beſt proof of his Ability; and, we hope, Mr. Kinaſton's will be ſo too: As to Mr. Thomas Bennet, he hath denied that ever he told Mr. Hiccocks, that if he would return 2000 l. he would pay the reſt: Being ask'd, whether he had declared to any Body, that he had made that offer to Mr. Hiccocks, he anſwered directly in the Negative, that he had not, no he was ſure he had not; he was asked the Queſtion over and over. But, if my Inſtructions don't fail me, we ſhall produce three Witneſſes to ſhew your Lordſhips, that Mr. Bennet declared the ſame thing over and over again, and conſequently it could not be a ſlip of his Memory.

Mr. Steele called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, as to what Reputation and Character Mr. Bennet was, in point of Fortune, when he was admitted Maſter?

Mr. Steele. Which of the Bennets?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Mr. Thomas Bennet.

Mr. Steele. It is near two Years ago ſince Mr. Thomas Bennet came to be admitted a Maſter in Chancery, he was looked upon then to be a Man of good Subſtance and of good Reputation; and ſince that he had Married a Lady of a good Fortune, he made a good Appearance in the World, and was generally eſteemed to be a Man of Subſtance.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Did he keep his Coach?

Mr. Steele. I have heard ſo; I don't know that of my own Knowledge.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, if the Councel have done, I deſire to know what Character Mr. Bennet had as to his Integrity, whether he was accounted an honeſt Man or no?

Mr. Steele. My Lords, I never heard to the contrary in my Life; nor ever knew any thing to the contrary.

Mr. Walker Sworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire that Mr. Walker will inform your Lordſhips, what he knows of any Propoſal or Agreement for the Repayment of any Money by Mr. Hiccocks?

Mr. Walker. My Lords, Mr. Hiccocks, by order of the Court of Chancery, was to be examined upon Interrogatories, whether he had paid over all the Monies and Securities of the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, to his Succeſſor Mr. Bennet? It having been alledged by Mr. Bennet, that he retained out of them 7500 l. Mr. Hiccocks did think fit to ſubmit to the Payment of that Money, to make ſo much good to the Suitors of the Court, as the Eſtate of Mr. Bennet ſhould prove defective in ſatisfying, as appears by the Petition delivered by him, and the Anſwer to the Petition.

Mr. Lutwyche. We ſhall ſee that by the Petition. We deſire that the Copy of the Petition may be read; they are giving an Account of written Evidence: I deſire to ask you, whether you are not concerned as Clerk for Mr. Hiccocks?

Mr. Walker. I am concerned for Mr. Hiccocks as his Solicitor.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether you had any Authority from Mr. Hiccocks to preſent that Petition?

Mr. Walker. I had Authority to preſent that Petition.

Mr. Lutwyche. When did you preſent the Petition?

Mr. Walker. About three or four Days ago.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire to ſee what the Petition is? It hath been preſented ſince the Great Seal was in Commiſſion: Read it.

Mr. Walker reads it.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain.

The humble Petition of John Hiccocks, Eſq; late one of the Maſters of this Court,

Sheweth,

THAT by an Order of the 23d of Feb. laſt, upon the Affidavit of Thomas Bennet, Eſq; your Petitioner's Succeſſor, (who ſwore that the Sum of 7500 l. part of the Monies belonging to the Suitors of this Court, did remain in your Petitioner's Hands, and was never paid over to him.) It was Ordered that your Petitioner ſhould be Examined upon Interrogatories, whether all the Monies, Securities, and other Effects, belonging to the Suitors of the Court, were delivered over by your Petitioner to the ſaid Thomas Bennet, and whether your Petitioner kept away any, and what part, by him.

in

That Interrogatories have been accordingly prepared, and your Petitioner is Ordered to put in his Examination, or ſtand Committed.

That your Petitioner, by Reaſon of his Indiſpoſition, is not in a Capacity to put in his Examination.

That though your Petitioner did pay over, ſatisfy, and aſſign to the ſaid Thomas Bennet, all the Monies, Effects, and Securities of the Suitors of the Court in your Petitioners Hands; and the ſaid Thomas Bennet hath given your Petitioner a Receipt in full for the ſame, yet, ſo far as the Eſtate of the ſaid Thomas Bennet ſhall fall ſhort to ſatisfy the juſt Demands of the Suitors of the Court; your Petitioner is willing to pay the Sum of 7500 l. into Court, Subject to the Order of the Court, ſo ſoon as your Petitioner can raiſe the ſame; and your Petitioner is willing to pay the Sum of 2000 l. part thereof within ten Days, and the Reſidue thereof within three Months, ſo as the ſame (as between your Petitioner and the ſaid Thomas Bennet) may not be conſtrued to extend to eaſe the ſaid Thomas Bennet's Eſtate from being liable in the firſt place to anſwer the Demands of the Suitors of the Court; but ſo as the ſame may abide as a Security to anſwer any deficiency of the ſaid Thomas Bennet's Eſtate; and to the end it may appear whether there will be any deficiency or not, that the real and perſonal Eſtate of the ſaid Thomas Bennet may be forthwith ſold, and diſpoſed of; and in the firſt place apply'd to anſwer the Demands of the Suitors of the Court; and the rather, for that your Petitioner is informed, the ſaid Tho. Bennet hath, purſuant to ſome Order of this Court, by Recognizances, and other Aſſurances, ſubjected his whole Eſtate towards making good thoſe Demands.

Your Petitioner therefore moſt humbly prays your Lordſhips, that, upon Payment into Court of the ſaid 7500 l. on the Terms aforeſaid, Subject to the further Order of the Court, all further Proceedings upon the ſaid Order, for Compelling your Petitioner to be examined upon Interrogatories, may be ſtayed.

And your Petitioner, &c.

He Reads the Order, May 8th, 1725.

UPON Payment of 3000 l. into Court, and giving Security, ſuch as Mr. Holford ſhall approve of, for Payment of the further Sum of 4500 l. alſo into Court, in a Month, both Sums to be Subject to the further Order of the Court; let all Proceedings for the Compelling the Petitioner to be examined upon the Interrogatories before the Maſter, be ſtayed. Hereof give notice forthwith

J. Jekyll, C. S.
R. Raymond, C. S.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I would be glad to know, Whether we can rely upon this as an Authentick Order. Did he examine it?

Mr. Walker. The Original Petition and Anſwer are in the Regiſter's Office, to draw up an Order.

Mr. Lutwyche. Is it a right, a true Copy?

Mr. Walker. It is.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did you examine it?

Mr. Walker. Yes, I did.

Mr. Com. Serj. If it is not wholly immaterial to examine into the Circumſtances of this Gentleman, I would ask whether Mr. Hiccocks is a Perſon of Ability, ſufficient to make good this Sum?

Mr. Walker. My Lords, I don't know the Circumſtances of Mr. Hiccocks, nor his Riches. I believe he is able to do what he hath propoſed. I believe he hath paid the 3000*l.* in Money this Morning; he told me he would; and he hath propoſed Security for the Remainder 4500 l. and I believe the Security will be approved of.

Mr. Lutwyche. If they have done, I deſire he may be asked, How long ago it was ſince Mr. Hiccocks was ordered to be examined upon Interrogatories?

Mr. Walker. I think the Order is dated the 29th of February.

Mr. Lutwyche. And how long ago is it ſince this Propoſal was made?

Mr. Walker. The Petition was preſented the 8th of this Inſtant May.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was the Petition preſented before his Examination? When was it anſwered?

Mr. Walker. It was anſwered the 8th of May. It was preferred a little while before. I believe, two or three Days. There was an Order, That Mr. Hiccocks ſhould put in his Examination in four Days, or ſtand committed; thereupon this Petition was preſented.

Mr. Lutwyche. I think it was on Payment of ſo much Money, and giving Security for the reſt, that all Proceedings were to ſtay. I don't find Mr. Walker can ſay the Money is paid, or Security given.

Mr. Walker. Mr. Hiccocks told me the 3000 l. was paid, and I know he hath offered Security for the 4500 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. One or two Securities?

Mr. Walker. I believe only Sir John Buckworth.

Mr.

Mr. Richard Rogers ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked what he knows of the Payment of any Money, or the Directing the Payment of any Money into Court by Mr. Rogers, the late Maſter, in Satisfaction of the Deficiency of Mr Kinaſton?

Mr. Rogers. I did, my Lords, by the Direction of Mr. Rogers. the late Maſter, prefer a Petition about the latter End of April laſt, upon the 28th. or 29th of April, to the Right Honourable the Lords Commiſſioners, and thereby did offer to give a Recognizance to make good to the Suitors of the Court any Sum not exceeding 6000 l. as the Eſtate of Mr. Kinaſton ſhould prove Defective in Anſwering the Effects of the Suitors of the Court. The Petition is anſwered, and I believe they deſign to pay the Money.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Have you the Petition?

Mr. Lutwyche. Is the Order Drawn up?

Mr. Rogers. The Petition it ſelf I have in my Hand.

The Clerk Reads.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain.

The humble Petition of William Rogers, Eſq; late one of the Maſters of the High-Court of Chancery,

Sheweth,

THAT by an Order, made by your Lordſhips the 20th of January laſt, it was Ordered that Mr. Kinaſton, one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, who ſucceeded your Petitioner, ſhould in a Week depoſite the Sum of 26,908*l.* 11 s. 3 d. ¼ in the Bank of England (being the Ballance of the Account of Money and Securities of and belonging to divers Suitors of the ſaid Court, paid into the Hands of the ſaid Maſter Kinaſton, and your Petitioner) Or in Default thereof, that the ſaid Maſter Kinaſton ſhould enter into a Recognizance, in the Penalty of 53,817*l.* with two or more Sureties to anſwer and pay the ſame as your Lordſhips ſhould direct.

That the ſaid Kinaſton not having paid the ſaid 26,908*l.* 11 s. 3 d. ¼ into the Bank, or given Security for the ſame, as the ſaid Order directed; and having before propoſed towards Satisfaction of the ſaid 26,908 l. 11 s. 3 d. ¼ to aſſign over a Debt of 20,850 l. owing to him from one De la Hay, for the Benefit of the ſaid Suitors; it was by an Order made by your Lordſhips the 29th of Jan laſt, Ordered, That the ſaid Maſter Kinaſton ſhould aſſign over De la Hay's Debt to Mr. Holford, one other of the Maſter's of the ſaid Court, for the Benefit of the ſaid Suitors, and ſhould give his own Recognizance for the ſaid 26,908*l.* 11 s. 3 d. ¼ in the Penalty of 53,817*l.* And upon his ſo doing, the Time for his performing the ſaid former Order ſhould be enlarged to the Wedneſday following.

That by another Order made the 3d of Feb. laſt, your Lordſhips Ordered, That upon Mr. Kinaſton's aſſigning of the ſaid Debt, and upon his ſignifying his Conſent to be examined upon Interrogatories for Diſcovery of all other his real and perſonal Eſtate, and that the ſame might be aſſigned, and conveyed to the ſaid Maſter Holford in Truſt for the ſaid Suitors, the time for performing the former Order ſhould be enlarged to the Wedneſday following.

That purſuant to the ſaid Order, the ſaid John Kinaſton aſſigned over the ſaid De la Hay's Debt, but the ſame not being ſufficient to anſwer the ſaid Sum of 26,908*l.* 11 s. 3 d. ¼ Nicholas Paxton, Sollicitor for, and on Behalf of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, on the 15th of Feb. laſt, preferred his Petition to your Lordſhips, ſetting forth the ſeveral Proceedings aforeſaid; and that it appeared by Mr. Kinaſton's Affidavit that 6000 l. part of the ſaid 26,908 l. 11 s. 3 d. ¼ was retained by your Petitioner, at the time your Petitioner ſurrendered his ſaid Office to the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton; and that the ſame ſtill remained in your Petitioners Hands: It was therefore prayed that your Petitioner might forthwith pay the ſame for the Benefit of the ſaid Suitors, or to ſuch Perſons, and in ſuch manner, as your Lordſhips ſhould direct.

That upon hearing the ſaid Petitioner, upon the 23d. of Feb. laſt, your Lordſhips were pleaſed to Order your Petitioner ſhould be forthwith ſtrictly examined before Mr. Holford, one of the Maſters of this Court, whether all the Monies, Securities, and Effects, belonging to the ſaid Suitors, were delivered over by your Petitioner to the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton, and whether he kept any, and what part thereof by him.

That in purſuance of the laſt Order Interrogatories have been exhibited for the examination of your Petitioner; and in Caſe your Petitioner ſhould put in his Examination thereto, he doubts not, but it would appear that your Petitioner hath acted with great Juſtice towards the ſaid Maſter Kinaſton, and that Mr. Kinaſton ought to anſwer and make good the ſaid 6000 l. to the Suitors of the ſaid Court; however your Petitioner being unwilling that any part of the Deficienty in the ſaid Maſter Kinaſton's Office ſhould be imputed to your Petitioner, or that the Suitors of the Court ſhould be put to any Expence or Trouble, in making any further Enquiry touching the ſaid 6000 l. your Petitioner is willing (if your Lordſhips ſhall think fit) to give his own Recognizance, or a good and ſufficient Mortgage, to be approved of by one of the Maſters of this Court, to ſuch Perſon or Perſons as your Lordſhips ſhall direct, to anſwer and make good to the Suitors of this Court any Sum not exceeding 6000 l. as the Eſtate and Effects of the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton ſhall fall ſhort of ſatisfying the ſaid 26,908 l. 11 s. 3 d. ¼, which he was ordered to depoſite in the Bank of England as aforeſaid; or if your Lordſhips ſhall think it more for the Benefit and Security of the ſaid Suitors, that your Petitioner ſhould bring 6000 l. into Court, your Petitioner is willing to bring in ſuch Sum for the Purpoſe aforeſaid, having a reaſonable Time allowed him to raiſe the ſame.

Foraſmuch therefore as it is not pretended, but that your Petitioner has paid and delivered over to Mr. Kinaſton all the Money and Securities belonging to the Suitors of this Court, which were in your Petitioner's Hands at the Time when he ſurrendred his ſaid Office to the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton, except the Sum of 6000 l.

Your Petitioner humbly prays your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to make ſuch Order in the Premiſes, as to your Lordſhips ſhall ſeem meet; and that in the mean Time all Proceedings upon the ſaid Order of the 23d of February laſt, for examining your Petitioner upon Interrogatories, may be ſtayed.

And your Petitioner, &c.

The Clerk reads the Order. 29th of April, 1725.

Upon the Petitioner's paying the ſaid 6000 l. into Court, ſubject to the further Order of this Court, let all Proceedings upon the ſaid Order of the 23d of February laſt, for examining the Petitioner upon Interrogatories be ſtayed. Hereof give Notice forthwith.

There was another Petition preferred, but never anſwered.

Clerk

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain.

The Humble Petition of William Rogers, Eſq; late one of the Maſters of this Court,

SHEWETH,

THAT Mr. Paxton, in behalf of the Suitors upon Mr. Kinaſton, being 26,928 l. 11 s. 3 d. deficient in his Accounts, to anſwer the Suitors Monies in his Hands, having, by his Petition to your Lordſhips, repreſented (inter alia) That your Petitioner, upon ſurrendring your Petitioner's Office to him, detained, and ſtill hath in his Hands, the Sum of 6000 l. of the ſaid Suitors Money; your Lordſhips, upon hearing the ſaid Petition, on the 23d of February laſt, were pleaſed to Order your Petitioner ſhould be examined before Mr. Holford, one of the Maſters of this Court, Whether all the Monies, Securities and Effects, belonging to the ſaid Suitors, were delivered over by your Petitioner to the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton?

That your Petitioner, on the 29th Day of April laſt, preferred the annexed Petition to your Lordſhips; and your Lordſhips were, thereupon, pleaſed to make the Order thereunder ſubſcribed.

That your Petitioner is informed, the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton hath, purſuant to a former Order of your Lordſhips, by Recognizance and Aſſurances, ſubjected his whole Eſtate towards making good his ſaid Deficiency.

That your Petitioner, upon ſurrendring his Office, received from the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton, proper Diſcharges for all Monies, Securities and Effects of the ſaid Suitors, then in your Petitioner's Hands, which your Petitioner is ready to produce and prove: And the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton from that Time, never pretended but that the Account delivered in to him, contained a full Account of all the Money, Effects and Securities of the Suitors of the Court in your Petitioner's Hands, except the Sum of 70 l. or thereabouts, which your Petitioner was always ready to pay him, provided he would have given your Petitioner an Account wherein the ſaid Omiſſion or Miſtake conſiſted; and your Petitioner, upon Examination of his Vouchers, found the ſame to be true; but the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton hath hitherto neglected ſo to do, though your Petitioner hath ſent to him ſeveral Times for that Purpoſe.

That your Petitioner, upon the Terms mentioned in the annexed Petition, is willing to pay a ready Obedience to your Lordſhips Order thereupon; and for that Purpoſe, now humbly offers, in Six Days time, to pay 2000 l. part of the ſaid 6000 l. into Court, ſubject to the further Order of the Court, ſo far as may be neceſſary to make good any Deficiency to the Suitors of the Court, which Mr. Kinaſton's Eſtate ſhall not be ſufficient to anſwer.

And your Petitioner humbly prays, he may have a Month's Time to pay in the remaining 4000 l. (your Petitioner being obliged to borrow the ſame on his Eſtate) and that all Proceedings on the ſaid Order of the 23*d of* February laſt, againſt your Petitioner, may, in the mean Time, be ſtayed: And your Petitioner further humbly prays your Lordſhips, That the ſaid Order, made by your Lordſhips on the 29*th of* April laſt, may be ſo far explained, that as between the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton and your Petitioner, the ſame may not be conſtrued to extend to eaſe the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton's Eſtate from being liable, in the firſt Place, to anſwer the Demands of the Suitors of the Court; or, if all, or any Part of the ſaid 6000 l. ſhall be applied for that Purpoſe; that your Petitioner may then ſtand in the Place of the Suitors of the Court, to have Satisfaction out of the Eſtate of the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton, for all, or ſo much of the ſaid 6000 l. as ſhall be ſo applied; and that the ſaid 6000 l. ſo to be depoſited by your Petitioner, or any Part thereof, may not be applied towards making good the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton's Deficiency, till after Sale and Diſpoſal of all the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton's real and perſonal Eſtate for that Purpoſe.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Is there any Order upon this?

Mr. Rogers. This was never anſwered.

Mr. Lutwyche. If they have done, I deſire he may be asked, if he hath given any Notice to the Sollicitor of the other Side, of the Order on the firſt Petition?

Mr. Rogers. I did acquaint Mr. Paxton, that I had ſuch an Order; but I did not ſerve it upon him.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire to aſk you, Whether, when you told Mr. Paxton of it, he inſiſted upon a formal Service?

Mr. Rogers. Mr. Paxton ſaid, Let it be done as ſoon as poſſible.

Mr. Com. Serj. What Anſwer did you give to Mr. Paxton, when he deſired it might be done as ſoon as poſſible?

Mr. Rogers. I told him, I was raiſing the Money by Direction of Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Com. Serj. I ask you, If you had any Directions from Mr. Rogers, for the Payment of, or for raiſing the Money?

Mr. Rogers. Yes, I had. I believe it will be paid in a Day or two. I can't directly ſay what Day. Such a Sum is not immediately raiſed.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, Whether there is any Reaſon to doubt of his Ability to raiſe the Money?

Mr. Rogers. I believe he is able to give a Security; but, as he lives in the Country, he may not be able at preſent to pay ſo much Money; but he is now in Town, and endeavouring to raiſe the Money.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we beg leave to call two or three Gentlemen, with reſpect to Mr. Thomas Bennet, what he hath ſaid; and that he ſaid he was able to pay all the reſt of the Money, if Mr. Hiccocks would pay 2000 l.

Mr. Holford called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we beg leave to begin with Mr. Holford, and to ask him, Whether he was not employed, or concerned as a Friend to Mr. Thomas Bennet, to go to Mr. Hiccocks, and what Propoſals he was to make to Mr. Hiccocks?

Mr. Holford. Preſently after the Article was delivered in by Mr. Thomas Bennet, relating to the Money he ſaid was in the Hands of Perſons of Ability and Subſtance, to the Judges and Gentlemen of the Bank, Mr. Bennet did ſend to me, to deſire I would ſpeak to Mr. Hiccocks, that if he would pay him but 2000 l. he would pay the Remainder of the Money. I did not much care to undertake it; but upon ſome Importunity, I did go upon the ſaid Meſſage; and it was this, That he deſired me to tell Mr. Hiccocks, that if he would pay him back 2000 l. he could or would take care that the reſt ſhould be paid, and Mr. Hiccocks ſhould not be troubled about the Remainder.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, Whether he had any Diſcourſe with Mr. Thomas Bennet, concerning what paſſed between him and Mr. Hiccocks?

Mr. Holford. Mr. Hiccocks told me ——

Mr. Lutwyche. That is no Evidence.

Mr. Holford. I am only relating the Anſwer he returned to my Meſſage; which was, That Mr. Bennet had given in that Article, and brought his Name in Queſtion, without ever acquainting him of it; and therefore he would never have any thing to do with him. I did give him that Anſwer, and never troubled myſelf any more about it.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire Mr. Holford would recollect the Time.

Mr. Holford. I believe it was the next Day after he had given in that Article.

Mr. Lutwyche. I think they call this Witneſs to prove a Contradiction in Mr. Bennet's. Mr. Holford ſays, He ſaid he was willing, he would take care the reſt ſhould be paid. I deſire to know, Whether he declared he had the Money to pay, the Money in his own Hands?

Mr. Holford. No, my Lords, I can't ſay he told me ſo.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to ask him, If Mr. Bennet did not expreſly tell him, That he was able to pay the Money; or if Mr. Holford would have gone upon the Errand, without being ſatisfied that he was able to pay the Money?

Mr. Holford. Mr. Hiccocks was my old Acquaintance and Friend, I did not intend to deceive him; if I had not believed what Mr. Bennet ſaid to be true, and that he could make good what he at that Time ſent me to deſire Mr. Hiccocks to accept, I would not have gone on that Errand to him.

Mr. Thurſton called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Thurſton may inform your Lordſhips what he hath heard Mr. Thomas Bennet ſay, in relation to Mr. Hiccocks, about his paying back 2000 l.

Mr. Thurſton. I do remember Mr. Thomas Bennet told me, and I think I was then ſitting in the publick Office, that if Hiccocks (as I think his Expreſſion was) would pay him back 2000 l. he would make up the reſt himſelf.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire Mr. Thurſton to explain himſelf, whether he expreſſed himſelf in that manner that Mr. Thurſton apprehended he was able to do it?

Mr. Thurſton. I can't ſwear critically to the laſt Words, that he would make up the reſt himſelf; but he ſpoke in ſuch Words, that I underſtood he meant ſo; that was the Senſe of thoſe Words, as I have delivered it now to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Had you any Diſcourſe at any other Time with Mr. Thomas Bennet about it?

Mr. Thurſton. I believe I had ſome Diſcourſe with Mr. Thomas Bennet at another Time; and I asked him, Why he would not pay in as much as he had undertaken, if Mr. Hiccocks had paid him 2000 l.? The Reply he gave me was, All he had in the World would not do it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, if he had any Diſcourſe with Mr. Thomas Bennet at any Time, about his Ability to pay this Money, or whether he was able to pay it?

Mr. Thurſton. I had no Diſcourſe with Mr. Thomas Bennet directly, of his Ability to pay in this Money, when theſe Accompts were called for; but I do remember, at a preceding Time, he was talking of Hiccocks's detaining his Money by way of Retainer; explaining the Reaſon, why he paid for the Place that he bought of Mr. Hiccocks out of the Suitors Money, that it was the moſt Compendious Method of doing in that Caſe, and prevented the Trouble of Mortgaging his Eſtate.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Did he ſay any thing in caſe of his Death, Whether he ſhould leave ſufficient to ſatisfy it?

Mr. Thurſton. He ſaid at that Time, if he died, there would be Eſtate ſufficient to anſwer it; therefore he had the leſs Occaſion to trouble himſelf to raiſe the Money, but to pay it in the particular Manner I have mentioned.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to ask him, If Mr. Bennet explained to him in what Manner the Money was to be raiſed, to make good the Deficiency?

Mr. Thurſton. He did not at all explain to me, how he was to raiſe it.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to ask you more particularly, Whether he mentioned to have inſured any Money upon his Life?

Mr. Thurſton. Not at that Time, as I remember; I have heard him at other Times talk of inſuring of Money on his Life.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was the firſt Time that Mr. Bennet told you, that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay him Two thouſand Pounds, he would make up the reſt himſelf?

Mr. Thurſton. My Lords, I can't remember diſtinctly the Time, never having imagined I ſhould be called upon to repeat it on this Occaſion; but it muſt neceſſarily be after the Accompts were given in before the Judges. I can't exactly remember the Time, or Day, or Week.

Mr. Elde called again.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Elde may inform your Lordſhips what Diſcourſe he had with Mr. Bennet, in relation to the Money in Mr. Hiccocks's Hands?

Mr. Elde. Some ſmall Time after I had given in my Accompt, I ſaw Mr. Bennet; and he came up to me and ſaid, That it was hard that he could not have any Money from Mr. Hiccocks. He ſaid, If he would pay him 2000 l. he would, or could pay the reſt. I do not remember which.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether he thinks he might have been able to pay it, if he had thought fit?

Mr. Elde. I know nothing of Mr. Bennet's Circumſtances; I am as little acquainted with him, as with any I muſt neceſſarily have Correſpondence with.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with any further Evidence on the 11th Article, in which we think we have ſufficiently contradicted Mr. Thomas Bennet, as to the Charge he hath made on the Noble Lord. As to the 12th Article, that principally relates to that Part, That the Purchaſe Money was paid out of the Suitors Money; that is a Fact that lies upon the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons to prove: It is impoſſible for Us to prove a Negative, they are to prove the Affirmative, and they have not attempted to prove it by any Witneſs; but by Mr. Thomas Bennet: Now this being a Fact that reſts intirely upon Mr. Bennet's Evidence, we ſubmit, Whether your Lordſhips can believe any thing upon the Credit of his Teſtimony?

Mr. Com.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, We humbly apprehend the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, by joining theſe Two Articles together, did it as if they were the ſame, and did depend upon one another: for unleſs the Matter in the 11th Article be eſtabliſhed, what was done on the 12th, will be of no great Significancy; For if Perſons of good Ability, who are reſponſible, and fit to anſwer the Money that comes to their Hands, be admitted to be Maſters, it is not very material whether the Forms of transferring in like Tranſactions of that Nature are ſtrictly purſued or no; becauſe the Perſon, being ſufficient and reſponſible, will anſwer that Money that is ſo detained. I chooſe to call them Forms; for, with Submiſſion, if we examine them, they are Forms, and nothing elſe: whether they take all the Money from the preceding Maſter, or replace with the Succeſſor's own Money, what is detained by the Predeceſſor, it comes to the ſelf ſame Thing, and are only different Forms or Methods of Payment. Upon the whole, we apprehend, We have eſtabliſhed our Anſwer to the 11th Article; we think the other follows of Courſe; and that there is no Neceſſity to give your Lordſhips any further Trouble on this Head; but that the Noble Earl will ſtand clear as to any Accuſation on theſe Two Articles.

Then all Perſons concerned in the Impeachment, were directed to withdraw, and then the Houſe adjourned to Ten o' Clock the next Morning.

Friday, 14 May, 1725. The Seventh Day.

THE Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence; as alſo another Proclamation, That all Perſons concerned, were to take Notice, That Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now ſtood upon his Tryal; and they might come forth in order to make good the Charge.

L. Ch. J. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, you may go on.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, We who are Councel for the Noble Earl within the Bar, beg Leave to proceed to his Defence againſt the 13th and 14th Articles of the Commons Charge.

My Lords, The Facts contained in theſe Two Articles, are laid to be done with a View of concealing a Deficiency, that had happened in the Office of Mr. Dormer, a Maſter of the Court; upon whoſe Failure it is charged, that there was a total Neglect, either to ſecure his Perſon or Effects, or to enter into any Inquiry into the Deficiency: And that altho' the State of this Affair was fully known to the Earl of Macclesfield, yet a Declaration was afterwards made in open Court, That Mr. Dormer was only gone into the Country to take the Air; That he would return again in a little while, and all would be well: And that in further Proſecution of this Endeavour to conceal the Deficiency in Dormer's Office, a precarious and trifling Compoſition was made with a Creditor of Mr. Dormer's; and this without any Notice to the Suitors of the Court.

My Lords, I ſhall, for my Part, confine myſelf at preſent to theſe Two Articles only, reſerving any thing I may have to offer in general to the Cloſe of the Defence; but before I proceed to obſerve upon the Evidence brought to ſupport the Charge contained in theſe Two Articles, it will be proper to take Notice to your Lordſhips, That the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, have not offered one Tittle of Proof, as to the Declaration pretended to be made, relating to Mr. Dormer's being gone to take the Air, though they were pleaſed to inlarge upon it in their Opening; but we have the Satisfaction to know, That we are before your Lordſhips, who are incapable of receiving any Impreſſions from Facts that are barely opened, and not proved; and therefore we reſt aſſured, that no Weight will be laid upon this Circumſtance, ſince no Evidence has been produced in Support of this Part of the Charge.

My Lords, As to the other Matters contained in theſe Articles, we humbly hope to give your Lordſhips abundant Satisfaction in the Noble Earl's Behaviour on that Occaſion; that all the proper Steps were taken to ſecure the Intereſt of the Suitors; and that, if there ſtill remains any Deficiency, it is not to be imputed to any Neglect of the Noble Earl within the Bar.

Your Lordſhips were pleaſed to obſerve in the Courſe of the Evidence produced by the Honourable Managers for the Houſe of Commons, That Mr. Dormer's Failure happened about Chriſtmas, 1720. My Lords, it was about that Time that Mr. Wilſon, who had large Effects of Mr. Dormer's in his Hands, ſtopped Payment; which unfortunately obliged Mr. Dormer, without the Knowledge or Suſpicion of any one, to retire himſelf to Holland; and ſoon after, Notice was given of it to Mr. Cottingham, who immediately acquainted the Earl of Macclesfield with it.

Upon this, my Lords, no Time was loſt; for the Two Senior Maſters, Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers, were appointed to inquire into Mr. Dormer's Affairs: His Chambers were ſearched; the Transfer of any Stock in the publick Funds was ſtopp'd; and all Endeavours uſed to procure a full Satisfaction for the Suitors of the Court: But, my Lords, though theſe Methods were very proper to prevent the embezeling of Mr. Dormer's Effects, yet your Lordſhips will readily perceive, that no Steps, that could be taken whilſt Mr. Dormer was on the other Side of the Water, could be in any Degree effectual towards the Payment of his Debts.

And therefore, my Lords, it was, that upon a Propoſal of Mr. Dormer's, to come over and diſcover his Effects for the Benefit of the Suitors, in caſe he might be aſſured of his Liberty, and not be left to die in a Gaol in his old Age (as himſelf expreſſes it) the Noble Earl within the Bar, was prevailed upon to give him thoſe Aſſurances; but upon Condition, That he made a full Diſcovery, and aſſigned over all he had.

Suppoſe, my Lords, the Propoſal had not been complied with, would the Suitors have been in a better Condition than they now are in? The Perſon of Mr. Dormer was out of Reach; the Stock could not be transferred without his Preſence or Conſent, nor were there any Means to procure it under theſe Circumſtances, without ſome Compliance on the Side of the Noble Earl. To ſay, My Lords (and it was only ſaid) That Dr. Eddisbury's Perſon was ſecured, is, in my humble Apprehenſion, an Argument of no Weight in this Caſe, ſince it does not appear, that he was out of the Reach of the Court before his Failure, lure; and, I am perſuaded, the Gentlemen, who mentioned this Inſtance, don't deſire to have it thought, That the Noble Lord, who then preſided, was capable of ſo great a Breach of Faith, as to deprive him of his Liberty after a Promiſe to the contrary: It muſt be ſubmitted, therefore, to your Lordſhips, whether the committing a Man in the Power of the Court, was a Precedent that could be followed in the Caſe of Mr. Dormer.

My Lords, To finiſh this Part of the Defence in not ſecuring the Perſon of Mr. Dormer, I ſhall beg Leave only to obſerve, That though it is alledged in the Articles, and was inſiſted on in the Opening and Summing up, That Application was made to the Earl of Macclesfield for that Purpoſe, yet the Honourable Managers forgot to call any Witneſſes to the Proof of that Particular; which muſt therefore reſt upon the Denial in the Anſwer of the Noble Earl.

My Lords, It was inſiſted upon, That Mr. Dormer had not complied with his own Propoſal in diſcovering and delivering up his whole Effects; and for that Purpoſe a Witneſs was called to inform your Lordſhips of a very great Diſcovery that has been ſince made of a Quantity of Hops, that belonged to Mr. Dormer: Your Lordſhips remember how very lamely they were proved to belong to Mr. Dormer, and how reaſonable an Account was given of their being kept ſo long in Hopes of a better Market. My Lords, we ſhall not preſume to entertain your Lordſhips with any Counter Proof of ſuch a trifling Evidence (as a learned Manager was pleaſed to call it) but beg Leave to infer from thence, That it is evident a more than ordinary Care was taken in looking after Mr. Dormer's Effects, ſince, after Four Years, which have paſt from the Time of aſſigning his Eſtate, a few muſty Hops are all that are diſcovered.

My Lords, We humbly hope to make it fully appear to your Lordſhips, That the complying with Mr. Dormer's Propoſal was the only Means to procure any Satisfaction: Had not Mr. Dormer been induced to come over, his Books and Accounts would never have appeared; and had he died Abroad, as he did ſoon after his coming Home, I am perſuaded the Deficiency would have been much greater: And if a full Diſcovery of his Effects was not made (which, however, I apprehend there is no Foundation to believe, after the Hops are laid out of the Caſe) the ſame will appear to be owing to his Death, which happened in a ſhort Time after his Return.

My Lords, The ſeveral Steps that were taken towards ſecuring the Effects of Mr. Dormer, muſt neceſſarily promulge his Failure in ſome Meaſure; the Chambers could not be ſearched; there could not be Caveats enter'd in the Books of all the publick Funds; nor could Lockman be caution'd againſt expecting any more out of the Effects of Mr. Dormer, without making ſome Noiſe, and giving People Notice: And, therefore, when we have made out theſe Facts, I humbly hope, the Noble Earl will ſtand acquitted of any Deſign to conceal the State of Dormer's Office, in Prejudice of the Suitors; but that, conſidering all the Circumſtances of the Caſe, he took the wiſeſt and propereſt Courſe to ſecure as ample a Satisfaction for the Suitors, as it was in his Power to do.

My Lords, The 14th Article, relating to the Compoſition with Wilſon, will give me no Occaſion to take up much of your Lordſhips Time. It is called a precarious and trifling Compoſition, and was aggravated in the Opening, and ſo, of courſe, in the ſumming up, by a Matter, which they failed in the Proof of, That that Wilſon was ſuffered to compound this Debt, though he paid others their whole Demand with Intereſt.

My Lords, The Witneſs, who was called to prove this, did by no means come up to what was opened: He did, indeed, ſay, That he was informed, That Wilſon had paid ſome Perſons their whole Debt; but he, at the ſame Time, acquainted your Lordſhips, That theſe were ſmall Debts; and that he did not pay them out of his own Effects, but from a Supply adminiſtred by a Friend, only to give him a Credit at his ſetting up again; and the unfortunate End of this Man (of which I am juſt now informed) is an unanſwerable Proof of his Inability to pay the Whole.

My Lords, As a further Argument to prove the Reaſonableneſs of this Compoſition, I beg Leave to appeal to another Part of the Evidence produc'd on this Article by the Managers of the Houſe of Commons; whereby it appeared, That Mr. Wilſon's Books were peruſed by two Maſters, and himſelf was put upon his Oath; and that he ſwore the Compoſition he then offered, was all he was able to make; which I humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhips, as an Anſwer to what an Honourable Manager was pleaſed to object, when he inſiſted, that there ought to have been a Commiſſion of Bankruptcy againſt Wilſon, that thereby his Effects might have been diſcovered upon Oath.

My Lords, There were many other Creditors of Mr. Wilſon's, beſides Mr. Dormer, who might have applied for a Commiſſion of Bankruptcy, if it would have been for their Advantage; but, as every-body is acquainted with the great Expence and Delay of ſuch a Procedure, I believe they will be thought to have taken the wiſeſt Courſe: Here was all the Benefit of a Commiſſion, by the putting Wilſon upon his Oath, and none of the Expence and Delay that attend ſuch an Inquiry.

My Lords, Another Thing opened, and not proved, is, That at the Time of this Compoſition, Poulter, who was Wilſon's Debtor, was worth nothing: It is true, my Lords, he was afterwards in Execution, and eſcaped; but if we make it appear to your Lordſhips, That at the Time of the Compoſition he was a viſible Perſon, and not ſuſpected, I humbly hope, whatever has happened ſubſequent to the Compoſition, will be no Ingredient in ſhewing it to have been a trifling and precarious one at the Time of making it.

My Lords, I beg Leave humbly to obſerve, That the Honourable Managers have not been pleaſed to inſtance, how the Suitors would have been in a better Condition, in caſe this Compoſition had not been made: Could they have ſhewn your Lordſhips, that if Part of the Debt had not been taken, the Whole might have been obtained, I muſt confeſs, there would have been ſome Reaſon to have called this a trifling Compoſition; but, ſince nothing of that Nature has been attempted, I muſt ſubmit the whole Tranſaction, upon what I have already offered, to have been a Tranſaction moſt for the Advantage of the Suitors, conſidering the Circumſtances that attended this Compoſition.

My Lords, An Honourable Manager, who ſpoke Second upon this Article, was pleaſed to ſay, That by this Compoſition the Suitors were tied down to a certain Loſs of Half their Demand. My Lords, I humbly apprehend the Conſequence to be directly otherwiſe; and that the Suitors are not tied down at all: As they were no Parties to the Compoſition, they were not bound by it; nor is Mr. Wilſon, by this Compoſition, in any degree diſcharged as to the Suitors of the Court; ſo that if Wilſon be able to pay the Whole, he is ſtill as liable to the Demands of the Suitors, as if this Compoſition had not been made; and if this be ſo, it will be to the Advantage of the Suitors, that they had no Notice, which, however, I apprehend, was, in the Nature of the Thing, impracticable.

My Lords, It was inſiſted upon, That the Petitions, and Orders, and Reports on this Occaſion, were in an unuſual and clandeſtine Manner; and a Certificate has been read to your Lordſhips to prove, That they were never filed and regiſtred, as is uſual in other Caſes: But do they, my Lords, pretend to ſay, That this was by the Order, or with the Privity of the Earl of Macclesfield? The Buſineſs of a Chancellor, is to make Orders; but I never yet heard it was his Duty to ſee them drawn up and regiſtred; and therefore, if there was any thing unuſual in this, it is not to be imputed to the Neglect of the Noble Earl, unleſs it was proved to have been by his expreſs Direction.

My Lords, It has already appeared, that this Compoſition, and the Proceedings upon it, did not proceed from the Noble Earl; but were propoſed to him; Mr Edwards did acquaint your Lordſhips, That it was himſelf, who firſt propoſed it to the Earl, after having adviſed with Mr. Hiccocks, who put him into that Method.

This, my Lords, is the Nature of our Defence againſt the 13th and 14th Articles of the Commons Charge: We humbly hope the ſeveral Steps that were taken, will appear to have been for the Benefit and Advantage of the Suitors, and with no other View, than the ſecuring them their whole Demand; that the Compoſition ſo much complained of, was given into, only as a Means towards the attaining that End, and could in no Event be prejudicial to the Suitors of the Court, as the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons would repreſent it to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Dormer Parkhurſt ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Parkhurſt may be asked, What Converſation paſſed between him and Mr. Dormer, previous to his going Abroad, and upon what Occaſion he was obliged to go Abroad?

Mr. Parkhurſt. Mr. Dormer came to me about the latter End of November, 1720, at my Chambers. I had then ſome-body elſe with me; upon that Account he ſaid nothing to me, but deſired I would come next Morning early to him. I went, and when I came to him (he lived then in Chambers in Lincoln's-Inn) he ſhut the Door, and told me, he had a Thing of great Importance to communicate to me in Relation to himſelf; and then told me, he deſigned to go Abroad: He ſaid Mr. Wilſon, his Goldſmith, the Day before had been with him (this was on a Sunday Morning, and he had been with him the Saturday before) and had acquainted him, That the Monday following he ſhould be obliged to ſhut up Shop, and ſtop Payment: He had a great deal of Money in his Hands, and he was afraid, that as ſoon as it was known, that Mr. Wilſon was unable to pay; the Sollicitors, and Practicers belonging to the Court, who knew he kept Mr. Dormer's Caſh, would immediately be alarmed; and that Application would be made thereon, to my Lord Chancellor; and he believed, that the firſt Thing to be done, in relation to himſelf, would be to confine him; and that there would be an Order for his being committed; and therefore to prevent that (for he could not live a Week without Air and Liberty) he was reſolved to withdraw himſelf, and retire to ſome Place or other. Upon this, I expreſſed a great deal of Concern, and endeavoured to perſuade him againſt it: I deſired him to make his Circumſtances known to my Lord Chancellor and the Maſters: He ſaid No; he was ſure the Conſequence would be his Confinement, and was come to a Determination with himſelf, to ſecure his Perſon; his Uneaſineſs, was from the Fear, that he ſhould be confined; but he would leave every thing fairly behind him, and hereafter come over and obey any Order from my Lord Chancellor; but the firſt Thing he would do, he was reſolved to withdraw, to ſecure himſelf from being Confined.

Mr. Serj Probyn. What happened after he was gone Abroad? and what Notice was taken of it?

Mr. Parkhurſt. In a little time after this, I underſtood he had put this Reſolution in Execution, and had withdrawn himſelf. He had deſired me, that I ſhould not mention it to any Body; and gave out by his Clerk, that he was gone into the Country. I did, after this, in about three Weeks, receive a Letter from him, that he was then at Rotterdam; and there was a Letter incloſed, which he deſired me to ſhew to ſome of the Maſters. I think I ſhewed it to Mr. Rogers; afterwards, according to his Directions in the Letter to me, I carried it to Mr. Cottingham. It was directed to Mr. Cottingham, who was then Secretary to my Lord Chancellor; I carried the Letter to him, and left it with him.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If you can, recollect what were the Particulars of that Letter, the Contents of it, relating to any Terms of his coming over again.

Mr Parkhurſt. It is a great while ago; I have but a faint Remembrance of it; but I think it was much to the ſame Purpoſe with what he communicated to me at firſt, after he had acquainted me with the unhappy Affair, as hath been mentioned. He ſaid he had a great Sum of Money in Mr. Wilſon's Hands; and when he found Wilſon unable to pay, he was apprehenſive of an immediate Confinement, which he could not poſſibly bear; therefore he had withdrawn himſelf; but that he had left his own Eſtate intire behind him, and every thing relating to the Suitors; and he was willing to come over to give an Account of the State of the Office, and of his own Eſtate; and he was willing to make over all his own Eſtate, to anſwer the Deficiency of the Office, as far as it would go, and to do every thing the Court ſhould think fit to order him, provided he might have his Liberty both before and after: He deſired he might not be confined, and he would do every Thing that the Court would order him to do, or ſhould be deſired of him, as much as if he was confined.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We desire he may be asked, If he knew how it was, that Mr. Wilson came to have so much of Mr. Dormer's Effects in his Hands, and upon what Account?

Mr. Parkhurst. I did not know, till this Affair happened of Wilson's failing, what Money he had in his Hands belonging to Mr. Dormer. I used to see Mr. Wilson with him; I knew Mr. Wilson had Cash of his in his Hands; but afterwards, by way of Justification of himself, for losing so much Money, I heard him say, It was an unlucky Accident, he had a considerable Sum of Money paid into his Hands, by Order of Court, and a considerable Sum, which came in upon the Land-Tax, and he did not know at that Time, what to lay it out in; the Stocks were so High and Precarious, he would not buy any; and he thought Wilson's Hands as safe a Place as any at that Time; he could not keep it by him in his Chambers, and he was going into the Country for three or four Weeks; and when he saw Things were settled, then he would lay it out: But when he came back to Town, he found Mr. Wilson in those declining Circumstances. This was after he returned from Holland. I knew nothing before of this, nor that he had any great Sum of Money in his Hands.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. He saith that he did propose, That he would come over and make a Discovery of, and deliver up his Effects, in case his Person was secured; now I desire he may recollect, before he did come over, if he knew of any Steps taken to secure his Effects; and whether any Thing in his Chambers was taken Care of, and by whom?

Mr. Parkhurst. I can give but one Instance of it, that is, Mr. Rogers, a Master in Chancery, came to me one Morning, and desired me, upon the Account of being a Relation, for I was no otherwise concerned, that I would go along with him to look into Mr. Dormer's Chambers, to see that there was, what Securities, or any thing of what Nature belonging to the Office. I remember we did find several Things, several Land Tax Tallies which Mr Rogers gave an Account of. I don't know what the Number was.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Who took Possession of them?

Mr. Parkhurst. Mr. Rogers, the Master in Chancery.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. By whose Direction did you understand that Mr. Rogers took this Care?

Mr. Parkhurst. I understood it was by the Direction of the Court. He came to me, and desired me to go along with him, to see that no Person meddled with any Thing but what belonged to the Suitors; and he took them, and locked them up in his Closet or Scrutore.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we have done with this Evidence.

Mr. Plummer. I think he says, the Reason of Mr. Dormer's having so much Money in the Hands of Mr. Wilson, was, that there was a great Sum of Money come in upon the Land-Tax: I desire to know, if Mr. Dormer left this Money dead in the Hands of Mr. Wilson, or if he had any Interest for it?

Mr. Parkhurst. I know nothing of that. By way of Justification, he said, It was unlucky he had so much Money paid into his Hands at that Time; Times were so precarious, he did not know how to lay it out.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked, Whether Mr. Wilson did not usually keep Mr. Dormer's Cash, and the Cash of the Office?

Mr. Parkhurst. I believe he did. I know but few Instances of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he never heard him declare that Mr. Wilson paid him Interest?

Mr. Parkhurst. I never heard him declare he did: He never spoke to me about it particularly.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, Whether he can inform your Lordships, how long Mr. Wilson had been Banker to Mr. Dormer?

Mr. Parkhurst. I can't say exactly how long: I believe some Years.

Mr. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen have done with this Witness, we beg leave to call another, to prove what Care was taken to stop those Effects, that were in the publick Funds.

Mr. John Elphinstone sworn.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Elphinstone may inform your Lordships what he knows of any Orders or Directions given, in relation to the Effects of Mr. Dormer that were in the Publick Funds; and by whom those Directions were given?

Mr. Elphinstone. My Lords, I have been to search the Books of the Bank, the South-Sea, and East-India Companies, to see what Stock Fleetwood Dormer, Esq; one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery had in the Books of those Companies, and what Orders there were for stopping Mr. Dormer's transferring such Stock. My Lords, I went first to the Bank, and searched a Book of that Company, called a Leidger, where Mr. Dormer's Accompt was stated by way of Debtor and Creditor. I found in that Book, a Memorandum written over Mr. Dormer's Account in red Letters, as follows, Q. No Transfer. I likewise enquired, if there were any Orders of the Court of Chancery, for stopping the Transfer of such Stock? I was told by the Clerk, That he knew of none. I enquired of the Clerk at the Transfer-Office, if there was any Order of the Court of Chancery for transferring Mr. Dormer's Stock to Mr. Edwards, the succeeding Master; after some search, he brought me an original Order, Signed Parker, C. dated 11. July, 1721. I have a Copy of that Order in my Hand, whereby it appears, that all the Stock and Annuities, in the Name of Mr. Dormer, were ordered to be transferred to Mr. Edwards, on the 12th of July 1721, viz the Day after the Date of the said Order. I found in the Transfer Book of that Company the Sum of 3393 l. 16 s. transferred by Mr. Dormer to Mr. Edwards, and Mr. Edwards's Acceptance of the same. This is a Copy of the original Order. I afterwards went to the South Sea House; I searched the Books of that Company, and in the Book marked Letter D. N°. 6. Folio 430. where Mr. Dormer's Accompt is stated by way of Debtor and Creditor, I found a Memorandum over Mr. Dormer's Account, which is as follows; Stock not to be transferred without Order from the Court of Directors (he being failed) or from the Court of Chancery. I also searched the Transfer-Book of the said Company; and I found in Book No. 5. Page 86. that on the 12th Day of July 1721. 2251 l. 14 s. South Sea Stock was transferred by Mr. Dormer to Mr. Edwards, and under the Transfer I saw Mr. Edwards's Acceptance; Mr. Dormer signed the Transfer, and Mr. Edwards signed the Acceptance. I enquired if there were any Orders for stopping Mr. Dormer's Stock from being transferred.

ferred. I found no ſuch Order, nor any Order for transferring the Stock that was transferred; and the Reaſon which the Clerk of that Office gave, was, That upon the unhappy Turn of the Affairs of that Company, ſeveral of the Clerks being diſcharged, and many Books and Papers being deſtroyed, loſt, or miſlaid, and the reſt in the utmoſt Confuſion, rendered it impoſſible to find any ſuch Paper at this Diſtance of Time. I went likewiſe to the Eaſt-India Company; but I could not find upon thoſe Books any Stock belonging to Mr. Dormer, or that he had any Intereſt in that Company.

Mr. Strange. I beg Leave to take Notice of one Thing he ſays, relating to the Words expreſly entered in one Leidger Book; it ſtands that Mr. Dormer ſhould not transfer any Stock, he being failed.

Mr. Elphinſtone. Yes, the Memorandum entred in the South Sea Leidger Book, is, as follows: Stock not to be transferred without Order from the Court of Directors (he being failed) or Court of Chancery; the Words, he being failed, are in a Parentheſis, and then follow the Words, or Court of Chancery.

Earl of Macclesfield. Who was then Governor of the Bank?

Mr. Elphinſtone. I think Mr. Hanger was.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Were the Entries dated?

Mr Elphinſtone. There was no Date to any of the Memorandums; they are wrote juſt over Mr. Dormer's Account, and under a Line drawn to ſeparate Mr. Dormer's Account from another Perſon's.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was that before the Transfer made to Edwards?

Mr. Elphinſtone. There is no Date to the Memorandum for ſtopping the Transfer of Mr. Dormer's Stock; but it muſt be before the Tranſter.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. But the Entry in the Books, was it precedent or ſubſequent to the Transfer?

Mr. Elphinſtone. When I ſearched for the Account, I found the Account and the Memorandum for ſtopping the Transfer of the Stock, placed over it, in a Book called the Leidger, and when I ſearched for the Tranſfer of the Stock, I found that in the Transfer-Book, which is a different Book.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What Transfer-Book was it?

Mr. Elphinſtone. It was the Transfer-Book No. 5. in Page 86. where I found Mr. Dormer's Transfer, and Mr. Edwards's Acceptance; but the Leidger is quite a different Book. It was in the Leidger marked D that I found the Memorandum for ſtopping the Transfer of Mr. Dormer's Stock over his Account; but I could not tell what Day of the Month it was entred; there were promiſcuous Dates in the Year 1720, 21, 22, 23, and 24. to ſeveral Articles of that and other Accounts, but no Date to the Memorandum at the Head of his Account. I took this Copy of it, which I have in my Hand.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to aſk one Queſtion, which, indeed, is to explain, what he mentioned concerning an Order, that I think, he takes to be ſigned by my Lord Chancellor. I deſire to know the Date of it?

Mr. Elphinſtone. It was a looſe Order brought to me, dated 11 July 1721.

Mr. Lutwyche. Who brought it?

Mr. Elphinſtone. It was brought to me by a Clerk that belongs to the Tranſter-Office at the Bank.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was that Original Order left in the Book?

M. Elphinſtone. No, my Lords, I ſaw no Book of Orders; it was a ſingle Order brought to me.

Mr. Lutwyche. You ſay there was an Order ſigned Parker C. was there any ſuch Order drawn up by the Regiſter of the Court?

Mr. Elphinſtone. I know nothing of its being drawn up by the Regiſter. I ſaw Parker C. Signed to an Order; and I believe it was the noble Earl's Hand.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. He hath a Copy of it; I believe it is proper to put it in, or that it may be read.

Mr. Lutwyche. Mr. Elphinſtone may read it to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Elphinſtone reads. Martis 11 July 1721. "I do order, that all the Bank Stock and Annuities "therein ſubſcribed, belonging to Fleetwood Dormer, "Eſq; late one of the Maſters of this Court, be by "him forthwith transferred to Henry Edwards the "ſucceeding Maſter" Parker C.

To the Governor, Deputy Governor and Directors of the Bank of England.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire he may be aſked Whether he heard any Thing of Mr. Dormer's being gone to take the Air?

Mr. Elphinſtone. No, my Lords, I never did, upon my Oath.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he did not hear the Earl of Macclesfield make a Declaration to that Purport?

Mr. Elphinſtone. I do not remember that the Noble Lord ever made any ſuch Declaration.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. He mentioned ſeveral Orders he found in the Books of the Bank, as I apprehended him; whether was there any other Order under my Lord Macclesfield's Hand?

Mr. Elphinſtone. No, I ſaw but one Original Order, ſigned by the Noble Earl, of which, this is a Copy in my Hand.

Mr. Lutwyche. This was an Order under my Lord's Hand, a conſiderable Time after: I deſire he may be asked, whether he hath heard of any Order directed to the Governor, Deputy Governor, &c. of the Bank, and ſign'd by the Chancellor, and that Original Order left there?

Mr. Elphinſtone. My Lords, I would be very cautious of ſaying any Thing that I do not remember; but I do remember ſomething of a Diſcourſe of an Order given for ſtopping of Dormer's Stock and Effects about the Time of Mr. Dormer's abſconding, but when it was I can't tell.

Mr. Lutwyche. He did not underſtand me: My Queſtion is, Whether or no he hath ever heard of any Order directed to the Governor, &c. of the Bank, and ſigned by the Chancellor, and that Original Order left there?

Mr. Elphinſtone. No, my Lords, I don't ſay I heard of any other Order, ſigned by my Lord Chancellor, and directed to the Governor, &c. of the Bank; but I heard an Order was given by my Lord, to ſtop Dormer's Stock.

Mr. Lutwyche. I only aſk, Whether in this, or any other Inſtance, my Lord Chancellor made Orders to the Bank, to be left there?

Mr. Elphinſton.

Mr. Elphinſtone. I don't know what Orders are made; it was out of my Province; I had nothing to do with that; my Buſineſs was quite another Thing.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I would beg Leave to take Notice of one Obſervation, that has been made on the Evidence given in Relation to the Order of the late Lord Chancellor, as tho' it was unuſual to direct any in that manner to the Bank; but to that I beg Leave to anſwer, that this was not an Order of Court; but only a particular Direction, which he, in his private Capacity, ſent to that Company, out of his great Care to ſecure the Effects of the Suitors; and this, I apprehend, fully clears him of the Objection made to him of Neglect to do it in his judicial Capacity.

Mr. Com. Serj. Your Lordſhips cannot chooſe but obſerve, that this very Thing implies ſome Caution taken, that theſe Effects of Mr. Dormer's ſhould not be transferred without the Privity of the Great Seal: This Order, we apprehend, was for that Purpoſe; and to make this plain, we ſhall ſhew, that Mr. Cottingham went from my Lord Chancellor about this Matter.

Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire Mr. Cottingham may be aſk'd, How he came to have Notice, and from whom, of Mr. Dormer's withdrawing himſelf; and what Care was taken to ſecure his Effects?

Mr. Cottingham. Soon after Chriſtmas, 1720. to the beſt of my Remembrance, as to the Time, Mr. Parkhurſt, Mr. Dormer's Nephew, came to me, and told me, his Uncle, Mr. Dormer, had withdrawn himſelf into Holland; and the Reaſon was, upon Account of his having left Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors, in Mr. Wilſon's Hands, and Mr. Wilſon had been very unfortunate in the South-Sea Year, and was likewiſe gone off. I acquainted the Earl of what paſſed. The Earl directed me to attend the two Senior Maſters, Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers, and conſider what was proper to be done on that Occaſion: On Conſideration, we agreed, that it was neceſſary to get Mr. Dormer over.

We then conſidered, that it was not poſſible to have him over, unleſs he was ſecure of his Liberty. A Propoſal was made to the Earl, that in caſe he came over, he ſhould have his Liberty: The Earl agreed to it. In the mean Time, to the beſt of my Remembrance, Orders were given for ſearching of his Office, and ſecuring what Effects and Papers were there. The Maſters told me, that purſuant to theſe Directions, they had ſearched his Office, and lock'd up what they found there; but his Effects there were of very little Value.

The next Step the Earl took, was, he directed Perſons to go to the Bank and South-Sea Houſe, to ſtop the Transferring of any Stock or Effects in his Name.

In April following, when Mr. Dormer returned, he came late to me one Evening, and asked me, If the Letter writ by the Maſter, was writ by the Earl's Direction? I told him Yes. He then asked me, If the Earl had promiſed his Liberty? Otherwiſe he would be gone again.

I told him the Earl had promiſed him his Liberty, if he would make a full Diſcovery of all his Effects upon Oath; and make over all he had to the two Senior Maſters, for the Benefit of the Suitors of the Court; and aſſiſt them in getting in every Thing that belonged to him.

He ſaid, theſe Conditions he readily ſubmitted to, and would attend the Maſters accordingly. I ſpoke to Mr. Rogers, to know whether he would have an Order in Form to examine Mr. Dormer upon Interrogatories; and that, if he would, I would prepare one, and get it ſign'd. He told me, It was not neceſſary; and that they thought it was beſt to get the Eſtate and Effects in the firſt Place before that ſhould be done; fearing if Mr. Dormer was ſeverely dealt with, he ſhould run away, and an Order might be had afterwards, if neceſſary. I forgot to tell your Lordſhips one Circumſtance: Some time, in the Summer following, either in July or Auguſt, I happened to dine one Day at the Blue-Poſts, behind Lincolns-Inn. Mr. Dormer came to me with Tears in his Eyes; he cried bitterly, and ſaid, That the Maſters had ſtripp'd him of all he had in the World, and begg'd I would intercede with the Earl to allow him ſomething. I deſired him not to inſiſt upon it; for his Effects, as I was inform'd, were not ſufficient to pay his Debts, and he knew well, that the Earl could not give away the Effects of the Suitors; It was out of his Power.

Mr. Plummer. I think you ſay, Sir, That Mr. Dormer failed, by leaving his Money and Effects in Mr. Wilſon's Hands; I deſire to ask him, What he means by his Effects?

Mr. Cottingham. The Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the Court.

Mr. Plummer. And you told my Lord of that?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I told my Lord what Mr. Parkhurſt had mention'd of the Money and Effects of the Suitors of the Court being left in Wilſon's Hands.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, whether or no, upon this Occaſion and Tranſaction, he applied to the Maſters to make up this Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's?

Mr. Cottingham. As to the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer, I always apprehended and underſtood, that the Maſters would make good that Deficiency, Mr. Lightboun excepted, who always declared, he would do nothing towards it, unleſs it were put on another Foot.

I

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may be asked whether he gave any such Information to the Earl of Macclesfield?

Mr. Cottingham. I did so, I told the Earl of it; and to the best of my Remembrance Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers, my Lords, I wont be positive, but I think Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers did order me to wait upon the Earl, and let his Lordship know that the Body of the Masters had undertaken to make up the Deficiency; I do think so, I will not be positive of that, I think it was so.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may inform your Lordships, if he knows how it came to pass that Mr. Dormer had Money in Mr. Wilson's Hands?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Parkhurst told me, and I think Mr. Dormer likewise, but of that I am not certain, that Mr. Dormer had left the Money in his Hands when he went into the Country in the long Vacation.

Mr. Onslow. I desire he may be asked what were the Words that Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hiccocks said to him when he apprehended the Masters would make good the Deficiency?

Mr. Cottingham. I think it was what I told your Lordships, that the Body of the Masters would make good the Deficiency, I do not, I cannot swear that positively.

Mr. Onslow. Did any other of the Masters tell you so?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Godfrey told me, I am positive of this, that Mr. Godfrey told me that the Body of the Masters would make good the Deficiency, I must except Mr. Lightboun.

I have heard Mr. Edwards say, that he would never have paid his 5000 l. if he had not apprehended that it would have been made good.

Mr. Com. Serj. This makes it necessary for us to ask another Question, and I desire he may be asked, tho' he doth not remember the particular Words, yet whether they induced him to believe that they intended so to do?

Mr. Cottingham. It did.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether upon this Belief he did inform the noble Earl that they would make good Mr. Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Cottingham. I did, I told the noble Earl so, and that his Lordship needed not to be uneasy, they would make it good, and I always apprehended, I always understood they would make it good.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked whether the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer was ever stated so as to know how much it was?

Mr. Cottingham. No.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did they agree to make up the Deficiency when they did not know how much it was?

Mr. Cottingham. I heard some of the Masters say at first, that it was 17000 l. or 18000 l. afterwards they said 20000 l. and then 22000 l. and of late it comes out to be 26000 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. If I understand Mr. Cottingham right, he speaks of several Masters, I desire to know whether he means all, except Mr. Lightboun? I desire to know whether they all singly promised?

Mr. Cottingham. Singly, as I remember; Mr. Edwards can tell I was at a Meeting with them at the Tavern, I think they said singly.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked whether this Discourse with the Masters about paying this Deficiency was absolute or upon some particular Terms or Conditions of paying the Money?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Edwards told me that they would make good the Deficiency, provided they continued on the old Foot as usual.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. That is, to have the Disposal of the Money, the Money to be in their Hands?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know whether you acquainted the Earl of Macclesfield with this?

Mr. Cottingham. No, this was but lately that Mr. Edwards told me that. It was, I believe, in November or December last.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did none of the other Masters acquaint you so?

Mr. Cottingham. No, I don't remember any other Master did.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to ask you whether you ever heard what Interest Mr. Wilson allowed to Mr. Dormer?

Mr. Cottingham. In December last, when the Accompts were before the Judges, the Earl told me that Mr. Wilson's Composition was complained of; it was said, that Mr. Wilson had paid 20 s. in the Pound; and ordered me to talk with Mr. Wilson; and accordingly I did see him, and blamed him for imposing upon the Masters in the Composition he made with them, when he had paid other Creditors whole Demand; he denied it.

Mr. Lutwyche. That is not the Question; what Interest did Mr. Wilson allow Mr. Dormer for the Suitors Cash?

Mr. Cottingham. I am going on to that Part. Mr. Wilson said to me; why is all the Blame laid upon me? I allowed Mr. Dormer very large Interest for his Money: I could have set aside his Debt upon the Score of an usurious Contract; I was resolved I would not do it, I would shew my self to all the World to be an honest Man; I gave my Creditors all that I had, what would they have more?

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether he mention'd Ten per Cent. or no?

Mr. Cottingham. No, he did not, but he said he had given large high Interest, and the Court had had as much as his other Creditors.

Mr. Com. Serj. When was this Discourse?

Mr. Cottingham. It must have been in December last, when the Judges were inquiring into this Matter, because he told me Mr. Edwards had been with them about the Composition.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Recollect what was said upon this Discourse, whether he said that the Court or the Masters had as much as any of his other Creditors?

Mr. Cottingham. He told me, I am an honest Man, the Masters had as much as my other Creditors, what would they have more?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. It is our Misfortune we can't produce Mr. Wilson here, we are deprived of his Evidence, which would have been very material, by his Death; we are told he has very lately shot himself.

Mr. Cottingham. He was very poor, I always looked upon him to be an honest Man; he told me at the same time, I forgot to tell your Lordships, if Mr. Poulter could be but delivered up, he should be very easy; he was sure he was in Circumstances to pay him.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, if the Gentlemen have done with this Witneſs, we deſire to call a Witneſs or two in relation to the fourteenth Article to ſhew the Credit of Poulter when his Debt was aſſigned. We apprehend that a little Evidence will ſerve to clear up the Innocence of this noble Earl on this Occaſion: The great Concern the noble Earl had to make up this Deficiency of Mr. Dormer, made him with the beſt of his Knowledge and Power apply thereto; a little Evidence will make it appear, that however unfortunate it was in the Conſequence he did it to make the moſt he could for the Suitors of the Court.

Mr. Hunt Sworn.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we call this Witneſs to prove the two Judgments, the one againſt Poulter, to ſhew that there was a real Debt due from Poulter to Wilſon; the other is a Copy of a Judgment by Wilſon againſt the Marſhal of the King's Bench, for the Eſcape of Poulter.

Mr. Hunt. My Lords, I examined theſe two Copies of Judgments with the Records in the Court of King's Bench. They are true Copies of the Judgments.

Mr. Com. Serj I deſire he may be asked whether he was the Attorney for Mr. Wilſon?

Mr. Hunt. I was the Attorney for Mr. Wilſon in that againſt Machen, and entred up the Judgment in the other.

Mr. Com. Serj. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure that the Judgment ſhould be read at large?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Read only a Word or two of the Judgments, the Names of the Plaintiff and Defendant, the Money demanded, and the Sums recovered.

Clerk reads the Beginning and Ending.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. The firſt is againſt Poulter.

Mr. Lutwyche. Look when the Judgment was ſigned.

Mr. Hunt. It was ſigned 22 Dec. 1721.

The Judgment read againſt Machen.

Placita coram Domino Rege apud Weſtm' de Term' Sancti Michaelis, undecimo Georgii. Memorandum quod Willielm' Wilſon — protulit — billam — verſ' Richardum Machen — de placito debiti — quod reddat ei oct. de im mille ſ ptingent' oct gint' & un' lib. —— Ideo conſiderat' eſt quod præd' Willielm' Wilſon recupe et &c.

Judgment ſigned 27 Nov. 1724.

Mr. Com. Serj. If your Lordſhips pleaſe he may be asked if he knows of any Offer made by Poulter for a Compoſition, and what Sum of Money was offered, and how Mr. Wilſon behaved himſelf on that Occaſion.

Mr. Hunt. I don't know of any Compoſition offered of my own Knowledge, I have heard the preſent Marſhal of the King's Bench ſay there was 1000*l* offered; but I had Orders from my Client, if any Offer was made to me, not to accept it, but to refer the Perſon who made it to him.

Mr. Com. Serj. As Mr. Wilſon is dead, I deſire Mr. Hunt may be asked whether Mr. Wilſon gave any Reaſon for that Order not to compound with him?

Mr. Hunt. Mr. Wilſon hath often ſaid that it was his Opinion Mr. Poulter was able to pay him.

Mr. Com. Serj. We have done, my Lords, with this Witneſs.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we beg Leave to call a Witneſs to ſhew that at this time Mr. Poulter had the Reputation of being a Man of Subſtance, and an honeſt Man?

Mr. Peter Gandy Sworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Gandy may give your Lordſhips an Account whether Mr. Poulter had not the Reputation of being a ſubſtantial Man about the year 1722 or 1723.

Mr. Gandy. Mr. Poulter always lived in good Reputation, and was reputed to be an honeſt Man; he lived at Hackney, he told me he purchaſed 6000*l*. South-Sea Stock, which coſt him 3600*l*. and transferred it to Mr. Knight, and Mr. Knight gave him nothing for it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire to ask you whether he was a ſubſtantial honeſt Man?

Mr. Gandy. I believe he was, he always bore an extraordinary Character, I believe I might ſummon all Exchange-Alley, and they would ſay the ſame; he was reputed to be worth a great deal of Money and a very honeſt Man.

Mr. Lutwyche. At what time was this that he was thought a Man of Subſtance?

Mr. Gandy. When he lived at Hackney.

Mr. Lutwyche. After he was arreſted?

Mr. Gandy. Yes.

Mr. Lutwyche. Will you ſay after he was arreſted he was a ſubſtantial Man?

Mr. Gandy. No, my Lords, I do not ſay he was, but he was generally reputed to be ſo.

Mr Lutwyche. Whether at the ſame time you mention that he told you the Circumſtance of transferring Stock to Mr. Knight, that was not given as a Reaſon for his Deficiency.

Mr. Gandy. He ſaid he had been able to pay Mr. Wilſon every Farthing, if Mr. Knight had not gone away.

Mr. Lutwyche. That is what Mr. Poulter told Mr. Gandy.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked when Poulter was firſt known to be in a failing Condition?

Mr. Gandy. I don't know

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was he arreſted?

Mr. Gandy. I don't know, he told me he ſhould have been able to have paid Mr. Wilſon, if Mr. Knight had not gone away.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did he give you that as a Reaſon why he could not pay Mr. Wilſon?

Mr. Gandy. Mr. Knight not paying him, he ſaid he could not pay Mr. Wilſon.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was that the Reaſon?

Mr. Gandy. Here is another Gentleman will tell you he was employed to make a Compoſition with Mr. Wilſon, and he can tell you more.

Mr. Onſlow. What was Poulter's Profeſſion?

Mr. Gandy. He was a Servant to Mr. Stroud.

Mr. Onſlow. What is Mr. Stroud?

Mr. Gandy. Mr. Stroud is a Sworn Broker.

Mr.

Mr. Onslow. I desire to know what Profession this Person is of?

Mr. Gandy. I transact in Exchange-Alley as a Broker.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did not Mr. Poulter transact as a Broker too?

Mr. Gandy. Yes.

Dr. Sayer. We are not now upon the Point what he was really worth at that time, but what his Reputation and Character was, and therefore we desire to know what that was, whether he was not looked upon as a substantial Man?

Mr. Gandy. He bore a good Character.

Mr. Strange. What was his Character, as to his Circumstances at that time?

Mr. Gandy. His Character was then very good, and so continued till he was put in Prison.

Mr. Strange. Where is he now?

Mr. Gandy. He is at Rotterdam.

Mr. Scott Sworn.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire that Mr. Scott may inform your Lordships whether he knew Mr. Poulter, and what his Character and Reputation was, as to Substance.

Mr. Scott. Mr. Poulter I had been acquainted with a great many Years, I looked upon him to be a very honest Man; and in the Year 1720 he transacted abundance of Business, and I did a great deal of Business for him, and some other Gentlemen at that time, as a Scrivener. In the Year 1720, upon the Fall of the Stocks, he came and told me he was ruined by it, and begged of me to assist him. He told me at first he had some Accompts depending with Mr Wilson.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly, I desire he may repeat it, where he told him, and when?

Mr. Scott. About December 1720, before Mr. Knight went away, he said he had large Accompts with Mr. Wilson, and that he was utterly ruined, because he said he had transferred 6000 l. South-Sea Stock to Mr. Knight, which cost him 40000 l. or better, and if he could not get it of Mr. Knight, he must be ruined. He told me I was acquainted with several Gentlemen of Mr. Wilson's Acquaintance, and desired me to speak to him or them about this Matter.

Sometime after Mr. Wilson's Agents, Mr. Ashton, I think, and one Mr. Newton, sent to Mr. Poulter, and desired a Meeting on the Behalf of Mr. Wilson. I went on the Behalf of Mr. Poulter, and carried a Friend with me; we met at the Crown Tavern overagainst St. Clement's Church, and we told them how Mr. Poulter was served; that Mr. Knight had so much Stock of his without any manner of Consideration, as Mr. Poulter had told us; that Mr. Poulter was willing to do any thing they could expect. Some considerable time afterwards, I heard Mr. Poulter had been arrested, and he desired me, as being acquainted with Mr. Wilson, to go to Mr. Wilson and see if I could make up the Affair, he apprehended that his Bail would surrender him: Whereupon I went to Mr. Wilson, and told him, that Mr. Poulter protested to me he was worth but 3500 l. or thereabouts, and that he would endeavour to get Friends to make it up 4000 l. if Mr. Wilson would accept it. I was with Mr. Wilson several times about this Matter, but he would not accept it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did he give any Reason why he would not accept it?

Mr. Scott. He said he looked upon Mr. Poulter not to be an honest Man, and that he could pay more; I said, he had better take that than keep him in Prison.

Mr. Com. Serj. Notwithstanding these private Intimations of his Disability, I desire to know what was his general Character as to his Circumstances?

Mr. Scott. He was looked upon to be a very honest Man, and in good Circumstances; he hath been trusted with Thousands and Thousands of Pounds.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly, I desire he may be asked, Whether the Money, the 24000 l. Wilson lent to him, was not lent for Stock-jobbing, for him to traffick with in the Alley?

Mr. Scott. I know nothing at all of that.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he hath not declared so?

Mr. Scott. No, I know nothing of that; whenever I was in Company with Mr. Wilson he was always very shy, and would not speak freely.

Mr. Plummer. I desire he may be asked, Whether in June or May 1720, he looked upon Mr. Poulter to be a good Man?

Mr. Scott. Mr. Poulter, in April or May 1721, told me his Circumstances, and desired me to go to Mr. Wilson to meet those Gentlemen, and to treat with them; but every body then, except four or five Persons to whom he had made known his Circumstances, reputed him an honest and a substantial Man.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may inform your Lordships, in May 1721, what his general Character was, or what was generally thought by other People of him, without relation to his own particular Knowledge.

Mr. Scott. He was look'd upon as a Man of Substance, and a very honest Man.

Mr. Sandys. I desire he would explain himself; Whether he was looked upon at that time by himself to be a sufficient Man, and able to answer the Demand of Mr. Wilson?

Mr. Scott. He had told me a Reason to induce me to have but an ill Opinion of his Ability, that he had transferred 6000 l. Stock to Mr. Knight, which cost him 40000 l. and upwards.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether Mr. Poulter at that time went on dealing in the way of Business as he did before?

Mr. Scott. No, I believe he did not at that time: I believe in 1720 his Business was done, and he thought himself worth a great deal of Money.

Dr. Sayer. Whether in the Year 1720 he was not looked upon to have got a great deal of Money, and for that Reason to have quitted his Business?

Mr. Scott. It was then taken so; he was then looked upon as a Man of great Substance: There were not above five who knew his Circumstances to be otherwise; he was generally looked upon then to be a Man of Substance.

Mr. Lutwyche. It is a very surprising way to establish a Man's Reputation to say he was a Man of Substance when he offered a Composition, and at the same time he could not pay his Debts, he is understood to be a Man of Substance; I desire to know, Whether it was after or before you had that Meeting, and offered the Composition?

Mr. Scott. I believe it was after.

Mr Lutwyche. Did you take him to be a Man of Substance afterwards, after you had offered a Composition for him?

Earl of Macclesfield. This Gentleman hath answered two Things very consistent, that he and three or four more, who knew Mr. Poulter's Circumstances, knew that he was not a Man of Substance then, but that all other People looked upon him to be a Man of Substance, and he tells you how he came to be so esteemed.

Mr. Scott. Yes, so it was.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know again, whether after the Year 1720, he transacted Business as he used to do?

Mr. Scott. No.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know again, where he lived after the Year 1720, and what Means he had to live upon, besides his Business?

Mr. Scott. He lived as a Gentleman at Hackney, had his House well furnished and full of Plate, I have been at his House several times.

Mr. Lutwyche. How long ago?

Mr. Scott. I believe a Year and a half, or two Years ago?

Dr. Sayer. I don't apprehend it is material what this Gentleman thought from the private Conversation he had with Mr. Poulter. The general Reputation is sufficient for us to justify what was done; I desire he may be asked, whether till that Conversation he himself did not look upon him to be a Man of Substance?

Mr. Scott. I looked upon him to be a Man of Substance, till he told me he was so unhappy that he could not get his Forty thousand Pounds and upwards of Mr. Knight.

Mr. Lutwyche. When was it he told you so?

Mr. Scott. I believe some time in December 1720 that he told me so first.

Mr. Lutwyche. The Composition was in 1722.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked one general Question, Whether after the Year 1721 Mr. Poulter retained any Character of Sufficiency or Ability?

Mr. Scott. He was looked upon by every one that did not know this Affair of Mr. Knight's, to be a Man of Sufficiency in 1721.

Mr. Lutwyche. After 1721, Whether it was not generally known that Mr. Poulter was an insufficient Man?

Mr. Scott. No, I believe not.

Earl of Abingdon. If they have done, I desire to ask this Witness a Question, Whether it was generally known that Mr. Poulter had transacted for Mr Knight?

Mr. Scott. Not as I know of, I believe not.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we shall trouble your Lordships with no further Evidence on this Article. So if your Lordships please, we shall now proceed to the other Articles.

Mr. Strange. With your Lordships Permission we will now go on to the next Set of Articles that were opened by the Managers for the Honourable House of Commons, which are the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth Articles. And I shall now, as I did before, confine my self to these particular Articles.

The Charge, my Lords, in these three Articles consists of several Acts supposed to be done by, or by the Order of, the noble Earl within the Bar, and are laid to be all tending to the same Design of concealing the Deficiency of Dormer's Office.

For which Purpose, my Lords, it is said the Accompts of the Masters were called for, not with any Design of examining the Accompts, but with an Intent to terrify the Masters, and oblige them to contribute towards answering the Demands that should be made upon that Office: And as an Instance of this Design, the Commons charge, That after a Contribution by nine of the Masters, the Earl did not oblige them to bring in their Accompts.

That upon occasion of another Sum of Money wanted to pay off a Suitor who had an Order for Money in Dormer's Office, the noble Earl pressed the Masters to raise it amongst themselves; and, upon their Refusal, caused his Secretary to pay it: And that notwithstanding this Notice of Dormer's Deficiency, an Order was afterwards made for Mr. Edwards to enquire, whether there was likely to be a Loss of any Money deposited with Mr. Dormer.

And as a farther Instance of this Endeavour to conceal the Deficiency, it is insisted on, that several Orders were made for the paying some Suitors the whole of their Demand, without regard to that just Proportion to which the other Suitors were entitled.

This, my Lords, is the State of the Complaint contained in these three Articles.

And as to the first part of the Complaint in calling for the Accompt, and terrifying the Masters into a Contribution, I shall beg Leave to insist upon two Facts; either of which, in my humble Apprehension, will be a sufficient Defence against the Charge.

The first, my Lords, is, That the Contribution was voluntary: And the next is, That long after this Contribution the Accompts were continued to be called for, notwithstanding it is charged to have been dropp'd immediately upon the Contribution.

To prove the Contribution voluntary, I beg Leave, my Lords, in the first place to look back upon Mr. Lightboun's Evidence, where he acacquainted your Lordships, that upon his asking the noble Earl, who the Proposal came from, the Earl's Answer was, That it came from some of the Masters: And he concluded his Accompt of that Conversation with informing your Lordships, that upon his declining to contribute, the Earl left him to his Liberty.

But, my Lords, not to rest it upon Mr. Lightboun's Evidence only, we shall call Mr. Cottingham, who was acquainted with the whole Transaction, and will inform your Lordships, that the Contribution was altogether voluntary, and of their own Proposal.

My Lords, the other Branch of the Article, and which indeed is the Jet of the whole, relates to the dropping the Design of looking into the Accompts upon the making of this Contribution, which we shall be able to falsify; and the Account, my Lord, we shall give of the whole Transaction is this:

In February 1720, Mr. Cottingham, by the Earl's Directions, wrote a Letter to the Masters, requiring them to make up their Accompts, and present them to the Earl, according to a Plan which he imparted to them in that Letter.

Your Lordships are pleased to observe, that Mr. Dormer's failure was at Christmas, and this Letter in February following, before Mr. Dormer had any leave to come over, or any Discovery had been made of the Condition of his Office.

My Lords, The use which the Honourable Managers say was to be made of this Letter, was so little understood, that some of the Masters did, pursuant thereto, make up and deliver in an Account, tho' not according to the Directions they had received; and the Affair of Mr. Dormer coming on, caused a Stop in making up these Accompts, till after the appointing a Successor, and the making the Contribution, which, I think, is already fixed to have been in or about August 1721.

My Lords, The Summer being then far advanced, and every Body going out of Town, the Accompts were not exacted at that time; but upon their return to London a new Order was sent by Mr. Cottingham in November, with fresh Directions for bringing in their Accompts.

My Lords, I must here beg leave to observe, That if the Contribution was all that was aimed at by calling for these Accompts, how comes it to pass that Mr. Lightboun, who never contributed, was not called upon, in a particular manner, to bring in his Accompt, which, I did not observe, was proved, or so much as opened by the Learned Managers.

My Lords, The true Reason why these Accompts were not brought in, was the insuperable Difficulties of such an Undertaking; of which, I am persuaded, no other Evidence need be given, than to reflect on the Proceedings that have been of late in taking these Accompts.

But, my Lords, a Learned Manager was pleased to say, Why did this Noble Earl keep the Office, if he was not able to do the Business of it? I hope your Lordships won't think the Noble Earl was idle all the while: Every body knows the great Variety of Business, and the continual hurry a Chancellor is in: The ordinary Business of the Court of Chancery is sufficient to engage a Man of uncommon Application: What a Fatigue then, my Lords, must it be, when the necessary Attendance upon your Lordships, and at the Council Table, are both taken into the Account? Sure I am, my Lords, it can never be said, that there was no want of Time or Leisure for taking these Accompts.

My Lords, The next Branch of the Charge is the Order for 1000 l. to Mrs. Chitty, which is said was paid by the Noble Earl's Direction, in order to conceal the Deficiency: But pray, my Lords, does not the Article and Evidence both destroy the Supposition? Could the Earl of Macclesfield intend to conceal the Deficiency, when he cautioned Lockman against marrying Mrs. Chitty, in prospect of any more Money to be coming out of Dormer's Office. "That this would be the last "Payment (I give your Lordships the very Words) "she was like to receive out of the Money paid into "the Hands of Mr. Dormer, for the Residue thereof "was in danger of being lost, by reason of the De- "ficiency in the Effects of Mr. Dormer." Is this, my Lords, a Concealment of the Deficiency? A Payment of 1000 l. of the Noble Earl's own Money, in order that the Suitor should have no suspicion of a Deficiency!

But to go further, my Lords, we shall shew, that the payment of this Money did not proceed from any such low Motive, as, I may say, is uncharitably represented in this Article, but from a noble Mixture of Generosity and Compassion.

Mr. Lockman, my Lords, represented himself as an undone Man if he had not the Money: He first insinuated himself among the Noble Earl's Servants, as a Person under the utmost Distress; and the frequent Solicitations, which himself owns, are a strong Evidence of that Distress: When he had gained Access to the Earl, he told his Story in so moving a manner, not without Intimations of some desperate Resolution he might be forced to take if he had not the Money against the time, that, in pure Compassion to his Distress, the Noble Earl (whose Purse was always open to the Unfortunate) was prevailed with to order him the Money. And we shall prove to your Lordships, that how little sensible soever he now is of so great a Favour, yet at that time he express'd himself in Terms of one the most highly obliged; and I believe when our Witnesses to this Transaction come to be examined, they will leave Mr. Lockman very little Credit with your Lordships, and will wipe away the most remote suspicion of affecting any Concealment by this Transaction.

My Lords, The last Branch of this Article relates to a Declaration said to be made by the Earl in the Cause of Harper and Case, and an Order made therein for Mr. Edwards to enquire if there was likely to be a Loss of any Money deposited with Mr. Dormer.

My Lords, The particular Occasion and manner of that Declaration and Order have been fully stated by the Evidence we have already given of the several Judgments and Proceedings that have been against Mr. Poulter and the Marshal, which I shall not trouble your Lordships with a repetition of, it being sufficient for my Purpose in answering it as an Instance of Concealment to observe, that the whole Transaction was after the Accompts of the Masters had been laid before the Committee of Council, when it was too late, and to no purpose to affect any Concealment.

My Lords, The last Branch of the Charge I am now upon, relates to the making Orders for paying to several Suitors their whole Demand, out of the Effects of Mr. Dormer, without regard to that just Proportion to which the other Suitors were intitled: And the Case of Edisbury was mentioned for this purpose; tho' I did not observe the Gentlemen enter'd into any Proof of what was done in that Case.

My Lords, In Proof of this Article several Orders were read: But I appeal to the Evidence of Mr. Edwards, whether it did not appear, upon his cross Examination, that it was but in one Cause only where the whole Money was paid out; and whether that single Instance is a sufficient Proof of this Article, I must submit to your Lordships.

But, my Lords, the true Answer is this: Both the Noble Earl and Mr. Edwards doubted not but that the Deficiency would be made good, and proceeded upon that Expectation; nor can a stronger Evidence be given (and I desire it may be applied to some of the other Articles) that they were under this Persuasion, than Mr. Edwards's making Payments without any Objection.

Especially, my Lords, when it is consider'd too, that Mr. Lightboun, who was so averse at first to any Contribution, has, in that Letter which has been read to your Lordſhips, mentioned ſeveral of his own Schemes for making good the Deficiency.

And if there was a Proſpect of making good the Deficiency (as I humbly apprehend it is plain there was) it was very proper and natural to make the Orders in the manner they are now complain'd of. The nature of ordering Money out of Court makes it impoſſible the Suitors ſhould call for it all at once, but the ſame is order'd out by Degrees: And Mr. Cottingham's taking an Aſſignment of Chitty's Order, ſhews plainly, that it was expected Effects would in time come in to diſcharge that, and all other Demands.

I would not, my Lords, be underſtood by any thing I have offer'd, as if I intended to diſpute the Rule of Equity that has been laid down by the Managers, that where ſeveral Perſons have Demands out of one Common Fund that cannot anſwer the whole, there ought to be an Average in ſuch Caſe: But what I ſhall beg Leave to inſiſt upon is, That that Rule only holds place where the Quantum of what is left to anſwer is fix'd and certain. In this Caſe the Effects were daily coming in, and therefore a Declaration of an Average where there was likely to be no Deficiency, would not, in my humble Apprehenſion, have been adviſable or proper.

I beg leave, my Lords, to cloſe my Obſervations upon all the Articles relating to the Concealment of Dormer's Deficiency, with ſubmitting it to your Lordſhips Judgment, if the whole Tranſaction does not ſpeak it ſelf to have been one continued Endeavour to ſecure to the Suitors their whole Demand, and to have been no more.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, the Managers, when they entered upon theſe Articles, produced an Order made by the late Lord Chancellor, in the Year 1720, by which the Maſters were obliged to bring in their Accounts, which as they charge to have been concerted with other Views, and for very different Ends than at firſt appear, we think it will be extreamly proper for us to begin our Defence to that Part of the Charge with a Witneſs who is ready to ſhew your Lordſhips the real Deſigns the Impeached Earl had in calling for theſe Accompts; and his Evidence, we humbly conceive, will ſatisfy your Lordſhips that it could be for no other Purpoſe than that the Earl might the better know the true State and Condition of their reſpective Offices, in Order to find out a proper Method of redreſſing ſuch Grievances as were moſt apprehended at that Time. My Lords, it will appear by the Courſe of the ſame Witneſs's Evidence, that the other Order that was made upon them afterwards in December following, in as ſtrong Terms as the former, could be for no other Reaſon or Purpoſe than that his Lordſhip hath aſſigned in his Anſwer, that he might underſtand the State of the ſeveral Offices, ſo as to be able to apply proper Remedies to the Danger which was then dreaded. All this will appear yet more fully from the Evidence of another Witneſs, who is to inform your Lordſhips of the particular Directions the Noble Earl gave about the Manner of bringing in theſe Accompts, with the Names of the Cauſes of the reſpective Solicitors concerned in them, and alſo what the ſeveral Sums firſt paid in were, the Time when ſo paid in, and alſo when the ſame or any Part were paid out again, together with many other Particulars which his Lordſhip thought neceſſary for his more exact Information. It will be likewiſe made appear to your Lordſhips, how the Maſters were ſeverally conſulted with about this Matter, and that the Aſſiſtance of the Maſter of the Rolls was at length called in. But all the Maſters agreeing, and particularly Mr. Holford (who had been in the Office for twelve Years) that it was next to impoſſible to bring in their Accompts, as firſt directed, in any reaſonable Time; then it was, and not before, that the noble Earl condeſcended that they might bring them in a different Manner. Now, my Lords, as to the Suggeſtion that all this was only a Scheme, made uſe of to terrify the Maſters into a Contribution towards Dormer's Sufficiency, give me leave to ſay it is impoſſible to collect the leaſt View of that Kind from the Evidence laid before your Lordſhips on that Head; for the Maſters who did contribute on this Occaſion, have all ſworn that they paid in their Money voluntarily, and without being any ways influenced by his Lordſhip's Threats or Perſuaſions; ſo far from that, that Mr. Lightboun (the only Maſter who refus'd concurring in this Contribution) made no other Objection at firſt to it, than that the Propoſal did not come from his Lordſhip, but from the other Maſters; for in that Caſe he declared, That, if it had come from the noble Earl himſelf, he might have had more Regard to it, and would have taken it into his Conſideration. So that we doubt not upon the whole, but it will plainly be made appear to your Lordſhips, that the conſtant Application which the noble Earl made from time to time to the Maſters for this Purpoſe, proceeded from no other View, than that as ſoon as he might be truly informed of the State of their Offices, he ſhould apply proper Remedies to whatever Abuſes he ſhould diſcover; and that as this was always his real Intention, ſo he would have put it effectually in Execution, had he not reſigned the Great Seal ſo ſoon.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we ſhall call a Witneſs to ſhew, that after the 500 l. apiece was paid, the Accompts were called for, it cannnot then be pretended, that this calling for; the Accompts was to terrify the Maſters to pay this 500 l. apiece.

The Time of the Payment of theſe five hundred Pounds was in Auguſt, theſe Accompts were called for in the Beginning of November.

Mr. Cottingham called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire Mr. Cottingham would inform your Lordſhips whether any Directions were given to call in thoſe Accompts about November, 1721.

Mr. Cottingham. I did in November, by the Direction of the Earl, write a Letter dated the 7th Nov. 1721.

L. Ch. Juſt. King. Have you any Draught of that Letter?

Mr. Cottingham. I have a Draught, the Committee required me to leave the Letter with them.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we will do the noble Earl all the Juſtice we can; here are the Letters.

Mr. Cottingham. The firſt Letter is dated Feb. 14. 1720.

Mr. Lutwyche. Who is it directed to?

Mr. Cottingham. The Letter is directed to each Maſter, and this is the Letter.

SIR,

I Am commanded by my Lord Chancellor to ſignify to you, that you do with all convenient Speed lay before his Lordſhip an Accompt in ſeveral Columns.

1. Of the Name of the Cauſe.
2. The Solicitor or Agent.
3. The Date of the Order.
4. For what Purpoſe the Money was brought in.
5. How much was brought in.
6. When.
7. How much in Hand.
8. How much on Security.
9. How much paid out.

A diſtinct Account of the Securities.

1. Cauſe.
2. From whom the Security is taken.
3. What the Security is.
4. In whoſe Name taken.
5. For how much each Security.
6. The total of the ſeveral Securities in the ſame Cauſe.
7. In whoſe Hands lodged.

A diſtinct Accompt of Money paid out.

1. Cauſe.
2. By what Order, and of what Date.
3. When paid.
4. To whom.

Your very humble Servant,

BY my Letter of the fourteenth of February laſt, I ſignify'd to you my Lord Chancellor's Pleaſure; which was, that you ſhould with all convenient Speed lay your Accompt before his Lordſhip; (the Method whereof was to be in ſeveral Columns ſubſcribed at the Foot of that Letter.) I am now further to acquaint you, that his Lordſhip is very much ſurprized to find, that in all this Time no ſuch Accompt hath been laid before him: And therefore hath commanded me to tell you, that it is expected to be delivered in, on or before the laſt Day of this Term. And if this is not comply'd with, you will oblige his Lordſhip (though very unwillingly) to think of other Meaſures; which I doubt not but you will avoid, by a ready Complyance with what is a ſecond time required of you. And to the End there may be no Miſtake as to the Method of your accompting, I here ſubſcribe it again at the Foot of this Letter; and am,

Sir,

Your very humble Servant,

7 Nov. 1721. P. Cottingham.

To the beſt of my Remembrance, this Letter was delivered to ten of the Maſters.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did you read it to them?

Mr. Cottingham. No: I am going to give you an Account. My Lords, according to a Memorandum I kept at that Time of this Letter, it was delivered to ten of the Maſters; to Mr. Rogers, Mr. Hiccocks, Mr. Fellowes, Mr. Lightboun, Mr. Bennet, Mr. Holford, Mr. Borrett, Mr. Godfrey, Mr. Conway, and Mr. Lovibond.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire that the ſecond Letter in Nov. 1721. may be read.

Mr. Cottingham. The ſecond Letter is dated 7 Nov. 1721. Sir, by my Letter of the fourteenth of February laſt, I ſignify'd, &c. N. 47.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. By this it appears to be after the ſeveral 500 Pounds were paid in, the laſt 500 Pounds was paid in in Auguſt before, which ſhews that theſe Accompts were to be delivered in for no other Reaſon than that the Suitors ſhould have Satisfaction, as ſoon as a proper Remedy could be found.

Mr. Common Serj. I beg leave to make one Obſervation; here is ———

Mr. Lutwyche. If they have any more Queſtions to ask the Witneſſes, they may, the Obſerving is proper afterwards.

Dr. Sayer. I only beg leave to ask this one Queſtion, to be better informed. The Letter recites, it is written by the Command of my Lord Chancellor: I would ask whether my Lord Chancellor did give ſuch Directions?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, my Lords, he did.

Mr. Plummer. If they have done with the Queſtion, I would ask Mr. Cottingham in the Words of his own Letter, whether the Earl of Macclesfield did oblige the Maſters to deliver in their Accompts in Purſuance of ſuch his ſaid Order?

Mr. Cottingham. Of the Letter of November 1721. I have kept no Memorandum; of the firſt ter I have.

Mr. Plummer. Whether that Letter of 1721. was delivered to the Maſters?

Mr. Cottingham. I believe it was.

Mr. Plummer. Then I deſire to know if, the Maſters did deliver in their Accompts?

Mr. Cottingham. I don't remember they did.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be asked, if after this time that the 500 l. was paid in Obedience to the firſt Letter, there was afterwards any other Demand made upon the Maſters for more Money?

Mr. Cottingham. I know of no Demand made upon them, except the 500 l. apiece.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be ask'd if he doth not remember Mrs. Chitty's Affair, and if that was not after 1721?

Mr. Cottingham. The Buſineſs of Mrs. Chitty was but in July laſt.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether ſince no Accompt was called for after this laſt Letter, whether he did not underſtand the Reaſon to be, becauſe he apprehended the Maſters would make good Mr. Dormer's Deficiency?

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I ſubmit it, whether that Queſtion is material as to what his Apprehenſion was; your Lordſhips are Judges only upon Evidence of Fact, and not upon his Thoughts or Apprehenſions.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Why were not the Accompts called for afterwards?

Mr. Cottingham. I really can't tell the Reaſon.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he acquainted my Lord Macclesfield that the Maſters would make good the Deficiency?

Mr. Cottingham. I told your Lordſhips I did.

Mr. Serj.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Therefore I desire he may be asked, Whether after that Time he received any Orders to send to the Masters to give in their Accounts?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't speak particularly as to the Times.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether those other Measures, intimated in his Letter to be taken, were not signify'd to him by my Lord Macclesfield to be, that the Cash should be taken out of their Hands?

Mr. Cottingham. My Lord called me into his Study, and directed me to write this Letter; all he said was, he was sorry that the Masters had not brought in their Accompts as he required, and that if they did not bring them in by the last Day of the Term, he said he would take other Measures: My Lord did not say to me what those other Measures were, whether it was to make an Order in Form, and then he should expect they would yield Obedience to it; all the Earl told me was no more than to write to the Masters, that he would take other Measures, what those other Measures were I do not know, but I apprehended it to be an Order his Lordship would make for obliging them to it.

Mr. Snell. I desire he may be asked, whether he did not himself apprehend by those other Measures, the taking the Money out of the Masters Hands?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I submit it whether a Question of this kind is proper; he hath been asked what those Measures were; he hath told your Lordships that he knows not, but he has said what he apprehended they were; if now any Fact occur to him that may give Reason for apprehending otherwise, let him acquaint your Lordships with it.

Mr. Cottingham. Your Lordship said you would take other Measures; what I apprehended was, your Lordship would make an Order in form if they did not comply with that Letter.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I beg Leave to ask one Question: Whether the Masters, after this Letter was brought to them by Mr. Cottingham, did not represent to him the Difficulty of making up their Accompts?

Mr. Cottingham. There were several Particulars mentioned in the former Letter, there was the Causes to be named, &c. Some of the Masters told me they had not kept their Accompts so as to answer all the Particulars in the Letter; others said it would take up a great deal of Time; others that the Manner required was very difficult and tedious, and that it was almost impracticable, so many Items were contained in the Letter, that they seemed to say it could not be done.

Dr. Sayer. I desire he may be asked, whether he hath any Paper of the Method of Accompting required by the Committee, that his Majesty was pleased to direct to look into this Matter?

Mr. Cottingham. I have not a Copy of it here. There is an original Order, if the Masters please to produce it, I left it with Mr. Lightboun.

Mr. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen have it, I hope they will produce it.

Mr. Cottingham. The original Order is of the third of November last, which I left signed by the Earl.

E. of Macclesfield. This will come more properly under another Article: The Gentlemen, the Masters, will take Care to look it out that it may be ready by that Time.

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, I have now found it; I can't say it is a true Copy, dated the third of November, 1724. signed Macclesfield, C. Let the several Masters------- Am I to read it, my Lords?

Mr. Lutwyche. What, the Order of the third of November last?

Mr. Com. Serj. This Order cannot relate to this Matter. We are now upon the second Letter in 1721. The Letter is framed in so strong Terms, that it can't be supposed but the Earl was very much in Earnest, and it can't be insinuated as if intended to make the Masters comply in the Affair of Mrs. Chitty and Lockman, because that Transaction was but in July last.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire, my Lords, to go a little back again, upon recollecting, that the Question the honourable Manager was pleased to ask, about his giving me an Account that the Masters would make good the Deficiency, carries an Insinuation, as if this Method were dropp'd upon it: I desire he would inform your Lordships, whether he can be sure of the exact Time, whether this was before or after November, 1721.

Mr. Cottingham. I really can't be sure of the exact Time.

E. of Macclesfield. How near was it to Mr. Dormer's going out, and Mr. Edwards's coming into his Office?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Edwards came in in May 1721. It was near his coming in.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire to know whether you can recollect the Time you did tell me of it? Whether it was after November 1721. or before?

Mr. Cottingham. I several Times mentioned it to your Lordship before November 1721. and I believe several Times after, but that I cannot certainly tell, nor can I be particular to a Day.

E. of Macclesfield. Did you ever hear of it before the 500 l. a-piece was paid?

Mr. Cottingham. No, my Lords, it was after they had paid the 500 l. a-piece; but, my Lords, I don't know that they agreed to make good the Deficiency, I only told my Lord I thought they intended it.

Lord Trevor. He hath proved two Letters sent by the Direction of the noble Earl. As to the first Letter he kept a Memorandum as to the Time, but no Memorandum of the second. I would ask him as to the Time, when the Masters made that Representation of the Difficulty of giving in the Accounts, whether it was before or after the second Letter, or between the first and the second Letter?

Mr. Cottingham. To both the Letters they still made a Representation of the Difficulty.

Lord Trevor. Then I desire to ask one Question more, that is, Whether after the Representation made after the second Letter they owned that they had received the second Letter?

Mr. Cottingham. I verily believe that the second Letter was deliver'd to the Masters as the other was, but I have kept no Memorandum of it; I verily believe the Masters had it; I can't tell; I took it for granted they had it; I trusted one of my Clerks with it to take a Memorandum; I enquir'd after him; he hath been gone from me, and I can't find him out: I verily believe it.

I have

I have no Reaſon to doubt but I gave it; the Maſters know that.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If Mr. Holford is called, he will explain it; on his croſs Examination he admitted a ſecond Letter was ſent for him, and left in the publick Office: That appear'd in his croſs Examination.

Mr. Strange. It might not be improper, this Letter is before the honourable Managers, to enquire if they had it not from ſome of the Maſters.

Mr. Cottingham. No, they had it from me.

Mr. Holford called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he had not any Notice of the Letter in November 1721. whereby the Maſters were obliged to bring in their Accounts?

Mr. Holford. Indeed, my Lords, I do not remember that Letter.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether he remembers a ſecond Letter about Accompts?

Mr. Holford. Whether it was a Letter or a Meſſage I cannot tell; but between the firſt Accompt in February 1720. and the laſt in November laſt, I was called upon to Accompt, and had prepared it; but this ſecond Letter dated in November 1721. I do not remember any thing of it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How long was it after the Payment of the 500 l.

Mr. Holford. It was a good while after.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. That is all we contend for.

Mr. Holford. I believe not above a Year before the laſt.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether after this Letter, ſuppoſed to be in November 1721. his Accompt was ever demanded of him?

Mr. Holford. I did deliver to my Lord an Accompt of November 1721. and I think a Year before November laſt, in purſuance of either a Letter or a Meſſage, I don't know which, my Lord required an Account; then I deliver'd an Account of Money, not of Securities in my Hands.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether that was an Account in purſuance to that Letter, demanding and requiring it of him?

Mr. Holford. Not as I know of, indeed.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, as ſome mention hath been made of it, I think it may be proper to know what he can ſay to it, whether he ever promiſed to make good the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer?

Mr. Holford. I never did my Lords.

Mr. Cottingham called again.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips what he knows in relation to the Payment of the 1000 l. to Lockman, and what Converſation he had with Mr. Lockman?

Mr. Cottingham. About the beginning of July laſt, to the beſt of my Remembrance, Mr. Lockman told me, that Mrs. Chitty had an Order upon Mr. Edwards the Maſter, to pay her 1000 l. That ſhe had been with the Maſter, but could not get the Money, and that he had ſpoke to my Lord Macclesfield about it, and the Earl had promiſed to ſpeak to the Maſter. —— And he deſired me to ſpeak to the Earl concerning it: I promiſed I would, and accordingly I did; he ſent me to the Maſter. When I came to him, I ſpoke to him of it; he ſaid he had no Money; I informed the Earl of it; the Earl ſaid he could not tell what to do. I informed Mr. Lockman of it; he ſeemed to be under the greateſt Concern, and ſaid, if he had not the 1000 l. he was undone; he was going to marry Mrs. Chitty, and Mrs. Chitty would not marry him, unleſs his Debts were paid, and ſhe had given him this 1000 l. to pay his Debts. He had compounded his Debts, and he repeated it over and over again, that if this 1000 l. was not paid, he was undone.

I have not ſeen a Gentleman in a greater Diſtreſs than he appeared to be; on which I told him, if he would pleaſe to have a little Patience I would conſider the Thing, and ſee what could be done. I did conſider it; and it came into my Mind that Mr. Lightboun had not paid his 500 l. I acquainted the Earl with it, and ſaid Mr. Lightboun had not paid his 500 l. and if he could prevail upon him to do it, I thought it would be eaſy to get 50 l. a-piece of the other Maſters, and that would do.

By the Earl's Order, I attended Mr. Lightboun, and told him that the Earl expected him to pay his 500 l. but I could not get a Penny from him; ſo he refuſing to pay the 500 l. that Propoſal of the 50 l. a-piece dropt: I acquainted the Earl of this, he ſaid he could not tell what to do. I acquainted Mr. Lockman, and told him I had done all that was in my Power to do; and that it was not to be done, unleſs he expected I ſhould pay it out of my own Pocket, which I was ſure he could not expect: When I told him that, he ſaid, I am undone, Mrs. Chitty will not marry me, his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales will not protect me, my Creditors will throw me into a Gaol, there I muſt rot and ſtarve. He made uſe of ſo many extravagant Expreſſions, and was under that Pain and Agony of Mind, that I apprehended he would do himſelf a Miſchief. I could ſay nothing to it, I had done all for an unfortunate Gentleman that poſſibly I could do. Two or three Hours after this, when I was at Dinner, he came to me again, and told me the Earl wanted to ſpeak with me immediately; he begged of me of all things in the World to go; on that I went to the Earl. The Earl was pleaſed to ſend for me into an inner Room, and ſaid, that he was teazed out of his Life by Mr. Lockman; I told him I was ſo too, I had no Reſt Night nor Day for him; I then repreſented to the Earl his own Story in Subſtance as he had told me. The Earl ſaid he was ſorry to find Mr. Lockman brought to that State and Paſs. I told the Earl I was afraid of the Conſequence, I did not know what a deſpairing Man might do, he ſeemed to be in the utmoſt Deſpair: Upon that the Earl ordered me to pay him the 1000 l. and ſaid, he would pay it me again. When I ſaw Mr. Lockman, I told him I had now received Orders to pay him; I had not the Money by me, but he ſhould have it in a little time, three or four Days would break no Squares; he ſaid, I am ſatisfy'd, provided it is paid. I ſaid I had it not by me, I muſt borrow it; I did ſo, and on the thirtieth of July I paid him the 1000 l. I think it was three or four Days after, he asked me what Reward he ſhould give me; I told him that his Diſtreſs was ſo great that he ſhould not give me any Reward; I would not take a Penny of him, and I never had the Value of a Diſh of Coffee of him; I paid him the Money, I borrow'd it for that Purpoſe. Says I, Mr. Lockman, it appears to me that you are in great Diſtreſs, I will borrow the Money. I did borrow the Money, and paid Intereſt for it, meerly to ſupply the Gentleman.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked if he knows of any other Sum of Money demanded by Mr. Lockman after this 1000 l. was thus agreed to be paid him?

Mr. Cottingham. After this Money was agreed to be paid, and, I think, the ſame Evening, I received this Letter from him, which any Gentleman that will may read. (The Letter read.) Sign'd Lockman. Monday Evening.

SIR, Monday Evening.

I Am very ſenſible of the Favour you have already done me, in promoting what my Lord in ſo affable a Manner was pleaſed to promiſe me, which Kindneſs I ſhall gratefully acknowledge all my Life: But as there is ſo great a Neceſſity, I hope you will pardon me the ſooner in being once more troubleſome, to beg of you to remind his Lordſhip of letting Mrs. Chitty have the other 574 l. which my Lord was pleaſed to ſay we ſhould have, and without which, Mrs. Chitty, who hath neither out of Chancery nor her Eſtate received any money this two Years, cannot ſpare me the whole 1000 l. As my whole Eaſe and Quiet depends on your kind Aſſiſtance, I muſt beg, Sir, once more to uſe your Intereſt to let us have it on Thurſday Afternoon, between Four and Five, when Mrs. Chitty intends to wait on you for the other. I ſhall be very proud on all Occaſions to ſhew with how much Gratitude and Eſteem I am,

SIR,
Your moſt oblig'd humble Servant,
A. Lockman.

Dated Monday Evening, no other Date. My Lords, upon the Receipt of this Letter, the very ſame Evening I laid it before the Earl, I told him that it appeared by this he wanted 570 l. more. The Earl ſaid he was very much ſurpriſed at this Gentleman's ſending ſuch a Letter, he did not know what he meant by 570 l. more that he promiſed, and, in ſhort, told me he could advance no more.

Mr. Strange. I deſire he may be asked, whether he had any Diſcourſe with Mr. Lockman, relating to this 570 l. after this Letter?

Mr. Cottingham. I had a Diſcourſe with him ſome Time afterwards about the Letter.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire to ask him, whether after this Letter Mr. Lockman came to know what Anſwer he would give him?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Lockman came on the Thurſday following, being the thirtieth of July; Mrs. Chitty did not come: And then I told him that I had received his Letter, and had laid it before the Earl, and that the Earl underſtood not what he meant by it, that this was a growing upon him, and he would not pay a Penny more; I thought he had been very generous to him, and I told him I wonder'd what he meant.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I beg Leave to take Notice, and your Lordſhips will pleaſe to recollect, that Lockman ſwore he never made any Demand of any Money beſides the 1000 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. That is to be obſerved when the Witneſs is examined throughout.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I ask whether Mr. Lockman did petition my Lord Chancellour for this Sum of Money?

Mr. Cottingham. I don't remember Mr. Lockman petitioned. I believe not.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Or Mrs. Chitty?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, Mrs. Chitty did, before the Payment of this 1000 l. as I remember.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any Petition preferred before the Payment of the 1000 l. becauſe the Money was not paid according to the Order, which I think was dated March 17, 1723.

Mr. Cottingham. Yes: I told you ſo before.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to know whether there was not a general Meeting of the Maſters before my Lord Macclesfield order'd him to pay the ſaid 1000 l. to Mr. Lockman?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, there was.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether it was not after the meeting of the Maſters, when it was propos'd to Mr. Lightboun to pay his 500 l. and the others 50 l. a-piece?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I believe it was.

Mr. Plummer. Mr. Cottingham hath given a long Evidence, he hath told you on the Application for this 1000 l. he recollected that Mr. Lightboun had not paid his 500 l. and if he could get him to pay his 500 l. and the other Maſters 50 l. a-piece, that would make up the 1000 l. The Queſtion I would ask is, if Mr. Cottingham had then any Orders from the Earl of Macclesfield to convene the Maſters?

Mr. Cottingham, No, I had then no Orders.

The firſt Order I had to convene the Maſters together, was on a Monday, before Payment of the 1000 l. as I remember: Mr. Edwards was then at my Lord's Houſe, and my Lord ordered me to ſpeak to him to convene the Maſters, and they were convened, and came to my Lord's Houſe that Evening, as I was told, but that was after the Money was ordered to be paid.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire Mr Cottingham may look upon that, and tell us whether it is his Hand.

Mr. Cottingham. This is my Hand (reads.) His Lordſhip can do nothing in it at preſent.

Mr. Lutwyche. Do you remember any thing of this Petition being offered?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I do remember it; it is a Petition of Mrs. Chitty preferred to the Earl to be paid 1000 l. This Petition came to my Hands, the Earl ſaid, he could do nothing in it at preſent, and this Order writ upon it is my Hand.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whoſe Petition is it?

Mr. Cottingham. The humble Petition of the Defendant Elizabeth Chitty, Mrs. Chitty's Petition.

Mr. Lutwyche. What is the Anſwer writ upon the Back.

Mr. Cottingham. His Lordſhip can do nothing in it at preſent.

Dr. Sayer. We apprehend it is of Conſequence to have this Meeting cleared. I deſire he may be asked, whether he knows of any meeting of the Maſters, and when, and what was done there?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, there was a meeting that Evening, but I was not preſent.

E. of Macclesfield. By the Questions they have asked, they have taken it for granted as if he knew what was done at that meeting of the Masters; I desire to know whether he was present or not at that meeting of the Masters?

Mr. Cottingham. I was not, I said so before.

E. of Macclesfield. Then I think he says the Day of Payment of this Money was on the thirtieth of July.

Mr. Cottingham. Yes.

E of Macclesfield. What Day was the Masters called upon to meet?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't be positive, but I think it was the Monday before Payment of the 1000 l. This meeting of the Masters was between the Order and the Payment of the Money.

Mr. Plummer. I believe there is a Mistake in this Matter; I desire to know of Mr. Cottingham whether Mr. Edwards was not by when he acquainted the Earl with this Demand, and proposed to him the Method of paying it by Mr. Lightboun's 500 l. and the other Masters 50 l. a-piece.

Mr. Cottingham. No, no.

Mr. Plummer. I desire it may be cleared then, and to ask him if Mr. Edwards was not by when he acquainted my Lord Macclesfield of the Demand of the 1000 l.

Mr. Cottingham. No, Mr. Edwards was not by: When this 1000 l. was directed to be paid, Mr. Edwards was in the House, but the Earl did not see him; when I spoke to Mr. Lightboun for the 500 l. it was only between Mr. Lightboun and me, Mr. Edwards was in the House when my Lord spoke to me, and ordered me to Mr. Edwards to convene the Masters together.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked whether the 1000 l. was paid before he made the Proposal to my Lord Macclesfield, that Mr. Lightboun's 500 l. and the other Mastres 50 l. would pay it?

Mr. Cottingham. The Money was paid afterwards, I have told you so before.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Before the 1000 l. was paid, whether did not you hear that the Masters had refused to advance the further Sum of 50 l. a-piece?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I told you so before, that Mr. Lightboun would not pay his 500 l. so the other Masters did not pay their 50 l. a-piece; this was some time before the Payment of the 1000 l.

Mr. Elphinstone called.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, we desire Mr. Elphinstone to give your Lordships an Account of what he knows of the Application of Mr. Lockman for this 1000 l.

Mr. Elphinstone. My Lords, Mr. Lockman and I often had Conversation together before he received the 1000 l. upon the Account of Mrs. Chitty. He told me often that he had compounded his Debts with his Creditors, and if he could not receive the 1000 l. against a certain Day, on which he had engaged to pay it, he should be ruin'd and undone; and some time after he told me, that his Creditors had been with much Difficulty brought to give him some few Days longer for Payment of the Composition, and that if he had it not then, he should be ruin'd and undone for ever; swearing by the blessed Name of God, that that Disappointment would be a Means of breaking off the Match with the Lady.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Go on.

Mr. Elphinstone. I can't be positive as to the Day, whether it was the same Day that he received the 1000 l. or a Day or two before; but I then heard the noble Earl declare to him, that in Pity and Compassion to his Circumstances, and the great Difficulty he then laboured under, he the said Earl had given Directions to Mr. Cottingham to pay him the 1000 l. and about two Hours after, or something more, Mr. Lockman came to me, and with abundance of Joy told me how much obliged he was to the noble Earl, for that he had relieved him in his Circumstances, by giving Mr. Cottingham orders to pay him the 1000 l. He seemed to express this with an uncommon Pleasure, and did not at all doubt it would be agreeable to Persons of the highest Distinction and Character to know it, and that he would make them acquainted with it. My Lords, I think it was on Friday last, in a Conversation with me and others here in the Painted Chamber, he declared he would rather have given two or three hundred Guineas or Pounds, than have been examined on this Occasion; and said, damn it, it hath happen'd, thro' a silly Word or two I dropt to the Solicitor on the other Side. I asked him what it was, he said it was his telling him he had received the 1000 l. for Mrs. Chitty, by the noble Earl's Direction.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. After this Money was paid, whether he hath had any Discourse with him, and whether it was owned by him that it was out of the Earl's own Poket?

Mr. Elphinstone. Yes, many and many a Time, and with great Respect.

Mr. Plummer. I desire the Council for the noble Lord may explain one thing: I think the Witness said, Mr. Lockman said he had rather give two or three hundred Pounds than have been examined. Whether the Witness doth apprehend by what Mr. Lockman said, that he comes an unwilling Witness?

Mr. Elphinstone. No, my Lords, I did not say that Mr. Lockman was an unwilling Witness, but that he told me and others, he had rather have given two or three hundred Guineas or Pounds, than have been examined on this Occasion.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We shall give your Lordships no further Evidence on this Article; we shall now proceed to the seventeenth Article, which charges the Earl of Macclesfield, that in Order to conceal the Deficiency in Dormer's Office, and to prevent any publick Enquiry, he did from time to time, in Violation of the Trust reposed in him, make Orders on Mr. Edwards for Payment of the Money belonging to several particular Suitors, which had been lodged in the Hands of Mr. Dormer; in Obedience to which Orders several Sums were paid, without Regard to, or Consideration of the Proportion which the rest of the Suitors were entitled to, out of the Effects of the said Mr. Dormer, whereby many of the said Suitors lost the Benefit of their proportionable Share, to which in Justice they were entitled.

The Crime supposed in this Charge is denied by the Earl in his Answer; he had no certain Knowledge what Mr. Dormer's Estate would come out to be; but he was under a full Persuasion that Effects would come in in due Time, to make full Payment; and that the only Reason why they were not paid in an Average, was because no Application was made by any of the Suitors for that Purpose.

Mr. Com.

Mr. Com. Serj. As to the ſeventeenth Article, your Lordſhips obſerve there was a full Perſuaſion both in the noble Earl and Mr. Edwards, that there would be ſufficient to pay every one; beſides I think he himſelf made not above one Order, not more than this one in the Caſe of Chitty; your Lordſhips will pleaſe to obſerve, from the Evidence of Mr. Edwards, that the noble Lord who made theſe Orders was firmly of an Opinion, from the Accompts he had received, that the Deficiency would be made up, ſo likewiſe Mr. Edwards was then under the ſame Perſuaſion: We ſhall reſt it here, that it was no manner of Fault, under theſe Apprehenſions, to make ſuch an Order as that was.

Mr. Robins. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, there is in the Cloſe of the ſixteenth Article a Declaration, ſuppoſed to be made by the Earl of Macclesfield, then ſitting in Court, I had the Honour to be in Court when the Declaration was made: As I had the Honour to be in Court; at that Time, I apprehend that what he ſaid was——

Mr. Plummer. If the Gentleman ſpeaks as Council, he ſtands in a proper Place, but if he comes as an Evidence, I beg he may come to the Bar and be ſworn; I humbly appeal to your Lordſhips if it is not proper.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Dr. Sayer. If the Gentlemen think it proper to inſiſt upon it, the Gentleman is ready to be ſworn.

Mr. Com. Serj. The Gentleman's Character is ſo unexceptionable, that we hope the Learned Gentlemen will not put this Difficulty upon him of taking an Oath in a Cauſe, wherein he is Council.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I inſiſt upon it, becauſe then I ſhall have the Liberty of asking ſome Queſtions which I apprehend I have not now.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we ſubmit it upon the Evidence that hath been already given, he himſelf did declare then, when it came before him regularly, he would examine into it; and the firſt Opportunity this came before him in Judgment, he then put it into a Method, and accordingly referred it to a Maſter, and all proper Meaſures were taken.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we ſhall, with your Lordſhips Permiſſion, now proceed to lay before you what we have humbly to offer in Defence of the noble Earl as to the 18th Article. The Charge therein contained is in Effect, that tho' the Earl knew, that the Maſters of the Court might and did diſpoſe of, and traffick with the Effects of the Suitors; and tho' Propoſals were made for remedying of it, yet the Earl neglected to enquire into the Accompts of the Maſters, permitted, and encouraged them to employ, and traffick with the Effects of the Suitors, and took no Care that thoſe Effects ſhould be placed out, ſo as to prevent ſuch Practices of the Maſters, or that they ſhould give ſuch Security as was propoſed; and this is charged to be done with a corrupt View, and Intention of making an unlawful Gain by the Sale of thoſe Places, and to keep up the Price of them.

The Proof of theſe Matters depends intirely upon the Teſtimony of Mr. Lightboun, Mr. Holford, and Mr. Kynaſton, with the particular Repetition of whoſe Evidence, I ſhall not preſume to trouble your Lordſhips, after ſo much Time has been already ſpent, but ſhall beg Leave to obſerve upon the whole, that there is not the leaſt Evidence to ſupport that Part of the Article, whereby the Earl is charged with permitting and encouraging the Trafficking with the Suitors Effects. So far from it, my Lords, that the quite contrary appears from the Evidence which Mr. Lightboun has given upon this Article. He has inform'd your Lordſhips, that when a Propoſal was made, in order to the making good the Deficiency in Dormer's Office (which the Earl had confeſſedly ſo much at Heart) that each Maſter ſhould out of the Suitors Effects in his Hands, place out a Sum of Money, the Intereſt whereof ſhould be applied for that Purpoſe; the Earl would not give the leaſt Countenance to that Practice, by coming into the Propoſal; but in plain Terms declared he neither could, nor would, give any Encouragement or Direction for the Diſpoſal of the Suitors Effects, for any other Purpoſe than their own Benefit.

My Lords, the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons are ſo ſenſible of the Defect of their Evidence as to this Point, that they ſeem not to rely upon it, but are forced to fly to Implication for Aſſiſtance; and your Lordſhips are told that this Part of the Charge is a Conſequence of the Earl's not having taken Care that the Suitors Effects were ſo placed out, as to put it out of the Power of the Maſters to make ſuch an Uſe of them; and that this Neglect amounts to a Permiſſion and Encouragement to the Maſters, to diſpoſe of and traffick with them as they have done.

My Lords, if this Part of the Article is to be conſidered as a diſtinct ſeparate Charge, it is ſo obvious, of how dangerous a Conſequence it would be to admit ſuch argumentative Evidence only as a Proof of it, that I apprehend I need not trouble your Lordſhips with ſaying any thing more to it; if it is to be looked upon as a Conſequence only of ſome other Part of the Charge, as a Miſchief ariſing from the Neglect of putting thoſe Effects of the Suitors out of the Power of the Maſters to make ſuch Uſe of them, I am ſomething at a Loſs to know why it is made a diſtinct ſelf-ſubſiſting Charge; it may perhaps by that Means ſwell the Bulk of the Article, but we humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether it at all increaſes the Weight of it.

My Lords, the Charge in this Article is not founded upon a bare Neglect of the Earl, upon an Omiſſion only, of doing what it is conceived he ought to have done, for the Prevention of this Misbehaviour of the Maſters; that perhaps was thought too ſlight a Ground for an Article of an Impeachment, eſpecially when the Neglect here complained of does not conſiſt in the not redreſſing any particular Grievance, pointed out by the Complaint of any of the Suitors of the Court, but in the not making general Orders for the Reformation of the Maſters. Perhaps, my Lords, it might be thought, that ſuch a Charge would have been ſufficiently anſwered, by alledging, as the Truth is, that the Maſters have only been continued by the Earl in the ſame Degree of Truſt and Power in which he found them, and with which they were inveſted long before he preſided in that Court: It may be too, my Lords, it might be conſider'd, how wide and dangerous a Field for Impeachments and other Proſecutions would have been opened, by making it criminal in every one who had the Superintendency of an Office, barely to neglect, or omit, the introducing ſuch new general Orders and Regulations, as ſeemed to carry a Probability of preventing the Abuſes of the under Miniſters of ſuch Office; and therefore it is, my Lords, as it may be preſumed, that the Earl's Behaviour in this Reſpect is alledged to be fraudulent, and unjuſt, and with an Intention of making unlawful Gain to himſelf, by the Diſpoſal of thoſe Offices, and with a corrupt View and Intention to keep up the Price of them: So that it is not Remiſsneſs, or Negligence that the Earl ſtands here accuſed of, but Fraud and Corruption, and if this is not made out, we muſt humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Judgment, whether or no this Article does not fall to the Ground?

But what Proof, what Evidence has been offer'd for that purpoſe? None, my Lords, that I remember; but your Lordſhips are left to collect it, by way of Argument, from the Earl's not having made uſe of proper Expedients to prevent this ill Practice; the Maſters, by that means, were more at Liberty to make a Profit out of their Offices, which for that Reaſon ſold at higher Prices, and therefore the Earl muſt be guilty of this Neglect with that View; a ſevere (tho' not a ſtrict) Conſequence indeed! Is the Proſpect of Gain, from hence, ſo certain, as to tempt ſo ſtrongly? And are there no other Reaſons apparent why the Earl ſhould defer his Regulations in this Matter? I need not put your Lordſhips in mind of the great Uncertainty of a Continuance in that high (but ſlippery) Station: And as the Profit ſuppoſed to be in View, depends upon the Death or Alienation of the Maſters, which ſometimes do not happen in a long Interval of Time, when this Uncertainty is added to the other, I appeal to your Lordſhips, whether it can be eaſily imagined, that any, even the moſt greedy Perſon, allowing him only to be in his Senſes, could be prevailed upon to hazard his Reputation and Quiet, upon ſuch diſtant, ſuch uncertain Hopes; eſpecially, my Lords, if the Neceſſity of ſo harſh a Concluſion be excluded, by its appearing that there were other Matters, which might probably enough be the Reaſon, or Occaſion of the Earl's not immediately entering upon theſe Regulations.

It appears, by what Mr. Lightboun has ſaid, that the Earl was very willing and deſirous of having theſe Matters regulated; and that when he firſt informed the Earl that he had ſomething to offer to his Conſideration in relation thereto, the Earl ſeemed very glad, and mightily pleaſed with the Propoſals, and gave him all due Encouragement.

It appears, my Lords, that after ſome time taken by Mr. Lightboun, to diſcourſe the Maſters upon this Head, he wrote a Letter to the Earl, containing ſeveral Propoſals for the regulating the Affairs of the Maſters; and your Lordſhips will obſerve the times and manner of the Earl's ſending for and preſſing the Maſters to bring in their Accompts, which, notwithſtanding the different turn that has been endeavour'd to be given to it, we humbly inſiſt upon it, appears to have been done, in order the better to enable the Earl to judge of and regulate theſe Matters.

As there were Propoſals for regulating the Conduct of the Maſters, in reſpect of the Suitors, ſo ſeveral Grievances, which the Maſters were ſuppoſed to labour under, and in which the Suitors too were ſuppoſed to be concerned, were repreſented to the Earl; and, amongſt others, that of Money being order'd to be paid into the Hands of the Uſher of the Court, inſtead of the Maſters; which was repreſented as a thing of ill Conſequence, and dangerous to the Suitors of the Court, as well as injurious to the Maſters. It appears likewiſe, that it was thought proper, if not neceſſary, to take all theſe Matters into Conſideration together, that the intended Regulation might be entire, and not by peace-meal; and Mr. Lightboun himſelf was of that Opinion, as well as Mr. Holford. And tho' it is alledged, that the Earl was credibly inform'd that the ſufficiency of ſome of the Maſters was much ſuſpected, and conſequently, that a more immediate regard ſhould have been had to what concerned the Effects in their Hands; yet when your Lordſhips conſider how that ſtands upon Mr. Lightboun's Evidence; that it was only a general Intimation, without naming any particular Perſon, and that Mr. Lightboun declared he had no certain Ground for ſuch ſuſpicion; it will not, we hope, be thought a Fault not to ſingle out that Part of the intended Regulation; eſpecially when the ſame Witneſs informs your Lordſhips that it was as impracticable for the Maſters to have given an adequate, that is, a proper Security, as for the great Officers of the Exchequer, or the Treaſurers of the South-Sea, or other great Companies to do ſo. And your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to think it well deſerves Conſideration, whether it was in the Earl's Power to compel the Maſters to give even ſuch Security as they could; and if it ſhould be ſaid, that if they would not have complied, he might have order'd the Money out of their Hands; it will require time to conſider where, in ſuch Caſe, he muſt have placed thoſe Effects. It would have been as extraordinary to have required Security from the Maſters which came in afterwards, and ſo to have put them upon a Foot different from the others, when it was under Conſideration how to ſettle the whole. But, my Lords, the Event has ſhewn that there was not ſo much occaſion for ſo ſpeedy a Precaution in this Matter, for the Purpoſe for which it was then principally intended, which was the preventing the Maſters from embezzling the Securities of the Suitors in their Hands, ſince there is no occaſion of Complaint in that reſpect, they having been all deliver'd up, and the Deficiencies which have happen'd have been in the Caſh in their Hands, of which there was then ſo little apprehenſion or likelihood, that the preventing it was one of the things the leaſt under Conſideration. So ſhort ſighted and uncertain is human Prudence! So different the Judgments made of things in Proſpect only, from what they are in Experience! I make no Queſtion but your Lordſhips will have a due regard thereto, and make all equitable Allowances on that Account.

Your Lordſhips have been further inform'd, that, in order to ſettle theſe Matters, ſeveral Meetings were had, and, amongſt the reſt, one very ſolemn one, at which were preſent both the Earl and the Maſter of the Rolls. I need not trouble your Lordſhips with a Repetition of what paſs'd there, it is ſufficient to obſerve, that nothing being ſettled, the Earl, whoſe Mind was intent upon this Affair, propoſed ſome Expedients to facilitate Matters; particularly, that if the Maſters would quit their Pretenſions to a co-ordinate Power of Judicature with the Maſter of the Rolls, that Matters might be made eaſy, in reſpect of the ordering the Payments of the Money: But this would not be complied with. And when it was found, by Experience, impracticable to bring any thing about, with the Agreement of the Parties, the Earl declared that he would take the whole Matter into his Conſideration; and ſince he could not have the Concurrence of others, he himſelf would regulate theſe Matters as ſoon as he could. Upon the whole of the Evidence offer'd upon this Article, more eſpecially from what Mr. Lightboun and Mr. Holford have ſaid, it plainly appears, that for a conſiderable time paſt, even from the latter end of the Year 1721, here has been an Intention of regulating the Offices of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery; that ſuch Intention has been purſued, and ſeveral Steps taken, and Endeavours uſed, to bring it to effect; and your Lordſhips, I hope, perceive the many Difficulties that have interpoſed, and will not be at a Loſs to find Reaſons for the Earl's not having actually made theſe Regulations, very different from the diſtant view of an unjuſt Gain.

My Lords, the Buſineſs of Reformation, however deſirable it may be, is, in all Inſtances, attended with Difficulties, and in the preſent Caſe, thoſe Difficulties have been increaſed by the different and jarring Intereſt of the Parties concerned; which, at leaſt, prevented their Concurrence in ſuch Reformation, and in a great meaſure deprived the Earl of the Benefit of the Advice of thoſe, who were the moſt able to inform him what was fit to be done.

Your Lordſhips are ſenſible how great a Portion of the Earl's time muſt neceſſarily be taken up in the diſpatch of the ordinary Buſineſs of that Court, and in his Attendance upon the publick Functions of his Office; and if, under theſe Circumſtances, he has not been able to bring his good Intentions to effect, and compleat them, before it was put out of his Power ſo to do, your Lordſhips, we hope, will think it more his Misfortune than his Fault, and that he is not to be reputed guilty of any Neglect or Omiſſion in that reſpect, which can be adjudged to be Criminal. We ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with any Evidence upon this Article, but ſubmit it upon what has been already offer'd.

Mr. Robins. May it pleaſe you Lordſhips, The laſt Article which the Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Commons have been pleaſed to cloſe this ſolemn Proſecution withal, is the Nineteenth; wherein they have endeavour'd to repreſent the Earl, as deſigning to abuſe and impoſe upon his Moſt Sacred Majeſty, for the ſake of skreening and protecting the Maſters from a Parliamentry Enquiry, and to keep up the Price and Credit of their Offices.

But, my Lords, we humbly hope no Evidence appears to have been given that does in the leaſt ſupport or prove any ſuch Deſigns in the Earl.

'Tis true, indeed, that when his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to order the Maſters Accompts to be laid before a Committee of the Lords of the Council, in order to inſpect the ſame, that the Earl, in Obedience to his Majeſty's Commands, thought he could not be too zealous in giving Orders for their preparing and getting the ſame ready, and therefore order'd them immediately to ſet about it.

And when ſome of them objected, that 'twas impoſſible to have them ready by the time expected, the 10th of November laſt, eſpecially Mr. Holford's, which was to be an Accompt of twelve Years, that the Earl however order'd them to be got ready in the beſt manner they could, and told them, if it ſhould appear they wanted more time to make them perfect, that on Application it would, without doubt, be granted.

After which your Lordſhips have heard, that at a meeting of moſt of the Maſters at Mr. Edwards's, when Mr. Cottingham came in, he propoſed to them, ſome ſay, three things, others two; but all of them agree in Subſtance, that 'twas to have their Accompts and Securities inſpected, and to produce the Ballance of Caſh in their Hands, if it ſhould be required.

And as to the inſpecting of their Accompts and Securities, your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to obſerve, that not one of them appear'd to make any Difficulty or Objection to it, but, on the contrary, readily conſented and agreed to it.

But as to the producing their Ballance of Caſh, they were ſomething ſtartled at that, as not knowing what was intended by it; and therefore asked Mr. Cottingham if they were only to produce or ſhew it, or if 'twas going to be taken away from them.

And though Mr. Cottingham's Anſwer was, that they were only to produce it, as he underſtood, yet ſeveral of them appear'd to be very jealous that 'twas going to be taken out of their Hands; and Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters, expreſſly ſaid ſo, and therefore adviſed them to get it ready as ſoon as they could.

But your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to obſerve, that whatever they underſtood by it, yet not one of them ſaid, or ſo much as inſinuated, to Mr. Cottingham that they were not able to anſwer or make good their Ballance of Caſh, only that ſome of them had it not all ready immediately; and Mr. John Bennett ſaid it could not be expected they ſhould keep it all by them, for fear of having their Throats cut, and that therefore they muſt have ſome reaſonable Time given them to raiſe it in; and Mr. Conway expreſſly ſwears that he apprehended they all ſaid they were able and ſufficient to produce their Caſh and Effects.

And, my Lords, it ſeems very natural and reaſonable to believe that they did ſay ſo, or at leaſt that Mr. Cottingham underſtood it ſo, becauſe when ſome of them ask'd whether they were to produce it in Specie, or whether Bank Notes or Goldſmith's Notes would not do as well, he made Anſwer, it certainly would do as well, and therefore adviſed thoſe that had not ſuch Notes ready by them to provide them, and to ſtand by and aſſiſt one another.

Now, my Lords, with great Submiſſion, all this ſeems to be a very natural, plain and artleſs Repreſentation of this Meeting: And when Mr. Cottingham had thus acquainted the Maſters what was expected from them, and had Aſſurances from them all, that they were ready and willing to comply with what had been propoſed,

Can there be any room to doubt but that the Noble Earl was very well pleaſed with this Account from Mr. Cottingham? And therefore when they met after, at the Earl's Houſe on the 10th of November, no wonder he did not particularly ask them the Queſtion, whether they were able and ſufficient to pay or make good the Ballance of their Caſh, for this Mr. Cottingham had before aſſured him him they were, and therefore no need for the Earl to ask the Queſtion over again.

And Mr. Lovibond, one of the Maſters, ſwears expreſſly, not only that he himſelf was ready and willing to pay and produce his own Ballance, but that, from what paſſed at the Earl's Houſe, he believed or thought all the reſt of the Maſters were ſo too.

Now, my Lords, if this be ſo, if the Noble Earl was fully ſatisfied that all the Maſters were able to make good their Accompts, and he was juſt then going to lay a State of them before the Lords of the Council; is it at all to be wonder'd at, that his Lordſhip ſhould give them his Advice or Opinion what Form of Words or Subſcription he thought would be moſt proper to expreſs their meaning by?

And as he approved of the Form made uſe of by Mr. Holford on that Occaſion, was it or could it poſſibly be any Crime in the Earl to adviſe the reſt to ſubſcribe or under-write the ſame Form to their Accompts likewiſe?

And your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to obſerve, from the Evidence of all the Maſters, that not one of them made any Scruple or Difficulty of it, but went into another Room, as if they were really going to under-write the very ſame Subſcription to their Accompts.

'Tis true indeed, my Lords, ſome of them, when they were got by themſelves, were conſcious they could not come up fully to it, and therefore varied the Form, as beſt ſuited their own Circumſtances.

But your Lordſhips have been pleaſed likewiſe to obſerve, that the Noble Earl was ſo far from being in any Plot with the Maſters, to deceive his Majeſty or the Lords of the Council, that he took their Accompts, with the Subſcriptions they had under-wrote, without ſo much as ever looking to ſee if they were conformable to Mr. Holford's Subſcription, and apprehended they really had been all the ſame, till upon reading them before the Lords of the Council, the variance between them appear'd.

But your Lordſhips have not heard of one Word of Reproof given them by the Earl afterwards, for not obſerving his Directions in making the Subſcription he deſired.

If the Earl had had any Deſigns of impoſing on his Majeſty or the Council, by getting the Maſters to under-write ſuch a particular Form of Subſcription to their Accompts, would he not have been more careful before he carried in thoſe Accompts to the Council Board, to have ſeen that they had exactly purſued his Orders, for fear of a Diſcovery?

Nay, my Lords, can it poſſibly be imagined but that when he came afterwards to find they had deceived him, and had not under-written the Subſcription, they pretended, and went out of the Room ſeemingly on purpoſe to comply with; I ſay, my Lords, can it poſſibly be imagined, but that if the Earl had had any Views or Deſigns of his own in it, but that he would have ſeverely rebuked and reprimanded them afterwards for not obſerving his Directions.

But your Lordſhips have not heard one Word of Proof that the Earl complained, or ever ſaid any thing afterwards to the Maſters about it.

Now, my Lords, if this be ſo, can there poſſibly be a greater or ſtronger Concurrence of Circumſtances to ſhew that the Advice or Encouragement which the Earl afterwards gave the Maſters to aſſiſt and ſupply each other with Money and Effects, and repreſented to them that 'twould be for their Honour and Service to appear able and ſufficient; I ſay, my Lords, can any thing in the World be more unnatural, than to imagine, that by this the Earl meant to adviſe them to make a falſe ſhew and appearance?

They had before aſſured him, or given him the ſtrongeſt Reaſons poſſible to believe, that they could make a true ſhew and appearance. Why then ſhould he adviſe them to make a falſe ſhew and appearance? What End or Purpoſe in the World could this ſerve, either for themſelves or his Lordſhip?

This ſurely, my Lords, could never be the Earl's meaning; or if it was, whilſt he was under a Perſuaſion that they were all able and ſufficient to anſwer and make good the Ballance of their Accompts. If he meant to adviſe them to make a falſe ſhew and appearance, it muſt have been by adviſing them to conceal Part of their Caſh and Effects, for fear the World ſhould really take their Words, and be of Opinion that they were as able and ſufficient to make good their Accompts, as they had under their Hands acknowledged themſelves to be.

But, my Lords, as the Conſtruction the other way is not only moſt natural, but alſo conſiſtent and agreeable with all that had before paſs'd on that Occaſion, ſurely, my Lords, it muſt be a ſtrange wreſting and perverting of Words to underſtand them otherwiſe.

The Sum of this whole Article, my Lords, is this: The Maſters were on a ſudden call'd upon to bring in their Accompts of Caſh and Effects, and they did ſo, and declared, at the ſame time, that they were able and willing to make good the ſame on a reaſonable time given them for raiſing the Money; but being afterwards called upon for their Money ſooner than they expected, and applying to the Earl for his Advice and Directions what to do in it, he adviſes them to aſſiſt and ſupply one another with Money and Effects, till their own could be gotten in; tells them it would be for their Honour and Service to appear able and ſufficient, and that he would not have them let the World ſee, at a time when there had been ſo much Clamour and Noiſe about them, that they were not always ready, even at a Minute's Warning, to make good their Accompts.

This, my Lords, is the whole of this grievous Complaint againſt the Earl; and as it ſeems to be nothing but a Piece of good Advice in the Earl given to the Maſters for their own ſakes, in great Sincerity and Friendſhip, as the Earl expreſſes himſelf in his Anſwer, without any poſſibility of Advantage to the Earl himſelf, we humbly hope your Lordſhips will not think it worthy of a Place in this Impeachment.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we ſhall not give your Lordſhips much trouble on this Article, we ſhall only call Mr. Holford.

Mr. Holford not then appearing, Mr. Cottingham was called in again.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Cottingham may inform your Lordſhips of the time the Maſters had the Letter which he refers to, and which he deliver'd, whereby the Accompts are directed to be brought in. We did deſire Mr. Holford to bring it up with him: If Mr. Holford hath not the Letter, and it is not among the Maſters, we muſt examine Mr. Cottingham about it.

Lord Ch. Juſt. King. Mr. Holford is come.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. This is the Copy of a Letter, the Original of which Mr. Holford hath; if he hath it not here, I hope your Lordſhips will give leave to read the Copy.

My Lords, I deſire that Mr. Holford may give your Lordſhips an account of this Letter.

Mr. Holford. My Lords, I have it not; Mr. Kynaſton did inform me juſt now that he believed it might be in his Cuſtody, but he hath it not here.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Your Lordſhips will give us leave to examine Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, there was an Order made, dated the 3d of November laſt, of which my Clerk made a Copy. I can't ſay I examined it my ſelf: The Order is,

Let the ſeveral Maſters of the High Court of Chancery forthwith prepare and deliver to me a perfect Account of the MONEY in their Hands, therein diſtinguiſhing, in ſeveral Columns,

The Names of the Parties to the Cauſe.

The Dates of the Orders for bringing in —— —— } Money or Securities.

The Time of bringing in each Sum.

Particularly expreſſing the Sums transferred and paid to them at their coming into their Office in the firſt Place.

How the ſame hath been diſpoſed.

What Sums paid out, and to whom, —— —— } When and What inveſted in Securities, } By what Order.

Specifying the Securities, by Dates, Numbers, &c.

Where the Securities are at preſent.

What Money remains in their Hands.

Nov. 3, 1724. MACCLESFIELD, C.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we beg leave to obſerve, that this Order is very much the ſame with the Directions given by the Noble Lord before to bring in their Accompts; but, upon the Nature of the thing, there ſeems to be a very good Reaſon why they did not comply punctually with it.

Mr. Plummer. Upon this Obſervation, my Lords, I beg leave to ask this Witneſs, Whether the Maſters have not given in ſome Account, notwithſtanding the Difficulty of the method?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, my Lords, they have.

Earl of Macclesfield. Mr. Holford will inform your Lordſhips of this.

Mr. Holford. I believe this is a Copy of the Order given by my Lord Macclesfield for bringing in our Accompts in November laſt.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked whether the Maſters were able to make up the Accompts purſuant to the Directions given in that Order.

Mr. Holford. I believe it was the next Day after this was ſent, that Mr. Cottingham did inform me of it; I had not ſeen it, I was then at Weſtminſter, ſitting in Court with my Lord Macclesfield; after the Court was up I went into the little Room behind the Court with my Lord, and I did ſay, I thought it would be very tedious to do exactly as this Order directed, becauſe it would require a tranſcribing of every Particular that each Maſter in the Court had ever paid and received for ſeveral Years, even where Cauſes were ended many Years ago, and that I thought it an impracticable thing. My Lord told me that muſt be no Objection to the bringing in of the Accompts; if we could not do as well as he wiſh'd, we ſhould do it as well as we could; and deſir'd them to be ready, that they might be brought in by the Time prefixed.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked whether there were any Arguments uſed by my Lord to recommend Diſpatch in this Matter?

Mr. Holford. My Lord recommended it to me to be ſure to have the Accompt ready by the Time; I think he ſaid it was to be delivered in to the Council by ſuch a Day.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips if nothing was ſaid about making an Excuſe a Pretence for delaying the Accompts.

Mr. Holford. My Lord did deſire that they might be prepared according to thoſe Directions, but ſaid this muſt be no Excuſe for not bringing in the Accompts as well as you can by the Time.

Mr. Plummer. When this Accompt was asked for, how long was it before it came in?

Mr. Holford. Three or four Days or a Week.

Mr. Plummer. And you gave them in compleat and right, fully and amply.

Mr. Holford. Yes, there were ſome little Miſtakes which were rectified afterwards, very ſmall ones.

Mr. Common Serj. By Reaſon of this Queſtion that hath been asked, give me Leave to trouble your Lordſhips with asking another, whether in the Accompt deliver'd in there was any thing more than the Ballance of the Accompt?

Mr. Holford. Yes, the Accompt I deliver'd in was an Accompt of every particular Cauſe, and of the Money and Securities in every Cauſe, and I did add the Solicitors Names in every Cauſe, as far as I knew; I believe all the others were not ſo.

Mr. Com. Serj. How were the others?

Mr. Holford. I believe the others were the ſame, only not the Solicitors Names.

M. Com. Serj. I don't mean that, but whether there was not the Ballance of each particular Accompt deliver'd in?

Mr. Holford. There was the Ballance of the particular Cauſes, and the whole ſummed up together.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether it was practicable to give in their Accompts in the Method directed within the Time preſcrib'd them?

Mr. Holford. It was not.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, whether they have not been call'd upon frequently to haſten their Accompts?

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked whether they have been ſince called upon by the honourable Committee of the Council, to bring in their Accompts according to the ſaid Method?

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked, whether after this Accompt brought in, and the Ballance made upon every Cauſe, they have been ſince called upon to make up the Accompt according to the firſt Inſtructions or not?

Mr. Holford. We have not been required to purſue the former Inſtructions.

M. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have done as to this Article, we have done. My Lords, we ſhall now beg Leave to call ſome Witneſſes, to the eſtabliſhing the Reputation of Mr. Cottingham; when one ſide have endeavoured to leſſen his Credit, it will be neceſſary for the other Side to call Witneſſes to confirm his Credit. As to the Teſtimony he hath given, it is very material, as it ſtands in Oppoſition to the Evidence of others; tho' it be not directly contradicted, yet it is very different from ſome Accompts, which your Lordſhips have received from ſome of the Maſters, particularly from Mr. Thomas Bennett: And as for the Managers of the Houſe of Commons, notwithſtanding he was call'd a Witneſs by themſelves, tho' they have not ſaid in direct Terms that he is a Perſon not to be credited, yet calling him a black Miniſter of Iniquity, and uſing a great Number of ſuch like other Expreſſions, ſeem to carry ſome Inſinuation, as if Mr. Cottingham was not a Man of that Integrity as I believe all that know him will bear Teſtimony to. We beg Leave therefore to call a few of that Number as Witneſſes to his Character and Reputation, who have known him for ſeveral Years, and have had a full Opportunity of knowing his Character and Behaviour in the ſeveral Stations he has been in.

Mr. Goldesbrough called.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked how long he hath been acquainted with Mr. Cottingham?

Mr. Goldesbrough. I have been acquainted with Mr. Cottingham upwards of twenty Years.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, during his Acquaintance with him, what hath been his Character?

Mr. Goldesbrough. All the Time he wa sa Solicitor, I obſerved him to have a good Character; he behaved himſelf with all Integrity and Fidelity as ever I knew any body of his Profeſſion.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. You ſpeak as to his general Character.

Mr. Goldesbrough. I never heard he had any Blemiſh on his Reputation, he always maintain'd a very fair Character.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. During the Time he was Secretary to the Lord Chancellor, how did he behave himſelf?

Mr. Goldesbrough. He bore a very fair Character in the Place, as fair as ever any body did that went before him.

Mr. Price ſworn.

Mr. Com. Serj. We deſire he may give your Lordſhips an Account what he knows of the Character of Mr. Cottingham, and how long he hath known him?

Mr. Price. My Lords, I have known him upwards of twenty Years, I never knew any body ſay any thing amiſs of him, I always took him to be a very fair and honeſt Man, I know no Man in his Place behav'd himſelf better than he hath done.

Mr. Com. Serj. We deſire to ask not only to what Mr. Price's Opinion is, but to what is the Opinion of others, as to his general Character?

Mr. Price. I believe, if you ask his Character of an hundred People, ninety of them will give him rather a greater Character.

Mr. Com. Serj. And as to the remaining ten, what Character doth he believe the remaining ten will give him?

Mr. Price. I believe that the remaining ten cannot juſtly charge him with any thing that is ill.

Mr. Hickman call'd and ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire Mr. Hickman may likewiſe give your Lordſhips an Accompt how long he hath known Mr. Cottingham?

John Hickman. I have known Mr. Cottingham thirty Years, I believe; he had always a very good Character, he was Clerk to me for two Years, he was a diligent faithful Clerk, and hath had a very good Character ever ſince, and I never heard any thing to the contrary.

Mr. Blithman ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We have a great Number to this Purpoſe; I deſire you would inform my Lords how long you have known Mr. Cottingham, and what his Character is?

Mr. Blithman. My Lords, I have known, and been intimately acquainted with Mr. Cottingham, for above twenty Years; while he was a Practiſer in the Court of Chancery, we were now and then concern'd one againſt another in Buſineſs, and I obſerv'd him to act with great Diligence for his Clients, and in a fair way of Practice in reſpect to his Adverſaries; he had the Character of the Practiſers of the Court of Chancery in general, for being a very honeſt and fair Man; after he was promoted to be Secretary to my Lord Macclesfield, every Practiſer of the Court that had any Buſineſs muſt have frequent Recourſe to him, and he was obſerv'd to diſcharge that Office with great Juſtice and Diſpatch to the Suitors, with great Civility to the Practiſers, and with a ſtrict Regard to the Honour of his Maſter and the Court; he was content with his juſt Fees, without ever demanding or expecting more on Pretence of Expedition, or upon any other Accompt: In general, I took him for a very honeſt Man, and he was always ſo reputed during the Time that I knew him.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we might apply to ſome of the learned Managers themſelves, were it proper upon this Occaſion, but we hope his Character is ſo clearly eſtabliſhed, by what Evidence has been already offer'd, that there is no Neceſſity for troubling your Lordſhips with any more on this Head: But we ſhall trouble your Lordſhips with one Piece of Evidence more, of a different Kind, which the noble Lord is with a great deal of Difficulty oblig'd to ſubmit to, and that relates to the private Conduct of himſelf, of which many enjoy the Benefits, and all were enjoyn'd and oblig'd to keep ſecret; but now it is become neceſſary to make known, ſince he hath been repreſented in Publick as a Perſon full of Corruption, that hath ſtudied nothing in the whole Conduct of his Life but the amaſſing great Riches to himſelf, in Oppreſſion of his Majeſty's Subjects; it is now become neceſſary, for the Vindication of his Lordſhip's Innocence, to ſhew that his Actions (which beſt ſpeak the Intention) have been of a different Nature; that as his Lordſhip hath received great Bounties from his Majeſty, ſo he hath been as liberal in ſharing them with thoſe who have wanted his Relief. Multitudes of Inſtances might be given of this Kind, but we ſhall only lay ſome few before your Lordſhips, and then beg Leave to ſubmit to your Conſideration, whether it be poſſible to ſuppoſe, that a noble Lord, whoſe Heart was ſo charitably inclin'd to relieve the afflicted who apply'd to him, and to ſeek Opportunities of doing good to Strangers who were no ways known to him, could be guilty of Actions (ſuch as his have been repreſented by the Managers of the Houſe of Commons:) How can theſe things be reconcil'd, that a Man, truly religious, truly vertuous and charitable, ſhould be guilty of Oppreſſion, Injuſtice, Avarice and Corruption? We beg leave to lay ſome few Inſtances of this Nature before your Lordſhips, and then ſubmit their Weight to your Lordſhips great Judgment.

Mr. Com. Serj. I beg leave to obſerve that in a great many Articles, the Intention being what the Managers have much relied upon, we humbly apprehend we have clear'd the noble Lord from thoſe Intentions he is charg'd with, by what we have already offer'd to your Lordſhips; but if any Doubt ſhould ſtill remain, when it ſhall appear that he was a conſtant Benefactor to the Oppreſſed and Afflicted, that a conſtant Spirit of Benevolence hath reigned in the Breaſt of this noble Lord towards Mankind, you will think it impoſſible for a Man to be ſo contradictory to himſelf, that at the ſame Time as he was doing all the Good he could in Private, he ſhould be guilty of Avarice, Corruption and Oppreſſion in the moſt publick manner. Theſe Qualities are ſo inconſiſtent, that they could not reign in the ſame Breaſt at one and the ſame Time, for that Reaſon we ſhall beg leave to mention a few of the great many Inſtances we might produce on this Head, and firſt we deſire that Mr. Oaker may be called.

Mr. Oaker ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire that Mr. Oaker may give your Lordſhips an Accompt how long he hath been employ'd under the noble Earl within the Bar?

Mr. Oaker. I ſerv'd his Lordſhip all the Time that his Lordſhip had the Great Seal.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may give a general Accompt during all the Time that he ſerv'd his Lordſhip, how far he hath been privy to any charitable Actions he hath done?

Mr. Oaker. My Lords, I have the Names of ſome few in my Hand, I can only tell the Names and Sums of ſuch as accidentally came in my Way, for his Lordſhip always did thoſe Actions privately, and with his own Hands if it could conveniently be. When I firſt came to ſerve his Lordſhip, having heard his Lordſhip's Character of being very bountiful to almoſt every body that came in his Way, I therefore endeavour'd to inform my ſelf more particularly from ſuch Perſons as I apprehended apply'd to him for any Aſſiſtance of that Nature. The firſt that I remember was one Mr. Brown, who had been Author of ſeveral Practical Books in the Law; his Lordſhip was pleaſed for ſome Years before I acted under him, to pay for him 24 s. a Month for his Board and Subſiſtance, beſides Cloaths and Pocket-money; the Perſon that uſed to pay it being abſent in my time, I paid it for near ſeven Years, till Chriſtmas laſt, when he died.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. At the time he died, how old was he?

Mr. Oaker. He ſaid he was on Bartholomew Day laſt aged 102. As I have been inform'd, my Lord ſent a Surgeon and an Apothecary to attend him, and paid them, and the Expence of his Funeral; and the whole that came within my Knowledge was about 120 l. Afterwards there were two Clergymen recommended to his Lordſhip for a Living that was in his Diſpoſal, my Lord could not ſoon determine which to give it to; one of them was a poor Curate in Surrey at Thames Ditton: This poor Man complain'd, that he could not attend longer in Town, nor had Money to carry him home; my Lord gave him a Guinea, and told him he might go home, he need not ſtay, but ſhould be ſent to when he had determin'd what to do for him. A little while after, he came to Town again, and ſaid that it being reported, that his Lordſhip would give him a Living, he was turn'd out of his Curacy, and being an Inmate, was order'd by the Officers of the Pariſh to quit the Pariſh, but that he had not Money to remove his Family; and my Lord being told of that, ſent for him, and gave him a Sum of Money in a Paper; I asked the Clergyman what it was he gave him, and he ſaid twenty Guineas: He had ſoon after a Living given him by my Lord in Kent, and then as he was removing his Family to his Living, they were here in Town by the Way taken ill of the Meaſles; upon which the poor Gentleman wanting Money to proceed on his Journey, came again to my Lord, and his Lordſhip gave him twenty Guineas more, as he told me; and I believe his Lordſhip hath given him ſeveral Times ſince, but I don't know the Particulars, neither had I known any of thoſe I have mention'd, had not the poor Clergyman himſelf told me of them.

Mr. Com. Serj. What is his Name, and where is his Living?

Mr. Oaker. His Name was Vigurs, and his Living is near Sittingbourne in Kent. There was one Man, a converted Jew, I believe he is here himſelf, he hath had of my Lord ſeventy or eighty Pounds. There is one Thwaites, a Quaker, who hath attended the Houſes of Parliament long, and is very well known, hath had a pretty large Sum of Money, beſides other Aſſiſtance; ſixty Pounds I paid him at once by my Lord's Order. There is one Mr. Wickam, a Gentleman in the Navy, a half-pay Officer; he had out-run that, and was in the Marſhalſea Priſon, and could not make up his matters; a Friend of his was perſonally acquainted with me, and ſaid my Lord had ſome Knowledge of this Officer, and deſir'd me to acquaint him with his Caſe, which I did, and his Lordſhip ſaid he had no Acquaintance with him, but had known his Father, and for his ſake would clear him; and it being ſaid he was in for about thirty Pounds, his Lordſhip ſaid if it came to forty Guineas he would pay it, ſo that it ſet him out of Diſtreſs, and cleared him of all Debts; the Gentleman did make up his Affairs, and my Lord paid the Money, and beſides gave him a whole Suit of Cloaths, double Shoes and Stockings, and Wigs, and new Sword and Belt, fit to appear in the World again, which came to ſomething above forty Pounds in the whole. Another poor Clergyman my Lord gave a Living to, and he was very lame, and came to Town to go into the cold Bath; he happened to be arreſted for an old Demand of 36 l. His Wife came to my Lord, who gave her Money for preſent Subſiſtance, and order'd me to take Care that the whole Affair ſhould be made up, and the whole Debt was clear'd and diſcharg'd, and all the Coſts and Charges paid out of his Lordſhip's Pocket. There are abundance of other ſmall Sums I might mention of the ſame Kind, but it would be endleſs to trouble your Lordſhips with them. Then there is another matter which I mention to your Lordſhips, not ſo much for the Value as for the manner of doing it; a poor Gentleman reſiding at the Bath had a Place given him, as he ſaid, in Ireland, but had not Money to carry him over, and therefore only begg'd 40 s. to carry him over to Ireland; my Lord order'd me to remit him five Guineas which he receiv'd, but afterwards he wrote Word that he and his Family was ill at the Time, and therefore had expended the Money, and wanted the ſame Supply again; my Lord then order'd me to remit him ten Guineas more, which I did. Here is at your Lordſhips Bar one Mr. Saunders, a Clergyman, who hath ſundry Times received of his Lordſhip's Favours whilſt a Youth, and upon the Foundation in the Charter-Houſe; and when he went from thence to the Univerſity, his Lordſhip gave him forty Guineas, and afterwards when he was near going into Orders remitted him ſixty Pounds to clear all matters in the Univerſity, which I ſent to Dr. Bentley by his Lordſhip's Order. I don't mention ſeveral other Prrticulars, but they are very numerous, both what paſſed through my Hands, as well as others of his Lordſhip's Servants, hardly a Week paſſed without ſome Inſtance of this Kind.

Mr. Com. Serj. As you was under the Great Seal, you can inform my Lords, when Clergymen were admitted to their Livings, whether his Lordſhip has not frequently order'd their Fees to be remitted them?

Mr. Oaker. My Lord frequently gave Orders to remit the Fees of his own Officers, and at other Times his Lordſhip paid the Fees of the Patent Officers and Stamps out of his own Pocket; and hath given the Clergymen Money beſides, to pay their Journey to their Livings, and otherwiſe to ſuſtain them, and to buy Books.

Mr. Com. Serj. Do you remember Mr. Higgs?

Mr. Oaker. Mr. Higgs was greatly indebted, and in Priſon; his Lordſhip diſcharg'd him, and paid ſuch Debts as were inſiſted upon, to the Value of about ninety Pounds: He is there to give your Lordſhips a particular Account.

Dr. Sayer. As a great deal depends upon the manner of doing theſe things, I would ask him as to the manner in which they were done, whether in an oſtentatious manner, or how?

Mr. Oaker: My Lord did theſe generous Actions meerly as they fell in his Way, and without mentioning them, or letting them be ſeen or known, as far as I could ever perceive; ſo that where I did not apply to his Lordſhip my ſelf for ſuch People as came to me, I never knew it but by Accident; and in Caſes where I was privy, my Lord generally gave me more than was asked, his method being, as far as might be, to ſet Perſons entirely free, and to do them a full Service.

Mr. Hunt, a Clergyman, ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Hunt would recollect and give your Lordſhips an Account of what charitable Acts he hath known done by the Earl of Macclesfield?

Mr. Hunt. I have known my Lord to be a very generous and noble Patron: I can ſpeak from ſeveral Inſtances, relating not only to my ſelf, but to ſeveral other Gentlemen of the Univerſity of Oxford. The firſt time I had the Honour of being known to his Lordſhip, was about Whitſontide 1722, upon the recommendation of one Mr. Thornbury, Vicar of Thame in Oxfordſhire. The Noble Lord asked Mr. Thornbury what Perſons he knew in the Univerſity that were inclinable to be ſtudious: Mr. Thornbury was ſo kind as to mention me as one: Upon which, his Lordſhip ſent for me to dine with him the Day after; I carried him ſome of the private Exerciſes that I had done in the Univerſity, which his Lordſhip read over, and was ſo kind as to approve. His Lordſhip kept me with him ſeveral Days, and deſired to have more Converſation with me, and he diſmiſs'd me with a generous Preſent of twenty Guineas, telling me he ſhould be glad to ſee me when he came to Shirburn, and that he deſign'd to make me a Preſent now and then till he could do ſomething elſe for me. About Chriſtmas after was the next time I waited on my Lord: I carried him again ſome of my Univerſity Exerciſes, which his Lordſhip peruſed, and was ſo favourable as not to miſlike them. His Lordſhip diſmiſs'd me at that time, with another generous Preſent of twenty Guineas, and further Aſſurances of future Favours. About this time I had received a Letter from Mr. Gagnier, Deputy Profeſſor of Arabick in the Univerſity of Oxford; wherein he complained to me, that he had been ill uſed by ſome Perſons in the Univerſity, for having writ a Poem in Praiſe of her Royal Highneſs. This I related to his Lordſhip: His Lordſhip expreſs'd a great deal of Concern for his Misfortune, pity'd his Caſe, and ſent him by me a Preſent of twenty Guineas. The third time I had the Honour to wait upon his Lordſhip was about Michaelmas 1723, when I received likewiſe a Preſent of twenty Guineas: I ſhould have alſo mention'd that I received other ſmaller Preſents from his Lordſhip, five Guineas at one time, and one Guinea at another. The laſt time I had the Honour of waiting on his Lordſhip and receiving his Bounty, was about Eaſter 1724, when his Lordſhip made me the uſual generous Preſent of twenty Guineas, and was ſo kind as to ſend by me thirty Guineas more, viz. fifteen to Mr. Hutchinſon, and fifteen to Mr. Greenway; ſo that within the ſpace of two Years I receiv'd of his Lordſhip's Bounty, for the uſe of my ſelf and the Gentlemen of my Acquaintance, one hundred and thirty ſix Guineas, upon no other Account, and for no Conſideration whatever, but to encourage us in our Studies, and ſupport us in the Univerſity.

Dr. Sayer. I would know whether the thirty Guineas were look'd upon as a ſingle Bounty, or was it to be an an annual Charity?

Mr. Hunt. I believe ſo, they told me they had received it as ſuch before; we all looked upon our ſeveral Benefactions as to be continued.

Mr. Smithys, a Clergyman, ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may give an Account of what he knows of my Lord Macclesfield's Charities.

Mr. Smithys. My Lords, in the Year 1721 there became vacant the Place of a Maſter of an Hoſpital

Hoſpital in the Town of Colcheſter, in the Diſpoſal of my Lord Chancellor, to which Maſterſhip, King James the Firſt had annex'd the Cure of Souls of a Pariſh adjoining, and which Pariſh had no other Proviſion for a Miniſter.

The former Maſter had taken no Notice of the Pariſh, nor had any Care been taken Time out of Mind (as I have been informed by the Inhabitants of the Pariſh) of either burying their dead, or baptizing their Infants. My Lord Chancellor being (as I have been told) informed of this, ſent to me to know if I would accept of the Maſter's Place. I would not miſtake, my Lord's Chaplin ſent me word, if I would accept of the Place, and let him know my Chriſtian Name, his Lordſhip would ſend me the Grant of it. I did ſo, and then my Lord was pleaſed to enquire into the Nature of the Thing. I informed his Lordſhip that no Care was taken of the Pariſh at all, tho' I apprehended the Maſter of the Hoſpital ought to take Care of it. My Lord then was pleaſed to give me the Grant of the Hoſpital, and obliged me to a particular Care of the Pariſh; and at the ſame time deſired me to let him know what Condition the Church was in. I informed him that it was utterly unfit for divine Service; none had been performed in it (as I had been informed) Time out of Mind; and the Pariſhioners were in ſuch a Condition of Poverty, that they were not capable of making it fit for divine Worſhip.

My Lord then was pleaſed to order me to acquaint him how much would put the Church in Repair. Upon this I thought proper to apply to Workmen for their Advice; and by their Advice I informed his Lordſhip thirty Pounds would do it. My Lord ordered me to ſet the Workmen at work, and he would pay their Bills. Before the Church was finiſhed, through my Unskilfulneſs, and the Cunning of Workmen (as I then thought) this thirty Pounds would not do. I acquainted his Lordſhip with it, and he deſired to know how much more would do. The Workmen told me ten Pounds. My Lord ordered the Workmen to proceed, and they ſhou'd be paid the other ten Pounds; but by the Falling of a Wall, and other Accidents, this Money was not ſtill enough. I was aſhamed to betray my own Ignorance, in ſuffering my ſelf to be ſo impoſed upon by the Workmen (as I imagined his Lordſhip would think;) I determined to pay the reſt of the Money my ſelf; but being encouraged by Dr. Sayer, I did inform his Lordſhip of the Condition we were in. I then received an unlimited Commiſſion, to let the Workmen finiſh the Work, and ſend up their Bills when they had done, which they did, and my Lord immediately paid the Money, which amounted to 52*l.* 6*s.* 11½.

Dr. Sayer. I deſire he may be asked what ſort of Pariſh this is, and what kind of People the Inhabitants of it are?

Mr. Smithys. It is a poor Pariſh, but not numerous; there is not one in the Pariſh that is called Maſter; nor one, I believe, able to contribute a Shilling towards a Work of this kind, without hurting himſelf or his Family.

Dr. Sayer. I deſire he may be asked whether the Earl has any Relation to it, or any Eſtate thereabouts?

Mr. Smithys. He hath no Relation to the Town, nor Seat near it, nor any particular Concern, that I know of, for any Man belonging to it.

Mr. Plummer. If my Lord Macclesfield thinks it decent to give this Evidence, we do not think fit to oppoſe it.

Dr. Sayer. The Charities laid out by my Lord Macclesfield, have been to fit out Clergymen for Pariſhes, and to provide Churches for Pariſhes.

Mr. John Meyer ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire this Witneſs to inform your Lordſhips whether he was not formerly a Jew.

Mr. Meyer. I was a Jew formerly.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he would give your Lordſhips an Account of his Converſion, and what Circumſtances of Life he was then in, and how he was relieved?

Mr. Meyer. I was, by ſeveral Misfortunes, and by the Hardſhip of my Relations, reduced to great Extremities, after I was converted from Judaiſm.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. After you were converted, what Charities have you received? Have you received any Collection made for you by any Perſon?

Mr. Meyer. I did apply my ſelf to my Lord Macclesfield for Charity, by the Recommendation of ſeveral worthy Clergymen: Upon which Recommendation, his Lordſhip was pleaſed to beſtow upon me a Charity of fifty Guineas. I was ſet up in a Way of Living in the Pariſh of St. Katherines near the Tower; then the Fire happen'd there, and I was burnt out, after which I had a dangerous Fit of Sickneſs.

His Lordſhip got an Account of the ſame, and ſent me a ſecond Relief of twenty Guineas. The ſame Time that his Lordſhip gave me fifty Guineas, he ſent twenty Guineas to the Reverend Mr. Shute, who was Treaſurer to the Society for propagating the Goſpel in Foreign Parts.

Mr. Edward Sanders ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may give an Account of what he hath received of my Lord Macclesfield's Bounty?

Mr. Sanders. My Lords, in the Year 1713. the Duke of Somerſet, through the Interceſſion of the Earl of Macclesfield, put me into the Charter-Houſe, where I was educated eight Years and an half; all which Time his Lordſhip furniſhed me with Books; and at my leaving of the School, he gave me forty Guineas for the better proſecuting my Studies at Cambridge: In a Year and an half after this, he gave me ſixty Pounds. My Lords, this was not all; for when I acquainted his Lordſhip at my going into Orders, that I owed ſome Money at Cambridge, his Lordſhip was pleaſed to give me forty Guineas more, towards the diſcharging of my Debts.

Mr. Thornbury Clergyman ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips what he knows of his Lordſhip's Charity?

Mr. Thornbury. My Lords, what I have to inform your Lordſhips of is this; that in the Year 1721. about the latter End of July, ſome Application having been before made to my Lord Chancellor by my Father, I had the Honour to be ſent for by his Lordſhip to London. When I came to Town, as it was my only Buſineſs, ſo I made it my earlieſt Care to wait upon his Lordſhip, who was pleaſed to receive me with the greateſt Kindneſs and Condeſcenſion, telling me he had ſome Livings at that time in his Diſpoſal, one of which he intended for me; his Lordſhip likewiſe offered, if I had a Mind to ſee the Livings, he would be at the Expence of my Journey, and that I ſhould have my Choice when I was come back; but I anſwered, I would refer that to his Lordſhip's Pleaſure. In a few Days after, he ordered his Secretary of the Preſentations to prepare a Preſentation of me to a Vicarage in Somerſetſhire, called Ninehead. When the Preſentation was ſealed, and I had received Inſtructions to go and wait upon his Lordſhip for it, he was graciouſly pleaſed not only to give me the Preſentation, but alſo diſcharged the whole Fees, and likewiſe made me a Preſent of 100 Guineas to buy me Books withal.

Mr. Tho. Withers, Mr. Henſhaw called, who not immediately appearing,

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I am told here is a Reverend Prelate, who will willingly ſtand up in his Place, and give your Lordſhips an Account of what he knows of ſome of my Lord Macclesfield's Charity.

The Lord Biſhop of Oxford ſtands up.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire your Lordſhip would give an Account of what you know of this Matter?

Biſhop of Oxford. My Lords, the Queſtion put to me is concerning my Lord Macclesfield's Benefactions and Encouragement to Learning in the Univerſity of Oxford. I am a good Witneſs of it; for my Lord ſome time ſince deſired me to recommend a Number of young Men to him, whom I thought proper Objects of his Favour, and like to make a conſiderable Progreſs in Law, Phyſick, Divinity, or any other Branch of Learning. He ſaid he was willing to beſtow a conſiderable annual Stipend on them, for no other end but to enable them to buy Books, and encourage them to follow their Studies; and this without any Regard to Party, but merely for the promoting of Learning in the Univerſity. I recommended ſeveral Perſons to him, and enquired into the Characters of ſome who were recommended by others, and have no Reaſon to doubt but that every one that was thought deſerving had a conſiderable Allowance. I can't charge my Memory with particular Sums, but believe his Lordſhip ſaid he was willing in the whole, to expend this Way four or five hundred Pounds every Year. This is the Sum of what I know; if your Lordſhips deſire to be informed of any thing more particularly, I am ready to give an Anſwer to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we have now gone through our Evidence, and I ſhall beg your Lordſhips Indulgence for the making ſome ſhort Obſervations upon what has been offered in Defence of the noble Earl, now at your Lordſhips Bar; and as this Proceeding has already been drawn out to a very great Length, I am ſenſible it will become me, to uſe as much Brevity as may be. I ſhall, however, before I proceed, beg leave to treſpaſs upon your Lordſhips Patience ſo far as to ſay, that if in the Courſe of this Proceeding, any thing ſhould have ſlipped from us who are of Council for the Earl, which might not be ſo exactly ſuitable to the very great Reſpect and Deference, which is due from every one to this auguſt Aſſembly, I hope your Lordſhips will, in your great Goodneſs, impute it only to the Inadvertency, which the Variety of Incidents and Hurry attending Proceedings of this Nature, may reaſonably be ſuppoſed to occaſion, and as ſuch excuſe it.

We hope, my Lords, that what has been humbly offered to your Conſideration, in behalf of this noble Earl, has made him appear a Perſon very different from what he has been repreſented to be, by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons; and I am apt to perſuade my ſelf, that if they had been as well informed before hand, of what he had to ſay in his Vindication, as they were of what they had to object to his Conduct, your Lordſhips would have been ſpared the great Trouble occaſioned by this long Proſecution.

It is, my Lords, the peculiar Happineſs of our Conſtitution, to have in the different Parts of it, all the Requiſites neceſſary and proper for the Preſervation of the Peace and Welfare of thoſe who have the good Fortune to live under it. In thoſe, whoſe Part it is, like Centinels, to watch for and guard the Liberties and Safety of the People; who are the grand Inquiſitors, to ſearch into, and expoſe every Thing that has even the Appearance of being hurtful or dangerous to the Liberties or Properties of thoſe they repreſent; Vigour, Warmth, Zeal, I had almoſt ſaid ſome Degree of Paſſion, ſeem proper Qualifications; whilſt Calmneſs, Moderation, and Patience, not altogether without Tenderneſs and Mercy, are the proper Characteriſticks of thoſe, who by the Conſtitution are to determine and judge. And, my Lords, I may venture to ſay, that, to the Glory of our Nation, all theſe Qualities have been exerciſed, and every Part of our Conſtitution hath exerted itſelf, upon Occaſion of this Proceeding: His Majeſty's great Condeſcenſion, in readily laying this Matter before his Parliament; the Zeal and Vigour of the Houſe of Commons, in examining into it; the great Abilities and Induſtry which the learned Gentlemen, who have had the Honour of Managing this Proſecution, have ſhewn, (they'll pardon me, I hope, for ſaying, I could have wiſhed it had been attended with ſomething leſs Harſhneſs and Severity;) and your Lordſhips great Goodneſs and Patience, hitherto ſo conſpicuous, and of the Continuance of which there is not the leaſt Reaſon to doubt, are ſo many illuſtrious Proofs of it.

Give me Leave, my Lords, to proceed further, and mention the Part which the noble Earl at the Bar hath had in this Affair, his Readineſs, when after his Endeavours for that Purpoſe, he found the thorough Reformation of the Court of Chancery a Work too difficult for him ſingly to effect, in laying the Affair before his Majeſty in Council; the ſeaſonable and proper Orders he afterwards iſſued out upon that Occaſion; and his Zeal in preſſing to have them immediately comply'd with; leave him ſtill, we hope, ſome Share of the Reputation and Merit of what has been, or is likely to be done towards the Reformation of that Court. Nor will your Lordſhips be at a Loſs, to what Cauſe to aſcribe this Behaviour of the Earl, notwithſtanding the Repreſentations which have been made of him; when you ſhall conſider the ſteddy Affection and Zeal for our Conſtitution, which on all Occaſions have ſo remarkably appeared in him. Your Lordſhips, no doubt, remember thoſe Times and Conjunctures, which it was thought required not only good Wiſhes and Affection, but Vigour likewiſe and Courage, to ſupport and preſerve to us the Continuance of our Conſtitution. Then it was, and for that End, that this noble Lord ſo eminently exerted all thoſe great Abilities he was Maſter of; and that with ſuch Succeſs, as gained him the Approbation of his Majeſty, who thought his Services ſo ſignal, as to juſtifie his Munificence towards him, and his Goodneſs in raiſing him to ſo great Honour. And can it eaſily be thought, my Lords, that one ſo qualify'd, ſo affectioned, ſo diſtinguiſhed, ſhould enter into a wild Deſign of Deceiving both King and Parliament? Or that he ſhould enter into it, and carry it on in ſo poor and indiſcreet a Manner, as is ſuggeſted in the Charge againſt him? in a Manner ſo void of Thought and Contrivance, that it reliſhes more of Madneſs than any thing elſe. Suppoſe he could be thought capable of attempting to conceal Matters that were ſo notorious to every body, and that by a Means, which from the very Nature of it, muſt in ſome ſhort Time have betrayed the Contrivance; yet ſurely, my Lords, his Fears and Apprehenſions would have reſtrained him from communicating himſelf in a Matter of ſo high Concern, without Diſtinction, to ſo many Perſons as were then ſuppoſed to be preſent; that he ſhould publickly give ſuch Orders as would certainly expoſe him to the Reſentment of his Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament, in Hopes that ſuch a Secret would be kept by ſo many People as are ſuppoſed to be concerned in it; ſurely, my Lords, is a Charge of ſo extraordinary a Nature, as will require better Proof than what ariſes from uncertain Expreſſions, in Diſcourſe with a Number of People at the ſame Time, and they in ſo great a Hurry and Confuſion, that there was very great Room for Miſapprehenſions, and where it was eaſy for one to miſtake what was ſaid to another, as if ſpoke to himſelf: And from hence it proceeded, as I preſume, that the Account given of that Tranſaction, by the Gentlemen concerned in it, is ſo various and uncertain, that we humbly hope your Lordſhips will not think it reaſonable to be rely'd on, as a Proof of ſuch a Charge.

My Lords, the Foundation of this whole Complaint againſt the Earl is his Acceptance of Preſents or Gratuities, upon the Diſpoſal of Places; or as the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons are pleaſed to ſtyle it, the Selling of Places, principally thoſe of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery. We have admitted the Facts, but without admitting thoſe Circumſtances which accompany it, as it ſtands charged in the ſeveral Articles for that Purpoſe; and we hope we have ſatisfy'd your Lordſhips, that it was no Ways illegal to act as the Earl hath done upon thoſe Occaſions. To ſupport our Reaſoning upon that Head, we propoſed to ſhew to your Lordſhips, what the Senſe and Opinion of diverſe great and learned Men had been in reſpect to the Law in that Point, from their own Practice and Behaviour: And we hope that the Evidence which hath been offered for that Purpoſe, hath plainly made it out, that the Earl hath the conſtant Uſage of his Predeceſſors in that Office, as well as of other great Perſons in other Stations, to countenance what he hath done upon ſuch Occaſions, and that without any Marks of Parliamentary Reſentment. If this noble Lord ſtood in need of an Excuſe for having taken Preſents, how effectual would this be for that Purpoſe? For ſure, my Lords, if it were allowed that he had erred in this Matter, yet after ſuch great Examples, your Lordſhips would think it an Error only, and not an Offence which deſerved a heavy Cenſure.

The reſt of the Articles have ſo near a Relation to the Charge of taking of Money, being only Aggravations of that Matter, under the ſeveral Circumſtances therein contained, that I humbly apprehend, they do in a great Meaſure depend upon, and will ſtand or fall together with it. And as the Evidence which has been given in relation to them, and the Obſervations made thereon, have been ſo full, and are yet ſo freſh in your Lordſhips Memories, I will avoid troubling your Lordſhips with a needleſs Repetition of any thing upon thoſe Heads.

My Lords, the Source of all the Evils here complained of in the Earl, is ſuppoſed to be Avarice: Every Thing is aſcribed to an immoderate Thirſt after Gain, an irregular Deſire of amaſſing Wealth. And great Endeavours have been uſed to perſuade your Lordſhips, that the Earl was ſo wholly tainted, ſo thoroughly poſſeſſed with this Vice, that he had nothing in View but to gratify it; and every ſingle Action of his had a Tendency that Way. But ſure, my Lords, the Evidence juſt now laid before your Lordſhips, ſhews a Spirit and Temper of Mind far different from that, and totally inconſiſtent with it. And none, I hope, will object againſt our having entred into a Proof of that Nature; there are ſome Occaſions, and ſurely this is one, that will juſtify the moſt modeſt Man in publiſhing his own good Deeds; and upon which even charitable Acts, as firſt intended, as they ought to be bury'd in Silence and known to none but the great Rewarder of them, may be withdrawn from their Privacy, and diſcloſed to publick View.

My Lords, the Inſtances which we have produced are not of pompous Charities; we ſhould then, no doubt, have been told that Vanity and Oſtentation had the greateſt Share in them: Had they been a few Inſtances only which were laid before your Lordſhips, though far exceeding in Value thoſe which have now appeared; it would perhaps have been ſaid, that thoſe were Starts and Fits of Charity: But your Lordſhips will obſerve that theſe have flowed in a continual Stream, and can be owing to nothing but a conſtant habitual Benevolence towards Mankind, a regular and continual Inclination to do Good. And can ſuch a Temper and Diſpoſition of Mind be conſiſtent with inſatiable Avarice, baſe Corruption, and mercileſs Cruelty, in ſpoiling and oppreſſing Widows, Orphans, and Lunaticks, and ſuch too, who were under his Guardianſhip and Protection?

My Lords, we hope it will be thought impoſſible for ſuch oppoſite Sentiments to reign in the ſame Breaſt, at the ſame Time; and that at leaſt, where any thing may appear doubtful in the Earl's Words or Actions, not only the received Notion of our Law, of preſuming always in Favour of Innocence, but this Benignity of Temper in the Earl will determine your Lordſhips to conſider it in the moſt favourable Light, and never to intend any thing harſh, which will admit of a milder Conſtruction.

The Cries and Tears of Widows and Orphans have been artfully introduced, to raiſe your Lordſhips Compaſſion and Indignation upon this Occaſion. It is no Wonder, my Lords, that Women and Children ſhould be frighten'd at the firſt Appearance of the Deficiency in the Suitors Effects, which was repreſented in ſo terrrible a View; but we hope, my Lords, the Terror is ſunk with the Deficiencies, and that in a great Meaſure theſe Cries are huſhed, and Tears dry'd up, now it already appears (as we hope it evidently does) that no very conſiderable Loſs is likely to happen to the Suitors, and that the Proſpect of its being leſſened ſtill improves.

Under theſe Circumſtances ſhould your Lordſhips think (which we humbly hope there is no Ground to ſuppoſe) that the Earl has fallen into any Miſtakes; yet when his Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Commons, have extended their Clemency to thoſe Maſters, who have been the acknowledged, the immediate Inſtruments and Actors of the Evils complained of, and of whatever may be prejudicial to the Suitors; and the Legiſlature hath interpoſed, to preſerve them in the Enjoyment of their Offices; we hope the Earl would not be the only Object, on which your Lordſhips Goodneſs did not ſhine. We rather hope your Lordſhips will conſider his Misfortunes; and when you look upon the high Eminency from whence he is fallen, and view him at your Lordſhip's Bar, ſcourged with the ſevereſt Stripes the Tongue can inflict (and what can be more cutting?) a Puniſhment, from which he had ſome Reaſon to expect that his Relation to your illuſtrious Body might have protected him: That theſe Circumſtances will raiſe thoſe generous Sentiments of Tenderneſs, which always dwell in noble Breaſts: A Tenderneſs, no ways inconſiſtent with your Lordſhips Juſtice, to which the Earl chearfully ſubmits himſelf; and that in Imitation of the unerring Judge of all, whoſe Vicegerents you are on this Occaſion, your Lordſhips will in Judgment remember Mercy.

Mr. Onſlow. I would not interrupt the Gentleman that ſpoke laſt before he had ended; but I muſt now, before this Gentleman goes on, inform your Lordſhips that an Incident hath happen'd, that the Managers think they are obliged to take Notice of. The Right Reverend Prelate is not by the Managers in the leaſt ſuſpected as to his Veracity, and the Truth of what he ſays; but in judicial Proceedings, eſpecially in a criminal Caſe, as this is, the Managers think Witneſſes of all Sorts are to be examined upon Oath; not, as I have ſaid, that they have any Doubt of the Reverend Prelate's Veracity; but for the ſake of the Precedent, and to prevent ill Conſequences, the Managers think his Lordſhip muſt, as all other Perſons do, give his Teſtimony upon Oath: Your Lordſhips have Precedents in the Caſe of my Lord Strafford and others. The Witneſſes, if Members of your Lordſhips Houſe, are to be ſworn at the Table, and give their Evidence in their Place.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, if it is inſiſted upon, that what the Reverend Prelate ſays ſhould be taken as Evidence; we humbly apprehend, according to the Rule of Evidence, he is to give his Evidence upon Oath. And this being ſo material an Incident, and the Proſecution having proceeded ſo far, we humbly beg leave to put your Lordſhips in mind, that it is inſiſted upon in Point of Teſtimony, that the Reverend Prelate would be pleaſed to be ſworn.

Lord Lechmere. No doubt but the Reverend Prelate ought to be ſworn. It was not taken Notice of. If the Prelate be called upon as a Witneſs, his Evidence muſt be upon Oath.

Biſhop of Oxford. My Lords, I ſhould be very ſorry to give any Offence to your Lordſhips; if the honourable Managers inſiſt upon it that I take my Oath, and your Lordſhips direct me ſo to do, I am as willing to give my Evidence upon Oath, as without it. I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether you will look upon the Journals, to ſee how the Precedents ſtand.

Lord Lechmere. If it be inſiſted upon to look into the Journals, the Parties muſt withdraw.

Thereupon it was waved, and the Biſhop ſworn.

Biſhop of Oxford. My Lords, for the Advancement and Encouragement of Learning in the Univerſity of Oxford, I remember my Lord Macclesfield ſome time ſince, told me he was willing to allow conſiderable Salaries to Perſons that were ſtudious and ſober; and that this ſhould be done for the Advancement of any Sort of Learning in general, without reſtraining it to any particular Science or Faculty, and without any Relation to Party, provided the Perſons were worthy: And I deſire Leave to own to your Lordſhips, that otherwiſe I would not have had any Concern in it. I did, my Lords, recommend ſeveral Perſons, whom I thought proper Objects of his Lordſhip's Bounty; and at his Lordſhip's Requeſt, enquired the Characters of others, who had been before recommended to him. I have Reaſon to believe that ſeveral of theſe ſucceeded in his Lordſhip's Favour, and received bountifully from him. I dare not, at this Diſtance of Time, charge my Memory with particular Sums, but believe that the noble Lord aſſured me, he was willing, in the whole, to lay out this way, four or five hundred Pounds a Year. This, as near as I can remember, is the Subſtance of what I ſaid before.

Mr. Robins. My Lords, I ſhall preſume to take up very little of your Lordſhips Time, in obſerving on what has paſs'd at this ſolemn Aſſembly of the two Houſes of Parliament.

The Occaſion of it has been to examine into the Conduct and Behaviour of a Member of your own auguſt Body, during the Time he had the Honour to ſerve his moſt ſacred Majeſty in the high Office of Lord Chancellor.

And the Commons have faithfully diſcharged their Part, by omitting no one Circumſtance or Ingredient, that could poſſibly ſerve to heighten and aggravate the Crimes they have thought fit to lay to his Charge.

But whether after all, the Miſtakes, the Inadvertencies, the Example of others, and the Frailties even of human Nature itſelf, are not the whole, the Sum total of all this ſolemn and pompous Tryal, will I believe with many remain for ever the Queſtion.

'Twould not perhaps be for the Service of this noble Earl to ſay, that every Step he took, every Advance he made, for the Benefit and Relief of the the Suitors of the Court where he preſided, was the beſt that could poſſibly have been invented; 'twill, we hope, be ſufficient to ſay, that he ſincerely thought them the beſt: And if better have been ſince found out, which have prov'd more effectual to the ſame end, it only proves him not to have been infallible, which ſurely is no Crime.

And if the Actions of his private Life, his Juſtice, his Piety, his Charity, and his Compaſſion for others, may be allowed to caſt any Light or Reflection on his publick Conduct and Behaviour, I believe, my Lords, I may preſume to affirm that thoſe who are acquainted with his Innocence in the one, will never be brought to think him criminal in the other.

My Lords, I am afraid many are the Abuſes, the Corruptions and the Evils which have ſprung up in our Courts of Juſtice, even to the Diſparagement and Diſcredit of Juſtice itſelf. And Complaints of this kind have been made in almoſt all Ages, though at the ſame time they have been juſtly placed to the Account of ſome of the loweſt, and moſt inferior Officers and Miniſters, which are neceſſarily and unavoidably made uſe of in the Diſpenſation and Diſtribution of Juſtice.

And if an effectual Method of Cure could be found out for theſe; if thoſe who are to give the laſt Hand to the Completion of Juſtice were pure, the Streams would then run clear and undiſturbed to the end.

But, till that is done, till Means are applied for the purging and clearing theſe Channels, thro' which Juſtice muſt be conveyed, 'tis no wonder that the Fountains themſelves look as it were muddy, and polluted by Reflection.

But, my Lords, how deſirable ſoever theſe Ends may be, they are only the Work of the Legiſlature; a Chancellor, or a Judge, may ſit by and lament, but they cannot help them.

They are only to be effected by that Power, which has a ſort of Omnipotence; and when they are effected, I believe none will rejoice and congratulate themſelves more, than the many learned, great, and upright Men, which preſide in our ſeveral Courts of Juſtice.

In the mean time, my Lords, as the Sentence which is prayed againſt this noble Earl, will be of little Avail to ſtop the Miſchief; as 'twill in ſome ſort be a Puniſhment of the Innocent, and letting the Guilty eſcape: We are too well acquainted with your Lordſhips juſt and righteous Proceedings, to be in any Pain for this noble Earl.

Let ſelling of Places, taking of Preſents, or any other the known and uſual Profits attending great Preferment, be for ever aboliſh'd by a plain and explicit Law. And I believe I may preſume to ſay, that no Complaints of this kind will ever be made more; that Weſtminſter-Hall will never again be named in an Impeachment, and that your Lordſhips will have no Trouble of this kind for the future.

But this, my Lords, I am ſure I may venture to ſay, and I will ſay no more; that if it had been the Fortune of this noble Earl to have liv'd in ſuch happy Days, his Name would never have been tranſmitted to Poſterity in an Impeachment.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, we are now come to the Cloſe of the Defence, wherein to avoid Confuſion, I have hitherto confined my ſelf to the particular Part which it was my Duty to open; your Lordſhips will therefore permit me to take Leave of this auguſt Aſſembly with ſome few ſhort Obſervations both upon the Charge and the Defence.

Your Lordſhips did for four Days ſucceſſively ſit to hear this noble Earl arraign'd as the moſt corrupt, oppreſſive, and avaritious Perſon upon Earth: It was done too, my Lords, in a Manner, from which I ſhould have thought the Relation he bears to your Lordſhips would have been a ſufficient Protection; and without which the honourable Managers might very well have diſcharged their Duty to the Houſe of Commons, in laying the Caſe before your Lordſhips.

But, my Lords, whatever Reſentment this Treatment of one of your own Body might raiſe in your Lordſhips, I muſt for my own Part confeſs, that I heard it all with Pleaſure; as it was an open Acknowledgment, that all honeſt Art and legal Liberty were neceſſary in aggravating the Charge, and poſſeſſing your Lordſhips with that Opinion of the noble Earl, that the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons deſire you would entertain.

My Lords, the Charge in one general View conſiſts of an Accuſation againſt the noble Earl, either for doing what his Predeceſſors did before him, or for not doing what it is not pretended they ever did: A ſingular Misfortune to this noble Perſon, that the following ſuch great Examples ſhould in every Inſtance be imputed to him as a Crime.

As to the accepting Preſents for Offices, my Lords, we have fully proved to your Lordſhips, that the ſame was done by the Predeceſſors of the noble Earl within the Bar; and we muſt humbly inſiſt, that if the Statute of Edward VI. be taken as laying a Reſtraint upon that Practice, yet having put the Caſe, and ſaid what ſhould be the Conſequence, your Lordſhips cannot go out of that Statute to puniſh the noble Earl.

My Lords, it is the Miſery (I may ſay the Slavery) under which other Nations groan, that the Puniſhment for Crimes is arbitrary and variable, and that he who commits the ſmalleſt Offence may be put to undergo the moſt rigorous Puniſhment; but God be thanked, my Lords, he hath not dealt ſo with this Nation, but that this People hath Knowledge of the Laws; Crimes here are ſtated, and ſo, my Lords, are their Puniſhments; and give me Leave, my Lords, to ſay, that this is one of the main Channels through which our Anceſtors have deliver'd down to us that Liberty, which is the Glory of this, and the Envy of all other Nations.

My Lords, the Act under your preſent Conſideration puts the Caſe of accepting Money for an Office, and ſays, the Conſequence ſhall be the Loſs of Nomination: There are no Words that declare Offices were not ſaleable by Law, or that they ſhall not be ſaleable for the future, upon which to found a Proſecution by Indictment or Impeachment; though if ſuch Words were in this Act, I ſhould ſtill humbly inſiſt, that as well upon an Impeachment as upon an Indictment, the Statute, and that only, muſt be the Guide in aſcertaining the Puniſhment.

My Lords, the Articles have beſtowed many Epithets upon this Action; ſuch as illegally, corruptly, extorſively, &c. But your Lordſhips will not find them in this Act of Parliament.

And as to its being an Offence at Common Law, give me leave, my Lords, only to put you in Mind of three Proviſoes in this Act, which ſpeak the contrary in the ſtrongeſt Terms. The firſt is the Clauſe which confirms all Bargains then made, and which were to take Effect at a future Day. The next is a Declaration to what Offices the Act ſhall not extend, ſome whereof are of a publick Nature, as Keeper of a Foreſt, Manor, &c. And the third is that which takes Notice, that by Law the Judges might diſpoſe of Offices, and therefore leaves them to the full Liberty they had before the Act.

And if in this Impeachment we ſtand clear as to the Selling of Offices, then no Acts or Omiſſions towards raiſing the Price (if any ſuch had been proved) will make the Earl criminal, which is the whole of the Charge.

My Lords, your Lordſhips were told in a very moving Manner, that the noble Earl was purſued hither by the united Cries of Widows and Orphans——— But we have heard none: No Inſtance has been given of any one Preference in Judgment, of one Penny taken during the whole Courſe of his adminiſtring Juſtice to theſe Kingdoms, or of any one voluntary Complaint that has been made againſt the Earl; and yet, my Lords, he has been repreſented as if his Crimes were full blown, as if he had diveſted himſelf of Humanity, and taken Pleaſure in the Miſery and Diſtreſs of his Fellow Subjects; as one, whoſe only Motive of Action was inordinate Gain, and wicked Lucre; and as one overtaken by the Commons, triumphing in the Luxury of unpuniſh'd Crimes. You have been told too, my Lords, That in him Oppreſſion uſurped the Seat of Juſtice; that by him the Beauty of Juſtice was deformed, and through his Means Juſtice ſtood afar off, and Equity could not enter.—How little Ground, my Lords, there was for theſe Complaints, may, I think, be fairly inferred from the Defect of Evidence in this Particular, ſince after the ſtricteſt Scrutiny, both into his publick and private Life, your Lordſhips have not had one Witneſs appear at your Bar againſt him.

But, my Lords, ſince the Cries of Widows and Orphans were ſo much mentioned by the honourable Managers; we, who are Council for the noble Earl, thought it our Duty to ſhew your Lordſhips, that thoſe Cries were not againſt him as an Oppreſſor, but to him as a Reliever. And how little ſoever this noble Earl thought of having an Account of theſe Matters brought to your Lordſhips Bar, yet ſurely, my Lords, this is now a Circumſtance, under which it is lawful for the left Hand to know what the right Hand doth. And theſe Acts of Charity and Generoſity, which were not treaſured up for your Lordſhips Bar, but for a greater, are however proper to appear in this Place, in Vindication of the noble Earl againſt a Charge of Covetouſneſs and Corruption.

And now, my Lords, give me leave to add, That tho' the private manner in which theſe Charities were performed, has made it neceſſary for us to enter into a particular Account, and an Account that takes in ſome of them only; yet the noble Earl has a Merit to plead, of which I am ſure there is no Occaſion to call a Witneſs. Your Lordſhips all remember the Time when he preſided in the Queen's Bench, and ſaw (unmoved) the Tide of Preferment rolling towards a diſtant Shore. The true Intereſt of his Country in the preſent Royal Family was then his ſteddy Purſuit, and his Merit conſiſted in advancing it to the utmoſt. And his Majeſty, who was beſt able to judge of the Greatneſs of his Services, thought they deſerved a Reward proportion'd to the moſt exalted Merit, and therefore added him to your Lordſhips Body.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I beg Leave that I may have the Liberty to lay before your Lordſhips ſome Obſervations on the ſeveral Parts of the Evidence given on both Sides.

Your Lordſhips will eaſily imagine, that a Charge of this Nature muſt have affected me very much, and the great Fatigue I have undergone hath not allow'd me the Liberty to conſider every Part ſo as to make the proper Reflections fit to lay before your Lordſhips.

I hope your Lordſhips will give me a little Time to recollect my Thoughts, that I may ſpeak in ſuch a Manner as is fitting to your Lordſhips. I deſire your Lordſhips will give me leave to make my Obſervations on Monday next.

Then the Managers and the Council withdrew; And the Houſe adjourned to Monday Morning next, the ſeventeenth Day of May.

Monday the ſeventeenth of May, 1725.

The Eighth Day.

THE Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as alſo the other Proclamation, that all Perſons concerned were to take Notice, that Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now ſtood upon his Tryal, and they might come forth in Order to make good the Charge.

Lord Ch. Juſt. King. Mr. Serj. Probyn, you may proceed.

Mr. Ser. Probyn. My Lords, I am humbly to ask your Lordſhips Pardon for ſome Omiſſions we have made in the Evidence we were inſtructed to lay before your Lordſhips in Behalf of the noble Lord impeached the laſt Day we had the Honour to attend your Lordſhips upon this Occaſion; we had ſome Witneſſes to offer more than were examined at that Time, and we hope your Lordſhips Indulgence will continue to hear them now; they are but very few, but yet ſuch as we apprehend are extremely material to the noble Lord's Defence. The laſt Evidence we laid before your Lordſhips related to ſeveral Charities given by the noble Earl, in order to ſhew that he was not of that avaritious Temper as hath been repreſented in Support of this Proſecution; and that the conſtant habitual Courſe of his Life and Actions hath been directly contrary to any Diſpoſition of this Kind; but we apprehend it would ſtill have greatly added to the Weight of this Evidence, had it at the ſame Time appeared to your Lordſhips what the Funds were out of which theſe Charities aroſe; that the real Eſtate which this noble Lord hath purchaſed, does not amount to more than 3000 l. a Year, and that his perſonal Eſtate ſcarce exceeds 2000 l. When we have ſhewn this, it muſt ſatisfy your Lordſhips, that the noble Earl hath been much more charitable, than according to his Circumſtances he could afford. There is another Thing I beg leave to take Notice of, to obviate an Objection I am apprehenſive we ſhall hear of from the other Side; and that is, that theſe Charities were not given by the noble Lord out of his own Pocket, in regard there is a Sum of Money called Box-Money, which is laid out and diſtributed in private Charities by the Chancellor every Year. But to explain any Suggeſtion of this Kind, we ſhall ſhew that this Box-Money, though anciently us'd to be conſiderable, yet of late Years it hath not amounted to more than 172 l. a Year: And as there hath been always particular Objects of Charity recommended to this Bounty, ſo this Money hath been apply'd by his Lordſhip in the ſame manner it uſually was apply'd by his Predeceſſors; and that no Part of this Money ever went in any of thoſe ſeveral Charities, we have already given your Lordſhips an Account of.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave, on the Behalf of the Managers, to offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration, ſome Reaſons why they ought not to be permitted at this Time to go into the Evidence offered, after the Indulgence of many Days, and Defence made on the Articles, and the Evidence ſumm'd up by the Council for the Lord impeach'd; and a Day is only given to hear the Lord himſelf at his own Deſire, to ſum up or defend himſelf againſt the Charge againſt him; they ought not now to be allow'd to enter into a new Defence, or to give new Evidence. It is a new Method of Practice, after the Concluſion of the Council upon the whole Evidence, to ſay they have more Evidence to ſome of the Facts. My Lords, I don't know any thing of that Nature ever allow'd, eſpecially after the Examination cloſed, and an Adjournment for a Day or two. Beſides, as to that Part of the new Evidence which the Council have open'd, relating to the particular Eſtate and Circumſtances of this Earl, how can the Managers be provided to give an Anſwer to it? There is nothing in the Articles leading thereto; they do not charge him with having a great and large Eſtate, though that hath been formerly a proper Article in an Impeachment. But it is not made one in this Caſe; the Charge of the Commons is confined to particular Sums received. If the Managers had gone into the Enquiry of any other Sum, at leaſt without particular Notice to him, I believe it would have been objected againſt by the impeached Earl. Therefore to go into this ſort of Evidence, where there is no Charge by the Commons, is putting the Commons to anſwer what is not in Queſtion, which if they do, muſt lengthen out the Tryal unneceſſarily. If the Circumſtances of his Eſtate be material, there muſt then be a further Time given to contradict their Proof, which poſſibly may be done as to his real Eſtate: But as to his perſonal Eſtate, how is it poſſible for any Man to give an Account of that? Doth not this lye in his own Knowledge entirely? No Body can open his Cheſts or Cabinets at Home: So that it is impoſſible we ſhould know any more of it than what ſerves his Purpoſes. Therefore, my Lords, we ſubmit it, whether they ſhall be permitted to go into this Sort of Evidence, or whether your Lordſhips will enter into any farther Examination.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, We think it is of great Conſequence to your Lordſhips, when an Evidence hath been ſo full, and with ſo great Patience heard to every particular Article; when that Evidence hath been ſumm'd up, and enforced by Council, and every Particular of the Articles animadverted upon; we think there is no Precedent in any Court of Juſtice, where new Witneſſes have, in ſuch a Caſe, been permitted to be examined. Witneſſes here have been produced; there hath been an Interruption of two or three Days for the noble Lord, at his own Deſire, to make his Obſervations on the Evidence; to offer now to produce Witneſſes that they had omitted to produce before, is perfectly new and unuſual. I ſuppoſe they had theſe Witneſſes in their Briefs, and if they had thought fit, they might have called them. I know of no Inſtance of the like in any Court of Juſtice; if the Gentlemen of the other Side will tell us the Precedent, they may. I think it is of dangerous Conſequence, not only in this Caſe, but in all other Proceedings in Courts of Juſtice. If your Lordſhips think fit to let them into one or two Witneſſes, I don't know why your Lordſhips, with equal Reaſon, may not let them go over another Courſe of Evidence.

My Lords, as to the other Matter about this noble Lord's Eſtate, that is not a Matter inſiſted upon by any Evidence that we have given; and I ſubmit it whether it is proper or any Way conducive in this Caſe, to any Thing that is material for your Lordſhips Judgment in this Matter, for this Reaſon, becauſe if it was material, it is impoſſible for us to know the Truth of it. We have no Right to examine this noble Lord upon Interrogatories as to his Eſtate, eſpecially as to his perſonal Eſtate; a Man may in theſe Days have the Opportunity of being worth 100,000 l. and People not know where it lies; as to his real Eſtate it might be known if it was material, but we ſubmit it whether it is incumbent upon us to inquire at this Time of Day into the noble Lord's Eſtate.

It is impoſſible in the Nature of the Thing that your Lordſhips ſhould have that ſatisfactory Account, or that we ſhould have ſuch Notice of it as is proper to make any Defence of it to us material; but we ſubmit it that it is not material at all, and therefore we hope your Lordſhips will keep to the Rule kept in all Caſes in all other Courts of Juſtice where People have made their full Defence, or elſe there would be no End of Things.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, we did not lay to the Charge of this Earl that he was poſſeſſed of a great Eſtate, we have only laid to his Charge what he hath unjuſtly poſſeſſed, we have only charged him with Matters of Fact, which we think we have made out, and therefore hope your Lordſhips will oblige him to anſwer to that, and to that only, and not go to another Thing we have not charged.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we apprehend it is frequently practiſed, that where Council have omitted material Evidence, even after Summing up, the conſtant Indulgence of the Courts below lets them go into Evidence to ſupply that Omiſſion.

We take it to be our own Fault. We had in our Inſtructions, and it is in your Lordſhips Breaſt, whether we ſhall not ſupply that Omiſſion, we ſhall not run into a long Evidence, our Witneſſes are but two or three.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I beg leave to think, that as we point out a particular Fact, diſtinct from any we have examin'd to before, there can be no apprehenſion of any Danger at all; and if, as the Gentlemen have inform'd your Lordſhips, it is what is uſual in Courts below, that ſuch Omiſſions have been always permitted to be ſupply'd, your Lordſhips ſure will act with equal Equity in this Caſe. What we undertake to prove is the Circumſtance of his Eſtate; and though the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons did not make it a Matter of Charge in their Articles, yet in his Anſwer the Noble Earl takes Notice of it, and it will ſhew that the Earl had not his Heart ſo intent upon Gain, when it ſhall appear that his Fortune is ſo much leſs than the World might have imagin'd it to be, and when at the ſame time we ſhew his Generoſity, and that by means thereof his Eſtate was much leſſen'd and check'd.

I would take Notice of the other Matter, with regard to the Evidence of the Charity: It is only to explain and prevent a Miſtake, leſt it ſhould be imagin'd that theſe ſeveral Inſtances of Charity were out of the Box-Money, or Fund for Charity in the Court of Chancery. But, I believe, we need not trouble your Lordſhips with this, for that the Noble Earl is ſo well ſatisfy'd with the Integrity and Honour of the learned Managers of the Houſe of Commons, that he is under no apprehenſion to have that turn'd upon him. The principal Matter is relating to his Eſtate.

As we have in great Meaſure left it to the Earl himſelf to ſum up the ſeveral Evidences, and have done but little ourſelves, the Objection of the Evidence being clos'd and ſumm'd up is not ſo ſtrong as in other Caſes; we ſubmit it, whether your Lordſhips will not indulge us ſo far as to produce a Witneſs or two to this Matter.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we do not ask this as a Matter of Right, but as a Matter of Indulgence. I own the Rule that the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have laid down is a general Rule for the Government of Evidence.

We can't controvert that, but I believe it will not be controverted on the other ſide, that ſuch a piece of Indulgence was hardly ever deny'd, and we hope your Lordſhips will not deny it upon this Occaſion.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I don't apprehend that this is a thing ſo very extraordinary, or ſo dangerous, as hath been repreſented. It would be extremely ſevere if, in a Cauſe of ſo great Length, and ſo much Fatigue, I ſhould have Witneſſes ready to give your Lordſhips an Account of ſome Facts material for my Defence; and my Council happening not to call them, although they were attending, and there ſhould be a certain Form that ſhould exclude me from having the Benefit of their Evidence; I don't know what this is founded upon, I never heard of ſuch a Form or Rule.

There is no Inſtance that where Council hath been ſumming up the Evidence, and, before the other Side have replied, an Omiſſion hath been diſcover'd, that that Omiſſion hath not been allow'd to be ſupply'd. And,

I appeal to my Lords the Judges, Whether they have ever known this piece of Indulgence denied upon any Tryal whatſoever in the Courts below. My Lords, with great ſubmiſſion, the Evidence is not yet finiſh'd; I am ſorry I muſt yet give your Lordſhips the Trouble of obſerving a good many things that have been hitherto omitted: This is a Matter the Council had Directions about, the Witneſſes were attending, but they were omitted to be call'd for; I hope your Lordſhips will not, for ſuch a Miſtake, exclude me the Benefit of their Teſtimony: Had it been calling freſh Evidence to any Matter that hath been examined to before, there might poſſibly be ſome Grounds for an Objection of this kind; but I mean only to call one or two Witneſſes to freſh Matter, that hath not been enquired into before. There hath yet been no Witneſs examined as to the Box-Money, or my real or perſonal Eſtate; and yet thoſe two Things are material, and it may greatly turn to my Prejudice if I have not the Liberty of producing this Evidence in relation to them.

It hath been repreſented that I have an Eſtate vaſtly more conſiderable than in Truth I have; and this Matter of the Box-Money, as I have been inform'd, gave Birth to a Report abroad, as if what I gave for Charity was out of that Fund.

As to this latter, I dare truſt the Candour of theſe Gentlemen, that they do not believe it; and if they do not inſiſt that what I gave was out of the Box-Money, it will be needleſs for me to prove that it was not. But as to the other Matter, I hope I ſhall not be precluded from having thoſe Witneſſes examin'd, becauſe it was before omitted; wherefore I humbly beg your Lordſhips Directions thereupon, whether I ſhall be at Liberty to lay their Evidence before your Lordſhips or not.

Mr. Onſlow. I would beg leave to ſet your Lordſhips right as to that of the Box-Money. The Noble Lord inſinuates as if ſomething of that had been mention'd by the Managers; nothing hath been mention'd of it, either by the Evidence or by the Managers.

Earl of Macclesfield. No, I beg leave to explain my ſelf; I did not ſay the Managers had inſiſted upon it, but only ſaid it is a Matter that I have heard without Doors; but I believe I may rely upon their Candour that they will not make it an Objection now, in caſe they oppoſe my giving Evidence to the contrary.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I am a little ſurprized, why the Noble Lord mentions this of the Box-Money, when not one ſingle Word hath been ſaid of it, either by the Evidence or by the Managers: Why then ſhould this Noble Lord himſelf mention it? And why ſhould he call Evidence to a thing that hath no manner of relation to any thing that hath been ſaid? If his Lordſhip will pleaſe to give us leave to reply; if we then ſay any thing of it, he may then give an Anſwer to it; but it is improper now to be giving an Anſwer to an Objection that was never made, and to which the Evidence hath not ſaid one Word.

Lord Steward. If the Noble Lord thinks this a Point to be inſiſted on, it is then neceſſary for all to withdraw.

Order'd to withdraw, which was done; and being afterwards called in again,

Lord Chief Juſtice King. Mr. Serj. Probyn, it is the Opinion of their Lordſhips, that the Evidence offer'd by the Earl of Macclesfield, with reſpect to the further Account of his Charity, be not now admitted; and they are likewiſe further of Opinion, that the Earl of Macclesfield be not now permitted to give Evidence of the Value of his Eſtate, either real or perſonal.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, your Lordſhips were pleas'd to indulge me to this Day to lay before your Lordſhips what I had to ſay in my Defence, againſt the Charge brought againſt me by the Commons, and againſt the Proof ſupporting that Charge, which your Lordſhips with ſo much Patience heard. From the Time your Lordſhips were pleas'd to allow me this Liberty till now, I have apply'd my ſelf with the utmoſt Diligence to prepare my ſelf for my Defence.

To this End it hath been neceſſary to look over the Notes, taken of the Evidence given on both ſides, and likewiſe of what was ſaid by thoſe Gentlemen who are Managers for the Houſe of Commons. I find it very neceſſary to lay before your Lordſhips many Obſervations on the Evidence, which depend upon an exact comparing of them together. It being a matter that hath taken up ſo much Time, and there being ſuch a Diſtance between the Evidence given on the one ſide and the other, I have been employ'd wholly from the laſt Time till now in the Conſideration of it; and I can ſay with Truth, I have not ſlept five Hours theſe two Nights, and yet I have not been able to get through it, and I am not now prepared to lay before your Lordſhips what I have humbly to offer for my Defence; there are many Things exceeding material to be ſubmitted, and I beg therefore, that your Lordſhips will indulge me a farther Time, ſo that I may be able to do it in ſuch a manner, as may ſet the Evidence and Obſervations upon it in ſuch a light as your Lordſhips may paſs a proper Judgment. I don't do this out of Delay; I believe your Lordſhips will eaſily imagine I ſhould be glad to have this matter over, whatſoever the Event may be, for I am quite ſpent, and my Strength and Spirits waſted with the Fatigue I have already undergone. My Lords, I have been ſo far from any Delay in the Courſe of this Proſecution, that when I put in my Anſwer, as your Lordſhips were inform'd by one of the Gentlemen of my Council, that tho' it was not finiſh'd till between three and four a-Clock in the Morning, yet I choſe to get it ingroſs'd, and put in the ſame Day, rather than there ſhould be the leaſt Appearance of any Delay on my Part; and I do not know whether by endeavouring ſo very much to diſpatch this Work, I have not render'd my ſelf unfit and unable to go on with it: Human Nature can hardly bear what I have gone through.

At my Years, if I ſhould undertake to do it by to-morrow, I am afraid I ſhould ſink under the Weight of ſuch a Task, and not be able to come before your Lordſhips prepared as I ought to be; therefore I hope your Lordſhips will be pleas'd to allow me till the Day after; the Fatigue I have already undergone has been very great, and I hope your Lordſhips will allow me ſuch a Time as you will think competent; the Work I have to do will take up a great many Hours; there hath been Variety of Evidence, I hope your Lordſhips will indulge me till Wedneſday; it is of very great moment to me, and I am ſure I ſhould be unwilling to miſpend your Lordſhips Time, and delay this Matter unneceſſarily: It really gives me the greateſt Uneaſineſs to find my ſelf in that Condition, that I cannot think of being able to do it ſooner; I was before afraid that I ſhould not be able to do it by this Day, but yet reſolv'd to do all that was poſſible for me, and therefore declin'd asking then for any longer Time.

I hope your Lordſhips will indulge me; if your Lordſhips knew the Fatigue I have undergone, and the Effect it hath had upon my Health, I am ſure in Humanity you would make no Difficulty of granting me farther Time to prepare my ſelf in a proper manner, in a Caſe that is of ſo great moment to me; and I hope the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons will not be againſt it; if they ſhould overpreſs this matter, I don't know but the Fatigue of it may bear ſo hard upon my Life, as to ſave your Lorſhips the Trouble of paſſing any Judgment upon this Occaſion.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we don't apprehend the Lord properly applies to us in this Inſtance.

All Parties were directed to withdraw, which being done

The Houſe adjourn'd till Wedneſday Morning Ten a-Clock, the 19th of May, 1725.

Wedneſday, May 19. 1725.

The Ninth Day.

THE Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, the Serjeant at Arms made the two uſual Proclamations, as on the former Days.

L. Ch. Juſt. King. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, if you pleaſe to proceed.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I am firſt to return my moſt humble Thanks to your Lordſhips, for the Time you have been pleas'd to indulge me with, for recollecting my Thoughts, and looking over the Evidence that has been offer'd on either ſide, during the Courſe of this tedious Proceeding; that I might be able to put thoſe Obſervations I have made upon it in ſuch a light, as became one who was to ſpeak in a Caſe of ſo great Importance, at your Lordſhips Bar.

My Lords, I have been under ſome Misfortunes in this Proſecution; your Lordſhips muſt, no Doubt, have obſerv'd the Diſappointments I have met with, in Queſtions I asked of ſome Perſons, who appear'd as Witneſſes in the Courſe of this Tryal, which it was impoſſible I could have had any Inducement to propoſe, but from my own Knowledge of the Anſwers that ſhould have been return'd. My Council, thro' the great Hurry that uſually attends Proceedings of this Nature, happen'd happen'd not to be inſtructed in ſome Particulars, that were exſtreamly proper to have been laid before your Lordſhips upon this Occaſion: Beſides that, the Variety of the Facts, continu'd to be given in Evidence from one Day to another, has in this particular Caſe been carried on to ſuch an unuſual length, that they have not been able in the End to make themſelves ſo perfect Maſters of the Evidence, as the Importance of the Caſe requir'd.

I ſhould trouble your Lordſhips with an Apology for my own Inability to ſupply this at preſent, both from the extream Fatigue I have undergone during the whole Courſe of this Proſecution, as becauſe that my laſt Illneſs has broke my Memory to a great Degree. But whatever Difficulties I have labour'd under, when I conſider your Lordſhips are my Judges, I cannot doubt but your Candour and Goodneſs will have a due Regard to them, and make Allowance for the Want of Order or Accuracy in any thing I have to lay before you; and therefore, rather than ask any more Time of your Lordſhips for preparing my ſelf, I will endeavour to go on now as well as I can.

My Lords, the Charge brought againſt me is very heavy, as laid in the Articles, and highly exaggerated by the Gentlemen that are appointed Managers by the Houſe of Commons.

That which I think is charg'd as the Foundation of the whole is,

My entertaining wicked and corrupt Purpoſes, to raiſe and procure to my ſelf exceſſive and exorbitant Gain and Profit.

This it is that hath made me extorſively and illegally take Money, upon the Admittance of Maſters, and Diſpoſal of other Offices.

And the being ſet upon the Gain ariſing from the Maſters Places, with the Deſire to advance it, or keep it up, is repreſented to be the Source of all the reſt of the Things complain'd of, which ſeem to me to be charg'd only as Contrivances for that Purpoſe.

This is ſuch Corruption of Heart, and carries with it ſuch a Malignity, that it makes every Action and every Omiſſion criminal: Every raſh Word, every Neglect or Imprudence, nay Things perfectly innocent in their own Nature, or perhaps commendable, are ſo infected by it, as to deſerve the ſevereſt Cenſure and Puniſhment.

Whether I wait in Expectation of the Application of the Suitors, with Reſpect to Dormer's Deficiency, or of my ſelf endeavour to get it made good, or even pay my own Money towards it, it is all one, ſo wicked a Heart corrupts all.

And the Violation of my Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Truſt in me repos'd, contrary to the Duty of my Office, is made the Aggravation of almoſt every Article.

I ſhall endeavour to ſhew your Lordſhips, that the ſeveral things charg'd upon me are either not true, or not criminal; or if your Lordſhips ſhall judge otherwiſe of them than I do, yet that they were the Effects, not of Wickedneſs but of Miſtake; and if I have ever done any thing for the Service of my Country, of the Conſtitution, of his Majeſty, and of the Royal Family, and the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and for the Adminiſtration of publick Juſtice, it might not be unſuitable to the unparallell'd Goodneſs of this Reign, for your Lordſhips to have Compaſſion upon the Errors, Miſtakes and Weakneſſes of the faithful ſteddy Servant of a Prince, whoſe Mercy has been ſo often extended, in ſo great a Degree, to the higheſt Crimes of his bitter Enemies.

Before I enter upon my particular Defence, I beg leave to take Notice of ſomething that has been ſaid with Relation to the Anſwer which I have put in to theſe Articles of Impeachment, as containing a Plea of a Pardon at the ſame Time that I inſiſt upon my Innocence; and it's not being a full Anſwer to all the particular Charges in the Articles. As to the firſt, my inſiſting on his Majeſty's moſt gracious, general and free Pardon for all things before the twenty fourth of July 1721.

My Lords, I hope, and am my ſelf of Opinion, that I have not done any thing that is criminal, or needs a Pardon.

But when ſo many Gentlemen of Learning and great Parts, undertake to make out, that That is a Crime which I thought and ſtill think not ſo; ſhould I opiniatre to that Degree, and be ſo confident that your Lordſhips will be of my Opinion, as to refuſe the Benefit of a Pardon, which his Majeſty has ſo graciouſly granted to all his Subjects?

When little Imprudences, and ſo many Omiſſions, and even idle Words, looſe Talk, and unguarded Expreſſions, are laid to my Charge as Crimes, and made the ſubject Matter of an Impeachment; and ſome of them charg'd without mention of any Time, or the Name of the Cauſe in which it is pretended they were ſpoke, or any other Circumſtances by which I might be enabled, either my ſelf to recollect or to make Enquiry of others, in order to prepare for my Defence; it had been Folly in me not to have taken Advantage of the Pardon.

And as for the Reflexion intended, to expoſe the Abſurdity of pleading Innocence and a Pardon to the ſame Offence; what is more conſiſtent than to ſay, I ought not to be puniſh'd, becauſe the Fact charg'd is no Offence, or if it be one it is pardon'd? But had the Gentleman who made it been pleas'd to have read the laſt Act of Grace carefully through, he would have found that it expreſſly provides, that the Pardon ſhall ſupport the Plea of Innocence, and upon Not guilty pleaded, the Act may be given in Evidence to prove the Perſon not guilty. And, in the Notion of our Law, it wipes away whatever Guilt there was, and leaves the Perſon innocent, that is, as a very great Lawyer and a very wiſe Man expreſſes it, it takes away not only pœnam but reatum, the Guilt as well as the Puniſhment.

As to the Reflexion made upon my Anſwer in another reſpect, as if it were not full and direct, and tha in Chancery, the Court where I had preſided, it would be held an inſufficient Anſwer. Probably it might be ſo; but that is, becauſe that a Plaintiff there has a right to require a Diſcovery of all ſuch Facts as are material for his Advantage, upon the Oath of the Defendant. And therefore the Anſwer is not only the Parties own Defence, but it is to ſupply the Plantiff with Evidence, who therefore may except to it as inſufficient, ſo far as it is ſhort of anſwering to, and giving ving an Account of all, of every minute Circumſtance that he charges.

But do they imagine that to be the Caſe in a criminal Proſecution? or that the Defendant there is obliged to furniſh Evidence, or to confeſs any thing that may tend to affect or charge himſelf? No, my Lords; the Anſwer there is only for the Defence of the Perſon accuſed: And not guilty is a full Anſwer.

And, my Lords, I inſiſt upon it, I have given a full Anſwer to all the Articles at the end of my Anſwer, where I have pleaded the general Iſſue, and in expreſs Words ſaid, that I am not guilty of all or any the Matters contained in the Articles, or any of them, in manner and form as they are therein charged againſt me; which is of it ſelf a direct and full Anſwer, without more.

And tho' I have ſet forth other Facts, it is only where I have thought ſome things might be farther explain'd. But there is no need to make any Proof of a Word in my Anſwer, if the Charge in the Articles is not ſupported by the Evidence given againſt me.

And I ſtill hope your Lordſhips will be of Opinion, that tho' ſome of the Matters mention'd in the Articles are proved, and indeed ſome are expreſſly admitted by me, and others never diſputed; yet that none of them is admitted or proved in ſuch manner as it is charged in the Articles.

Having ſaid thus much, I proceed to conſider what has been offer'd in Proof againſt me.

My Lords, The Preamble of the Articles is intended for an Aggravation of my Crimes, by ſhewing what Oath I had taken, which I had violated; and what Favours I had receiv'd from his Majeſty, and was not ſatisfy'd with them.

As to the laſt, give me leave to ſay, that I can never expreſs the Senſe of my Heart for his Majeſty's Favours and Bounties, and that it ought to be a high Aggravation if I have abuſed them.

I pretend to no Merit, but that of a Heart full of Duty and Zeal for his Service; but his Royal Grace and Goodneſs has exceeded, not only my poor Services, but even my Deſires and Wiſhes.

And whatever becomes of me, in whatever State of Life I am, my Gratitude and Duty ſhall never abate.

As to the Violation of my Oath, no ſuch Crime is made out againſt me.

The Oath of Office taken by the Chancellor when he enters upon that Office, has no relation to what is laid to my Charge: I have ſet it forth verbatim in my Anſwer, and no Argument has been attempted to be drawn from it.

But it was ſaid the other Day, that I had taken an Oath upon the Statute of the twelfth of Richard II. which I had forgot, both in my Anſwer and in my Conduct.

As to my Anſwer, I beg leave to obſerve, that the Anſwer is ſuited to the Charge. I am not charged in the Articles to have ever taken any Oath upon that Statute, nor is the Oath ſuppos'd to be taken on the third of November at all mention'd.

The Words of the Preamble, which is the only Part of the Articles that mentions my taking any Oath, are theſe:

" And whereas Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, in " or about the Month of May, in the Year of " our Lord 1718, by the Grace and Favour of his " Moſt Excellent Majeſty, was conſtituted and " appointed Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, " and did thereupon take the uſual Oath for the due " Execution of that High Office, whereby he did " ſwear well and truly to ſerve our Sovereign " Lord the King and his People, poor and rich, " after the Laws and Uſages of the Realm, and " ſuch other Oaths as have been accuſtomed; and the " ſaid Earl continu'd in this great Office, &c.

Where the other Oaths accuſtomed, as well as that particularly deſcribed, are confined to what I did thereupon take, that is, upon my being made Chancellor in May 1718. At leaſt to my poor Underſtanding it appear'd ſo. Nor did I at all imagine, that it referred to what was done the third of November after, which was but the ſame as had been done the third of November before.

And accordingly my Anſwer is confined to the ſame Time that I was ſworn Lord Chancellor before his Majeſty in Council, the fourteenth of May 1718. when I took the Oath of Office ſet forth in the Anſwer; and at the ſame time took the Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy. And there is no Pretence that I took any Oath upon the Statute of Richard II. at that Time.

The Words of the Anſwer are.

" That in the beginning of May, in the Year " 1718. he the ſaid Earl was, by his Majeſty's " great Grace and Favour, appointed Lord Chan- " cellor of Great Britain, and was ſworn before " his Majeſty in Council the fourteenth Day of " that Month; when the following Oath, be- " ing the uſual Oath of Lord Chancellor, was " adminiſtred to him, viz. you ſhall ſwear, &c. " And the ſaid Earl, at the ſame Time, took the " Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy, but no " Oath of Office beſides that above ſet forth.

My Anſwer therefore plainly relates to what was charged, and my taking no Notice of any Oath upon this Statute, ought not to be imputed to Forgetfulneſs, but to its not being charged. It is not charged, and therefore not anſwer'd to.

But it is now inſiſted upon, and great Streſs laid upon it, that at the naming of Sheriffs, which is done in the Exchequer upon the third of November every Year, I took an Oath upon the Statute of 12 Richard II. which extends to the Diſpoſal of the Office of Maſters in Chancery.

To judge of the Truth of this new Charge, your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to conſider what it is that is yearly done the third of November, upon that Occaſion of naming of Sheriffs.

The Managers were not pleaſed to open what paſſes every Year upon the Nomination of Sheriffs, which had been proper before they called the Witneſs to prove it; if they had, it might have ſaved me the Trouble of asking any Queſtions.

But the Examination, and the Teſtimony of a Witneſs that ſpoke indiſtinctly and low, tended, as I thought, to have the Statute enter'd in the old Book of the Exchequer in obſolete French, and ſo ill read as hardly to be underſtood, to paſs for the Form of an Oath then adminiſter'd adminiſter'd upon the Statute which had been juſt before read in Engliſh to your Lordſhips at the Table; and ſo it might be taken to be an Oath conceived in the Words of the Statute, extending to all Nominations of Officers, and to all Times, and not confined to that Occaſion.

I did therefore ask ſome Queſtions, not to quibble away an Oath, as one of the Managers was pleaſed to expreſs it, but to have the Matter laid before your Lordſhips in it's true Light, and which came out to be thus.

The Lords of the Privy-Council and the Judges, being aſſembled for naming Sheriffs for the following Year, at the Time and Place appointed for that Purpoſe, the Act of Parliament of 12 Richard II. is read, directing ſeveral Perſons to be ſworn, concerning their naming of Sheriffs, and of ſome other Officers ſpecify'd in the Act, and with general Words extending to more; then an Officer gives a Bible to every one of the Privy-Counſellors and Judges preſent, who all, one after another, kiſs it; but nothing is ſaid to them by the Officer or any one elſe, nor are any Words ſpoken by them.

I know it has been much doubted how this could be called Swearing, or taking an Oath.

But that is not at all what I inſiſt upon.

There being ſomething ſacred in the Ceremony, I agree the Action ſhould be conſider'd as a ſolemn Undertaking in Nature of an Oath, to obſerve that Statute in the Buſineſs we were then entring upon; and ſo it is an Engagement to proceed then to name Sheriffs according to the Direction in that Statute.

And accordingly this is repeated every Year upon the like Occaſion, though the Perſons are the ſame, and has been ſo by me for ſeven Years together before I was Chancellour, and for as many ſince.

But to extend this farther than that Occaſion, is, I humbly inſiſt upon it, going beyond what the Action then done imports.

The Statute plainly relates to Nominations or Elections, where Numbers of Perſons are called together to name Officers; the very reading the Statute ſhews it, and when I come to ſpeak of the Conſtruction of that Act of Parliament, it will be yet more plain.

And when it provides, "That the Chancellor, "Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal, Stew-"ard of the King's Houſe, Chamberlain of the "King, Clerk of the Rolls, Juſtices of the one "Bench and of the other, Barons of the Exche-"quer, and all others, who ſhall be called to ordain, "name, or make Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Eſ-"cheators, Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, or any other "Officer or Miniſter of the King ſhall be firmly "ſworn, &c." I take it to mean that they ſhall be ſworn when they are ſo called together, and met. And the Practice is accordingly.

There are ſome old Statutes that ſay, that the Chancellor with the Council ſhall appoint Juſtices of the Peace, the Treaſurer with ſome others ſhall name Cuſtomers, &c. But the Uſage at this Time is, (and it has been ſo for ſome Hundreds of Years) that the Naming of Juſtices of the Peace, is in Fact in the Chancellour only; of Cuſtomers and Comptrollers, in the Treaſurer; and many of the Perſons named in the Statute meddle not with naming any of the Officers comprized within either the particular or general Words.

If therefore, my Lords, the Biſhops were deſired to draw up a Form of an Oath to be taken upon this Statute by all the Perſons attending on the third of November for the Naming of Sheriffs, I preſume they would confine the Oath to the particular Occaſion.

I ſubmit to their Conſideration, whether they would draw it up ſo, that every one preſent ſhould ſwear that he would obſerve this Statute, or not go contrary to this Statute, in the Nomination of Officers which he has not any Right or Power to name, nor is ever called to name. Whether they would frame ſuch an Oath, whereby the Judges ſhould ſwear that they would not name Juſtices of the Peace, Eſcheators, Cuſtomers, or Comptrollers, for Gift or Brocage, Favour or Affection, when they cannot name them at all, either by Proviſion of Law or by Uſage.

I apprehend this would be an improper, if not a vain Oath.

And a conſtructive taking of an Oath, which is all that can be inſiſted upon here, ought not to be carried farther than would be proper to expreſs in Words at length.

And therefore, as all the Perſons aſſiſting there certainly take the ſame Oath, and many of them have nothing to do with the Choice, or naming of any of the other Officers in the Act beſides Sheriffs; and as this Action yearly repeated on this particular Occaſion, ſhews it to be intended to relate only to Sheriffs; I have always thought that it went no farther than to oblige me, that in the Affair, which we were then entring upon, I ſhould act according to that Statute.

And I am perſuaded, that in this Caſe, I have the univerſal Concurrence of the Judgments of others. For I do not believe that ever any Perſon that aſſiſted on that Occaſion, had the leaſt Apprehenſion of his then taking an Oath, which related to any thing but that particular Occaſion.

But if they all did take an Oath, ſo extenſive as to reach to the Diſpoſal of all other Employments, (which is the Senſe wherein I believe the Managers would have the Words of the Act to be underſtood,) God knows in what Guilt many of them have involved themſelves.

It is a Part of the Statute, and Part of that to which the Perſons called to name Officers are directed to be ſworn, That none who ſues by himſelf, or by any other, in private, or openly, to be in any manner of Office, ſhall be put into the ſame Office, or any other.

Will theſe Gentlemen urge that every Lord Treaſurer, Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, or other Lords in great Employments, that give Places, or name Perſons for Places to the King, and have once attended at the naming of Sheriffs, have been guilty of a Violation of this Oath, in every Inſtance, where they have named any Perſon to any Office, who, by himſelf, or his Friends, ever asked for the Place given, or for any other?

I can-

I cannot imagine that they will attempt to carry it ſo far. But if they do, I will yet preſume, that your Lordſhips will not, by ſuch a new Conſtruction, condemn ſo many Perſons that are innocent, or thought themſelves ſo.

Hence I think my ſelf not to have taken any Oath upon the Statute of 12 Ric. 2. which any way extends to Maſters in Chancery; and I hope your Lordſhips will think ſo too.

What is the particular Meaning of this Act, and what Arguments may be drawn from the Proviſion therein, I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with at preſent, but ſhall reſerve the Conſideration of it for another place. But as to the Charge of violating an Oath founded upon it, let the Obſervations I have made, from the Frame of the Act and the Nature of the Action at preſent ſuffice.

The ſubject matter of the firſt Articles, as they ſtand in order, and which I believe has given riſe to this Proſecution, is the taking Money for the Places of Maſters in Chancery; long practiſed without Blame, though made my great Crime.

What has been urged from the Nature of the Office, the Oath which the Maſters take, and the Commiſſions granted to them, together with the Maſter of the Rolls and the Judges to hear Cauſes in the Abſence of the Chancellor, will not have any Weight in the Queſtion, whether it be criminal to take Money on admitting them.

I beg leave to ſay, that the Office anciently was quite different from what it is now, ſo that it is in a manner forgot what it originally was. One Branch of thier Office anciently, and then reckoned of Importance, was the framing Writs, which are now made out by the Curſitors; and that which is their greateſt Buſineſs now, there appear no Footſteps of being done by them, or any others anciently.

Their Buſineſs now is chiefly preparatory to the Determination of the Court of Chancery upon References made to them by the Court, in order to their ſtating Things to the Satisfaction of the Parties; or reducing the Diſpute to ſome few Heads, in which they differ, for the eaſier Determination of the Court.

And that which they are moſt generally employed in thus, is matter of Accompts.

Very frequently the Parties, after having had the Items examined and proved, agree before the Maſter the whole Accompt, and almoſt always the greateſt part of it. And if the Parties are diſſatisfied, they are at Liberty, by Objections in Writing which are called Exceptions, to ſtate to the Court the diſtinct Items which they diſpute, by which means the Court is eaſed of the Conſideration of all the reſt of the Items of the Accompt. And the Maſter makes no judicial Determination; but when he makes his Report has only done the Drudgery of an Accomptant, compared Vouchers, heard Objections, convinced the Parties, as far as he could, and then ſtated the whole Accompt ſo as he thinks is right; which at laſt has its Force, not from him but from the Court, which confirms it if not diſputed, or examines the diſputed Points if deſired.

Upon References to them whether Anſwers are ſufficient, they are to compare the Words of the Anſwer with the Words of the Bill, and ſtate whether they find them full: And if the Parties do not acquieſce in the Maſter's Opinion, the Court takes the Trouble to make the Compariſon.

They are likewiſe Caſhiers, not of the Court but of the Suitors, and always at their Prayer.

And the Parties have this Advantage in having the Maſters for their Caſhiers, that they have a ready Method to compel Payment by Order of the Court, and a Commitment of the Perſon or Sequeſtration, (that is ſeiſing all their Eſtates and Effects.) or both, upon ſuch Order, in a ſhort and cheap way; whereas againſt other Caſhiers they muſt be put to the Charge and Delay of a tedious Suit, if the Money be not paid.

And other Officers, whoſe Places are allowed to be ſold, do the ſame Things, make Reports to State Facts on References, are Caſhiers of the Money brought in, and tax Coſts, which is another thing the Maſters do.

As to the Oath; it is the old Oath, before the Office was ſo greatly changed; what Advice to be given to the King it refers to, will be hard I believe to explain, and has not been attempted; but if the Writs requiring their Attendance here were looked into, poſſibly it may be thought, that anciently they attended your Lordſhips in a manner different from what they now do, and have done from before the time of our Memory.

And as to the Commiſſion to hear Cauſes in Abſence of the Chancellor, that makes no more Variation in the Nature of their Office, than it doth in the Office of Clerk of Aſſize, (expreſly allowed in the Statute of Edw. 6. to be diſpoſed for Money) that the Clerk of Aſſize is conſtantly joined with the Judges in the Commiſſions of Oyer and Terminer and Goal Delivery, for the Tryal of Criminals, even for capital Crimes.

To proceed therefore to the Points of the Charge.

It is founded ſingly, upon the taking Money for admitting the Maſters into the Office; and the manner of taking it extorſively, without reference to any want of Qualification in the Party admitted; and therefore cannot be maintained, unleſs the taking Money be in all ſuch Caſes criminal, or that the manner of taking or extorting it in theſe Caſes make it ſo.

Therefore I will firſt ſpeak to the general Queſtion, whether taking Money upon Occaſion of putting in a Maſter, is in all Caſes criminal in itſelf, or by the Common Law, or made ſo by any Statute which ſubjects it to any Judgment or Puniſhment, ment, which can be prayed in this Profecution; as I have expreſſed it in my Anſwer.

And that which I humbly inſiſt upon as to the firſt, that is, whether it can be ſaid to be wicked or criminal in it ſelf or from the Reaſon and Nature of the Thing, is this:

An Office may be conſidered in two Reſpects; Firſt, with Reſpect to the Duty; that is, the Concern of the Publick; that the Perſon be duly qualified to diſcharge his Office well. Secondly, with reſpect to the Profit and Advantage; and that is meerly private, and concerns the Officer only. And whilſt he diſcharges his Duty well, without Extortion, or other Misbehaviour, the Publick is little concerned in it, whether the Profit be more or leſs. As in thoſe Offices, which are very numerous and of great Conſequence, that may be executed by Deputy; provided the Deputy behave himſelf well, the Publick has never concerned it ſelf what his Salary or Allowance from his Principal is, whether it be greater or leſs.

And as the Perſon who is put into a very beneficial Office, ſuch as one of theſe, for his Life, has not any antecedent Right to the Office, and therefore not to the Profits ariſing thereby; and he that prefers him is not bound to give it him; therefore when he puts him into it, he in effect grants him all the Profits of the Office for his Life: And if the Officer make him a Preſent for it, either unexpected, by way of Thanks after he is put in; or expected, which he had told him of before; or give it at the Time, or before that he is admitted; I ſee not any Immorality either in the Giver or Taker. It is Money given for Profits to be received during Life.

The Publick is concerned only in the Goodneſs of the Officer, not how advantageous to him the Grant of the Office is, nor in the Inducement which he that appointed him had to put him in; whether Friendſhip, Acquaintance, Relation, Importunity, great Recommendation, or a Preſent.

I agree, that a Perſon taking a Preſent and putting in an unfit Perſon, when he knew him to be ſo, or had juſt Ground to believe him ſo, is criminal: Not becauſe he has taken a Preſent, but becauſe he has prejudiced the Publick knowingly: It may be an Aggravation, that he had taken Money; but the Crime is, the Wrong done to the Publick in the Perſon advanced. It had been the ſame Crime, had he done it for the ſake of Kindred, or Friendſhip, or for Recommendation, or any other Reaſon.

But if a Perſon very well qualified be placed in an Office, and the Publick has all the Advantage from him that it can have from an Officer in that Poſt, and ſo I who placed him, have well diſcharged my Duty to the Publick; is it material how well I loved him, how nearly he is related, who it was that perſuaded me to prefer him, or what he gave me on that Account, whether before, or after he was put in? Will any of theſe Circumſtances make me criminal in an Action by which I ſerved the Publick well? If the Publick have all the Benefit it can have; where is the Immorality? where is the Crime, if I have an Advantage too? Eſpecially if Uſage has in ſome ſort annexed that Advantage to my Office, which is taken from his?

Obj. I know it may be objected with great Appearance of Reaſon, that this Practice is dangerous, it leads to Inconveniences, it is a Temptation to him that diſpoſes of Places to make ill Officers, and a Temptation to the Officers to extort Money and abuſe the Subjects, in order to get up their Money again.

Anſ. But is it therefore a Crime, where the Temptation is reſiſted, and a very good Officer is put in, and he behaves himſelf perfectly well?

The Point of the Charge now under Conſideration reſts ſingly on this, that I took Money for admitting Mr. Francis Elde (for inſtance); and tho' taking Money is a dangerous Practice, and may be a Temptation to let in an ill Man, is it therefore a Crime to put in Francis Elde, who is not alledged to be an ill Man or any way unfit, and is really an excellent Maſter?

This Argument concludes, only that the allowing it to be generally practiſed is inconvenient, and may in the Deliberations of the Legiſlature be properly uſed to prove it fit to be reſtrained by a Law: But is not of force, in a Court of Juſtice, to prove it to be a Crime in every inſtance, becauſe it may occaſion a Crime in ſome.

Farther as to the Matter of Temptation to put in one unfit:

The Liberty of preferring Relations to Offices is a Temptation to put in Perſons unfit; and without doubt has often prevailed. Suppoſing therefore it might be proper matter of Deliberation in the Legiſlature, how far a Reſtraint ſhould be put upon it; yet in the mean time, is advancing a Relation to an Office which he is fit for a Crime, becauſe in other Inſtances it has occaſioned a Crime, or may do ſo, or is a Temptation to it? And would it be a ſufficient Charge of a high Crime againſt me, to ſay that I illegally and corruptly put into ſuch an Office A. B. my Son or my Brother? I apprehend not.

Till a Reſtraint is laid, the Thing may be innocently done.

If a Reſtraint be laid, the Law will operate upon it, ſo far as the Reſtraint extends; but farther than that, and the Conſequences declared to enſue thereupon, it will remain as before.

Conſidering this therefore in it ſelf, and upon the Reaſon of the Thing, where is the force of the Argument? You took 5000 l. for putting in Mr. Elde, or Mr. Thurſton, a very fit Perſon and an excellent Maſter, and therefore you are criminal, becauſe ſome body elſe at another Time may put in another Maſter not fit, upon his giving a Preſent.

If this then be not criminal in it ſelf, how do they prove it to be ſo by the Common Law?

The only Caſe they have inſtanced as any Authority for that Purpoſe, is that of Stockwith and North in Moor's Reports.

But here give me leave to ſay, that it was proper and juſt for the learned Managers to produce, in making out their Charge, all their Arguments on this head of the Illegality of this Practice, that there might be a proper Opportunity of weighing them, and giving them a ſatisfactory Anſwer (if it could be done) at this Time of my Defence, and I preſume they have done ſo. But if they ſhould think fit to reſerve any freſh Argument for their Reply, which we ſhall apprehend may want an Anſwer, your Lordſhips will in that Caſe, give me leave to inſiſt upon a Right of taking proper Notice of it afterwards, and not let them reap any Bene-

Benefit by lying by in such an unprecidented manner, and expecting your Lordships Judgment, without hearing the other Side upon it.

The only Case, I say, which they have instanced in, is the Case of Stockwith and North in Moor's Reports 781; I have looked upon the Case as it is in that Book, and it appears to be thus:

" North was fined in the Star-Chamber, for that " he being Sheriff of Nottingham in the 43*d* Year " of Queen Elizabeth, took Money for the Goaler-" ship and Bailiwick for that Year; he gave them " first to his Servants who sold them, but he him-" self received the Money. And this was adjudg-" ed to be letting to Farm of his County, contrary " to the Statute of 4 Hen. IV. cap. 5. Yet there " note, that the Statute itself gives a Penalty cer-" tain and pecuniary, and is malum prohibitum, non " in se. But the Court took it, that in as much as " Corruption follows upon the Covetousness of Of-" ficers, and they are forced thereto by the Prices " which they give for Things which ought not to " be sold; that this putting to Farm and selling of " Offices is malum in se, and finable".

It appears here, that this was a Prosecution upon the Statute of 4 Hen. IV. for the Point adjudged was, that this was contrary to that Statute, and therefore whether what was done, was against the Common Law, or malum in se, or not, was not at all in Judgment before the Court.

And the mention of that is introduced as spoke to remove a Doubt, how North came to be fined, when a particular Penalty is (as it is there said) given by the Act of Parliament.

But that is a gross Mistake in the Reporter, the Act of Parliament is very short, I desire it may be read.

It was read as follows.

" Stat. 4 Hen. 4. cap. 5. Every Sheriff shall abide " in proper Person in his Bailiwick for the Time " that he shall be such Officer, and that he shall " not let the Bailiwick to farm to any Man, for the " Time he occupieth such Office; and that the " said Sheriff be sworn from time to time to do " the same in especial, amongst other Articles " comprized in the Oath of Sheriff."

Your Lordships observe, that there is in this Act only a prohibitory Clause against the disposal of such Bailiwick, but no pecuniary or other particular Penalty of any kind, inflicted by that Statute: So that it could not be a question whether a Fine was proper, as that Reporter supposes.

The Exactness of the Report therefore is not to be rely'd upon, and what other Mistakes may be in it, I know not. Indeed it is a posthumous Work, uncorrect Notes taken for his own use, and not intended to be published.

But however, taking it for Truth, that some of the Judges did speak to the effect in that Report: It is a common Observation, that when Judges are proceeding in the Case of a plain and express Law, Words used by them that tend to discountenance and farther expose the Crime then censured, are of no great Authority.

The very same thing is done in Lord Chief Justice Coke's 12*th* Report, with respect to turning arable Land into Pasture; against which there was then an Act of Parliament in being; and farther to discountenance it, it is there said to be malum in se.

And in many Places, Usury is said to be malum in se, and with greater Colour; and yet I believe a Prosecution for it, would scarce be thought maintainable, farther than the Act of Parliament will justify it.

But as to this particular Matter of a Sheriff letting his Bailiwick to farm, before it was specially restrained by Acts of Parliament for that Purpose, there are many Footsteps of its being an ancient and allowed Practice.

The Stat. de attinctis Raft. Sheriffs 5, containing several Provisions about Sheriffs, directs, that " that Statute shall extend as well to those which " were Sheriffs and other Ministers, that let to " lease their Bailiwicks as to Sheriffs and other " Ministers which hold their Bailiwicks, them-" selves."

Where the Sheriffs holding their Bailiwicks themselves, or letting them to Lease, which is letting them to Farm, is spoken of as perfectly indifferent.

Nor is the Expression supposed to be used in Moor, pretended to be built on any precedent Authority or Fact, but is barely the Reasoning of whoever he was that used it, from the Temptation to which Officers that pay Money are exposed; and how just it is, I submit upon what I have laid before your Lordships on that Subject. Tho' the Danger from that Temptation is much greater in the Case of Bailiffs and Sheriffs that have only ignorant People to deal with in remote Parts in the Country, where it is difficult and chargeable to obtain Redress, than in the Case of Masters in Chancery, that act under the View almost of a Court of Justice, and where Persons wronged have an easy Opportunity every Day to obtain Redress.

So that this loose Expression mentioned by Moor, (coupled too with a gross Mistake) not at all to the Point of Judgment, is of very little force to prove the Case to which it is applyed to be against the Common Law, and of less to prove the present Case to be so.

What then is there farther offered? Do they shew that by the Common Custom of England, which is properly the Common Law of England, the taking Money for Offices, has been from time to time punished, or condemned as criminal?

No, it is admitted on the one hand, that there is not one instance of its having been punished or condemned as criminal, at the Common Law:

And on the other hand, it is notorious, that in fact the greatest Offices have anciently been sold even by the Kings: And that not in a clandestine Manner, but so that the Price and what it was paid for, have been entred upon Record.

The Instances have some of them been mentioned.

Richard the Son of Alured in the 5*th* of King Stephen, was to pay fifteen Marks that he might sit with Ralph Basset for the Pleas of the King, which Ralph Basset was then Justicier.

And Walter de Grey in the seventh of King John gave the King 5000 Marks to have the King's Chancery for his Life, and the Bishop of Norwich ingages for the Payment.

I have the Copies of both the Records here in my Hand, if there be any doubt of them.

Nor

Nor are our Hiſtories quite ſilent. In Holliſhead, in the fifth Year of Richard the Firſt (who was one of the intermediate Kings between the two Kings I have named) it appears what was done, almoſt with the Sanction of Parliament, certainly with their Notice, and not with their Diſlike.

" The King (ſays the Hiſtorian) called a Par" liament at Nottingham, and the firſt day of their
" Seſſion Gerard de Camville was diſcharged of the " Office of Sheriff of Lincoln, and diſpoſſeſſed
" both of the Caſtle and County. And ſo was
" likewiſe Hugh Bardolf of the County and Caſtle
" of York, and of the Caſtle of Scarborough, and " of the Cuſtody and Keeping of the County of " Weſtmoreland The which Offices (as he goes
" on) being now in the King's Hands, he ſet
" them on Sale to him which would give moſt.
" Hereof it came to paſs, that where the Lord
" Chancellor offered to give fifteen hundred
" Marks before hand for the Counties of York,
" Lincoln and Northampton, and one hundred " Marks of increaſe of Rent for every of the " ſame Counties; Geffery Archbiſhop of York of" fered to the King three thouſand Marks afore-
" hand only for the County of York, and one
" thouſand Marks yearly of Increaſe, and ſo had
" the ſame committed to his Regiment.

And in the Caſe of Magdalen College, in the fifteenth of King James I. reported in 1 Rolle's Reports 157, Sir Henry Hobart then Attorney General, and ſoon after Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, argues from it, as a Principle not to be conteſted, That if any one procure an Office to himſelf for 1000 l. of the Gift of the King, the Office is not loſt by the Statute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. which ſhews the thing not wicked, not malum in ſe, or againſt the Common Law, for the Prerogative cannot extend to what is ſo.

My Lords,

Whoever makes the Grant, or receives the Money, the King or a Subject, the Temptation under which the Officer who paid it lyes to reimburſe himſelf, is the ſame. And if the Strength of that Temptation make the thing criminal, it will make it ſo in all Inſtances.

It has been taken notice of by thoſe Gentlemen who are of Council for me, that the Proviſoes in the very Statute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. prove, that this is not againſt the common Law, or criminal in itſelf, at the ſame time that it puts a particular Reſtraint upon the Practice of buying and ſelling Offices, or Deputations to Offices.

Give me leave to add ſome Obſervations upon the Proviſoes in that Statute.

Sect. IV. contains a Proviſo, that this Act ſhall not extend to any Office whereof any Perſon is ſeized of any Eſtate of Inheritance.

Suppoſe a Man that has an Office of Inheritance takes Money from a Perſon whom he appoints as his Deputy;

Is not that Deputy as lyable to be tempted to reimburſe himſelf by Extortion or Corruption, as if his Principal had but an Eſtate for Life?

Can a Deputy's Behaviour turn upon the Title of his Principal? So that 1000 l. (for inſtance) paid by him, will certainly make him corrupt, if his Principal holds his Office for Life, but will not make him guilty of the leaſt Misbehaviour, if his Principal have the Inheritance of the Office?

This Proviſo is therefore plainly founded only upon the Regard the Law-makers had to the Property and Intereſt of ſuch Owner of an Office, which they would not prejudice, and therefore he is left at full Liberty to ſell the Office itſelf, or a Deputation to it.

But if to take Money from a Perſon who is to have or execute an Office, were unlawful by the Common Law, or wicked in itſelf; it is impoſſible that the Owner of the Office could have a a Right to that wicked or unlawful Gain; nor could the Law makers have any regard to it.

And ſince here they are careful not to take it from him, they allow it. They in effect make a formal Declaration that it is lawful, and that the Proviſion made by that Act is not ſo neceſſary, as that it ſhould in any degree interfere with his private Property in that Inſtance.

Farther,

Sect. III. makes void all Agreements, Bonds and Promiſes for Money, for any Office or Deputation. But Sect. VI. provides, that the Act ſhall not extend to Agreements, Bonds, &c. made or concluded before the firſt of March then next.

This ſuppoſes it the Practice at that Time, not only to give and take Money for Offices, but to make formal Contracts for that Purpoſe, which the Courts of Juſtice were to compel the Performance of.

Does it condemn them as criminal in themſelves, by reaſon of the Danger?

No: on the contrary it does not eſteem the Danger ſo great, as that to avoid it the Property ariſing upon theſe Contracts ſhould be taken away, or at all impeached: but leaves a Remedy in a Court of Juſtice to enforce the Performance of a Contract, which muſt neceſſarily cauſe a publick Miſchief, if that were true that it is unlawful in itſelf, and that its Unlawfulneſs ariſes from the Miſchiefs conſequent upon paying Money on that Occaſion.

Had the Makers of that Law been of the Opinion which theſe Gentlemen ſeem to be of, and thought ſuch Traffick a Wickedneſs, it had been impoſſible for them not to have put a Stop to it, and abſolutely diſannulled all Securities and Cautions for the Performance.

I do not ſuppoſe the Form of Expreſſion uſed in this Proviſo will be criticiſed upon, or that it will be urged that the Words of this Proviſo only import, that thoſe Bonds are left in ſuch Force as they would have been, if the Act had not been made, and does not make them good.

That would be a poor Subterfuge. The Proviſo makes them not good, 'tis true. Why? Becauſe it plainly ſuppoſes them to be good before; but that Sect. III. would make them void, if this Proviſo did not prevent it; and this Proviſo is on purpoſe to prevent it, and for nothing elſe.

And would the Makers of a Law, would theſe Gentlemen in making a Law, inſert a Proviſo that Agreements ſhould continue of ſuch Force as they were before, if they thought them of no Force before? Nay if they thought them not only void, but miſchievous?

The ſaving a Right of Action upon ſuch Bonds, and making a Proviſo in Favour of them gives them ſuch Countenance, that thoſe that had any ſuch would certainly inſiſt upon them, and the Perſons Perſons that were bound would be diſcouraged from diſputing with them what the Legiſlature did not think fit to deprive them of, and would therefore pay without ſtanding a Suit.

There is yet one Proviſo more in this Act, material to the preſent Purpoſe.

Sect. VII. provides, that this Act ſhall not extend or be prejudicial to the Lords Chief Juſtices or Judges of Aſſize —— "but that they may do in "every behalf touching any Office to be given or "granted by them, as they might have done before "the making of this Act; any thing above mention-"ed to the contrary thereof in any wiſe notwith-"ſtanding.

This plainly implies, that at that time, and before, it was the Practice for the two Chief Juſtices and Judges of Aſſize to take Money for the Offices in their Courts, elſe nothing in this Act could extend to what they uſually did, or be of any Prejudice to them.

And it ſhews too, that the Law-makers did not diſlike the Practice.

I beg leave to ſubmit to your Lordſhips, whether this doth not amount to a Declaration of the Law, that the taking Money for Offices, whatever Danger there may be from it in ſome Caſes, does not neceſſarily in all Caſes, cauſe bad Officers to be made; nor the paying it make the Officer extort: For the Nature of Things changes not with the Titles of Perſons. An Officer that pays Money to a Lord Chief Juſtice, will be under the ſame Temptation to get it up again, as he that pays to a Lord Chancellor.

As to the Wording and Form of Expreſſion of this Proviſo, I take it to be very clear, that the Words [as they might have done before the making of this Act] are declaratory; that they might before the making of this Act take Money for Offices; and becauſe in the Caſe of thoſe Officers the Danger was not ſo great, it is ſtill ſaved and preſerved to them.

If it be ſaid that nothing is ſaved to them but the doing what they might have done before, and that they could not before lawfully take Money for Offices; I beg leave to anſwer, that if that be ſo, the Clauſe is perfectly frivolous. A ſtrong Prejudice againſt the Expoſition that makes it ſo in all Caſes, but much more ſo here.

For as the Judges are always Attendants in this Houſe, and this Clauſe greatly concerns them; it is highly probable that it was drawn up and propoſed by themſelves.

And if taking Money for Offices were then eſteemed criminal; if the Notion is right which is now contended for, that taking Money for Offices was againſt Law, was Corruption; and that this Law was then paſſing to lay farther particular Reſtraints upon it; Is it poſſible that the Judges could preſume to ask not to have a Difficulty or Diſcouragement laid upon their being guilty of Corruption, or their doing a thing unlawful?

Or is it poſſible that the Lords and Commons ſhould conſent to it?

Or if the Judges would ask it, would they not have made it effectual? Would they, by propoſing the Proviſo, in effect, own a corrupt Practice, and their Reſolution to continue it, ask Proviſion for it, and be indulged; and yet not ask what would effectually juſtify them in it?

I hope therefore that what is charged againſt me is not condemned by the Common Law or Uſage of this Kingdom. If it be, it properly lay on them to make it out; but they have ſhewn nothing to prove it; not one Inſtance of its being puniſhed at Common Law, or blamed; not one Citation out of the old Books of the Common Law, precedent to the Acts of Parliament made relating to Things of that Kind. On the contrary, I have ſhewn it practiſed in the higheſt Inſtances, without Blame or Cenſure: And that ſeveral Clauſes in the Statute of E. 6. were plainly founded upon a Suppoſition of this Practice being allowed by the Common Law, and continue the Allowance of it, in ſome Inſtances, to this Day.

This is what I had humbly to lay before your Lordſhips, with reſpect to the Common Law. And I ſhall now conſider it as it ſtands upon the Acts of Parliament.

And as to Acts of Parliament relating to this Matter, they have ſuggeſted only two, the Statute 12 Ric. 2. cap. 2. and the Statute 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 16.

As to the Statute of 12 Rich. 2. The Proviſion of this Statute is to bind thoſe who make or name Officers in the Caſes to which it extends, under an Oath to obſerve the Directions of that Statute in their ſo doing. And I hope I have already fully anſwered the Pretence of my having taken an Oath upon this Statute, which extends to any of the Officers in the Court of Chancery, I ſhall now conſider that Statute, and what may be urged from it, a little more particularly. And,

1. As I have already mentioned, I take the Statute of 12 Rich. 2. to relate only to ſuch Nominations as are in nature of Elections; that is, ſuch where the Nomination is in ſeveral Perſons.

In thoſe Caſes it is common with us to have ſuch Oaths adminiſtred, but not in others. We find them in Colleges, and other Bodies of Men.

The great Uſe and main Intent of ſuch an Oath in thoſe Caſes is, to prevent Combinations, Strife, and Brigues, where the ſeveral Perſons concerned will naturally have ſeveral Views. And the Animoſities and Contentions ariſing thence among ſo great Officers as this Statute takes Care of, might greatly affect the publick Peace.

The Things which cauſe moſt Contentions on ſuch Occaſions, are Money, Affection, (by reaſon of Kindred or Friendſhip) and great Solicitations.

Accordingly this Act extends to all three, and takes Care to forbid the laſt (Solicitation) wholly; and the being influenced by either of the former.

The Perſons called to name, or make Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs, or any other Officer or Miniſter of the King, are to be ſworn, that they neither name nor make them for any manner of Gift or Brocage, Favour or Affection; nor any that purſues by himſelf, or any other, privately or openly to be in any manner of Office, be put in that ſame Office, or any other; but that they make all ſuch Officers and Miniſters of the moſt good and lawful, and the moſt ſufficient to their Knowledge and their Conſcience.

My Lords, in the next place,

2. The Words of the Statute plainly import as much; that the Nomination there meant, is what is made by ſeveral Perſons when they are called together.

"It

" It is accorded and aſſented, that the Chan-
" cellor, Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal,
" Steward of the King's Houſe, Chamberlain of " the King, Clerk of the Rolls, Juſtices of the " one Bench and of the other, Barons of the Ex-
" chequer, and all others who ſhall be called to
" name or make Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs,
" Eſcheators, Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, or any " other Officer or Miniſter of the King, ſhall be " firmly ſworn that they neither name nor make
" Juſtices of Peace, Sheriff, Eſcheator, Cuſto-
" mer, Comptroller, or any other Miniſter of the " King, &c. for Gift or Brokage, Favour or Af" fection, &c.

I own, that there ſeems ſome Difficulty as to this, becauſe I do not know of any Law, at that time, that any of theſe Officers, except Sheriffs, were named by an Aſſembly of ſeveral Perſons.

But though there were no Law requiring it, there might be an Uſage to do it, by ſome Direction from the Crown for better Information.

And what is now done in relation to Sheriffs, turns in ſome part upon ſuch Uſage continued down to this Time, without any Law, that I could ever hear of, for to ſupport it, as to all the Perſons who now meet to name them.

For by a Statute of 9 Ed. 2. called the Statute of Sheriffs, printed in Raſt. Tit. Sheriffs 2. " She" riffs are to be aſſigned by the Chancellor, Trea-
" ſurer, Barons of the Exchequer, and by the Ju-
" ſtices.

By 14 Ed. 3. cap. 7. Raſt. 12.

" Sheriffs ſhall be ordained by the Chancellor, Trea-
" ſurer and Chief Baron of the Exchequer, taking to " them the Chief Juſtices of the one Bench and of the " other, if they be preſent: And in the Abſence of
" the Chancellor, by the Treaſurer, the Barons of the " Exchequer and the Juſtices. And that ſhall be done
" yearly on the Morrow of All Souls (that is the " third of November) in the Exchequer.

This is the Statute that fixes the Time and Place now obſerved.

But as to the Perſons, though the Juſtices of both Benches are in the firſt Act, yet none of them, but the Chief Juſtices are in the laſt. And the Lord Privy Seal, Lord Steward, Lord Chamberlain, and the Clerk of the Rolls, and other Lords of the Council, are in neither. And yet by conſtant Uſage, all theſe attend at the naming of Sheriffs; and, as they ſee occaſion, give their Advice and Aſſiſtance, and all take the Oath.

And by like Uſage, which we cannot now account for, there was probably ſome ſuch Practice with reſpect to other Offices.

For it is to make the Statute abſurd, which provides that ſuch and ſuch, and all others that ſhall be called to name Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Eſcheators, &c. ſhall be ſworn to name theſe Officers without Favour or Affection, if neither they nor any others were called to name any of theſe Officers.

3. This is the ſtronger, becauſe conſtant Practice, the beſt Expoſitor, has thus expounded this Statute.

If the Intention of this Statute were, that all the Particulars firſt named, that is, Chancellor, Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal, Steward of the King's Houſe, Chamberlain of the King, &c. were to be ſeparately ſworn, as to the reſpective Officers under each of them ſeverally;

Then this muſt have been made part of their Oath of Office, or adminiſtred at the ſame time with it, though in a diſtinct Oath.

But that has never been done, nor has it ever been adminiſtred to a ſingle Perſon at that or any other Time. Which is the ſtrongeſt Argument poſſible that it is not what was then meant, or ever underſtood to be meant, by that Statute. But on the contrary, in the ſingle Inſtance where ſeveral are called together to name Officers, that is in the caſe of Sheriffs, the ſwearing of them, to obſerve this Statute on that Occaſion, is never omitted to this Day.

Give me leave to obſerve one thing more, that a Chancellor, a Treaſurer may poſſibly be ſeven Years in his Office; I believe Treaſurers have in fact been all or the greateſt part of their Time without ever taking this Oath, which is never taken, unleſs they happen to aſſiſt at the naming of Sheriffs, which there is no Law requiring the other great Officers to attend at, and which is now become little more than a matter of Form, the Liſt ſettled in that Aſſembly being every Year departed from in many Counties.

And if this that I have thus offered be the whole Meaning of the Statute; then at this Day, as the Uſage now is, it has nothing to operate upon but the Nomination of Sheriffs, and therefore extends to no other Caſes, and conſequently not to any of the Officers in the Court of Chancery.

But may it not be ſaid, that though the Oath required by this Statute extend not to the preſent Caſe, yet will not this Proviſion amount to a Declaration of the Senſe of the Law-makers, that the Things thus provided againſt are ſuch as ſhould not be done, and conſequently that the doing of them after ſuch Statute will be againſt Law?

To ſtate this diſtinctly, would take up more Time than is proper upon this Occaſion.

But this I beg leave to ſay, and it will be as well applicable to the Statute of E. 6. as to this, and perhaps more directly.

Acts of Parliament that contain political Proviſions for making Regulations, or for avoiding Things not wicked, but which may be inconvenient, have not always this Conſequence, that Actions done contrary to what they deſigned in the very Caſes then in view will be criminal, and much leſs in Caſes not in view.

Our Law is ſparing, in making the doing a thing a Crime, which may be rectified and redreſſed another way.

There are ſeveral Acts of Parliament to reſtrain Eccleſiaſtical Perſons from making long Leaſes, to prevent the Inconveniencies ſuch Leaſes may bring upon their Succeſſors; thoſe Acts declare ſuch Leaſes void, which therefore are againſt the Intent of thoſe Laws; but it was never thought that the making or accepting ſuch Leaſes was criminal.

The Senſe of the Law-makers is to have no Conſequence, but what neceſſary follows from the Proviſion by them made.

What they intended was, that the Succeſſor, if he pleaſed, might ſet them aſide; which would have this Effect, that none would take ſuch Leaſes, or they would do it on Terms advantagious to the Succeſſor, or with a Reſolution of being ſo good Tenants, as that the Succeſſor would not take Advantage of it: So that either the Leaſe would be vacated, or the Inconvenience would be prevented without, which fully anſwers the End of the Act. And this is very applicable to the Statute of Ed. 6.

In this Act of Ric. 2. the Inconvenience provided againſt is only in Elections or Nominations by Numbers; the Proviſion is by taking an Oath.

If ſuch Oath be taken and broke, that is a Crime; for that is the neceſſary Conſequence of the Proviſion made, Violation of an Oath being undoubtedly criminal. But where no Oath is taken, much more where none is required, I do not ſee how doing the thing can be a Crime; merely becauſe in ſome Caſes it is in this manner provided againſt, and would be criminal if in doing it an Oath had been violated.

One thing intended to be entirely prevented in Caſes within this Statute is Solicitation, or deſiring a Place.

But has it ever been conſtrued, in conſequence of this Proviſion, that if I put a Perſon into an Office, who ever asked that or any other, I ſhould be a Criminal, though I never took this Oath?

Then the Conſequence will be, that the asking a Place, or the modeſt offering a Man's ſelf for it, (which would be ſuing or purſuing for it in the Words of the Act), will lay him under a perpetual Diſability of having that Place, or any other.

Nay, ſince asking a Place is what the Statute has made a Proviſion to prevent; whoever asks a Place, does a thing intended to be prohibited by the Statute, and is therefore criminal.

Was this ever the Conſtruction of this Act?

Nay, every one that aſſiſts in what was thus intended to be prevented will be criminal, and ſo will every one that asks for another at his Requeſt.

My Lords, at this rate the Statute will be very extenſive.

I would beg leave to mention one Caſe more, and hope the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons will not take it amiſs, or look upon it as any Diſreſpect to them.

By the Statute 1 Hen. 5. cap. 1. " It is enacted, " That Knights of Shires be not choſen unleſs they " be reſident within the Shire where they ſhall be " choſen, the Day of the Date of the Writ of " Summons. And that the Citizens and Burgeſſes " of the Cities and Boroughs be choſen Men, Citizens " and Burgeſſes, reſiant, dwelling and free in the " ſame Cities and Boroughs, and no other in any " wiſe.

The Statute 23 H. 6. cap. 15. recites this laſt part of that Statute, and enacts, that it be duly kept in all Points.

And this is the Statute upon which Actions uſed to be brought, in our time, for falſe Returns of Members to Parliament.

This is in direct Words a Prohibition of any Perſons being choſen that is not reſiant: But ſince the natural Effect of this Proviſion would be, that (the ſubject Matter thereof being the Caſe of a legal Authority conferred by the Choice) Perſons choſen, not being ſo qualified, might in conſequence of this Law be rejected.

If this political Proviſion be not complied with, is there another Conſequence to follow, inſtead of redreſſing it this way, and the Parties concerned to be therefore made criminal?

Is it criminal in thoſe who chuſe for their Repreſentatives in Parliament, Perſons not only not reſiant, but whom they never ſaw?

Is it criminal in thoſe unqualified Perſons, to preſume to take their Places in the Houſe?

Is it criminal in the other Members, knowing ſuch to be amongſt them, not to turn them out ex officio, even though no Complaint be made from without Doors?

I think not.

Yet I apprehend that will be the Conſequence, if Laws of that Nature are thus to be explained, and every Action is to be judged criminal, which any Act of Parliament has made any ſort of Proviſion to prevent.

As to the Statute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 16.

Although it has made Proviſion againſt the Sale or Diſpoſal of Offices for Money, yet nothing can be inferred from thence in Support of this Proſecution.

But that your Lordſhips may take a better View of that Law, permit me to lay before you a few Obſervations.

The Preamble ſets forth the End for which this Reſtraint was laid.

" For the avoiding of Corruption which may here- " after happen to be in the Officers and Miniſters in " thoſe Courts, and Places, and Rooms, wherein " there is requiſite to be had the true Adminiſtra- " tion of Juſtice, or Services of Truſt:

" And to the Intent that Perſons worthy and meet " to be advanced to the Place where Juſtice is to " be adminiſtred, or any Service of Truſt execut- " ed, ſhould hereafter be preferred to the ſame, " and no other.

Here is Mention made of Corruption, but it is that which may happen in the Officers appointed, it calls not the taking Money upon the appointing them Corruption.

It in effect ſays, what I have before ſaid.

That giving and taking Money is a Temptation to thoſe who diſpoſe Offices, to put in ſometimes unfit Perſons, to thoſe who buy to extort and be corrupt: And conſequently that if this Practice continue, there will be Inſtances, in which this Temptation will ſo far be yielded to, that Perſons not worthy will ſometimes be preferred, and thoſe Perſons will ſome of them venture upon being guilty of Corruption.

But to avoid all the Corruption which may happen in thoſe Inſtances, and to the intent that this Temptation may in no caſe prevent, but that worthy Perſons be advanced, and no other in any Inſtance, the Statute is made.

The main End whereof is anſwered, if worthy Perſons be advanced, and they be not corrupt, but behave themſelves well.

What then is the particular Proviſion made by this Statute? Not making way for an arbitrary Puniſhment, by declaring it to be Corruption, or criminal, or againſt the Proviſion of any former Law, to give or take Money for an Office.

Not declaring that it ſhall be criminal for the future.

Not even enacting, that no Perſon ſhall take or give Money for an Office: which might make the Contravention of this Law, a Crime for the future.

For it is remarkable, that this Statute has not ſo much as any prohibitory Words in it.

But the whole Proviſion is barely putting the Caſe by way of Suppoſition, " if a Perſon do take Money," &c.

and declaring the Conſequence, which Conſequence is, that the Perſon taking the Money, if it were for an Office, ſhall loſe the Nomination to that Office; if for a Deputation, he ſhall loſe his Intereſt in the Office: And the Perſon paying ſhall be adjudged a diſabled Perſon to have, occupy, or enjoy the Office or Deputation. That is, as appears afterwards, he is diſabled, ſo far as concerns himſelf, his right to have it, and to continue the taking of the Profits: But not ſo far as the Publick has benefit by him: For by a Proviſo for that Purpoſe, all Acts done by him are valid.

The Effect of which is, that the Officer who comes in for Money holds that Office precariouſly, which would otherwiſe have been for Life, and is wholly at Mercy, if he gives the leaſt Occaſion of Complaint againſt him; and ſince he that put him in has loſt the Nomination, there accrues to the King a Right to fill the Place with a better Man in caſe he thinks fit.

And therefore I will not controvert, but that the Right or Power of Nomination to an Office may, by a Proſecution grounded upon this Statute, be taken from the Perſon who enjoyed it, and veſted in the Crown.

But as there is no ſuch Power of Nomination to theſe Offices now in me; but I have loſt it with the Office of Chancellor, and therein have ſuffered a much greater Loſs than that of theſe Nominations only; No Judgment can be given againſt me upon this Act, and therefore neither can there be founded upon it any Proſecution againſt me; for that is but a Method of praying and obtaining a proper Judgment.

And to adjudge, that upon the Caſe which has happen'd, (ſuppoſing it to be within the Words and Meaning of this Statute) any Puniſhment ſhall be inflicted, or any Conſequence follow, beyond the Loſs of the Nomination, is (with great Submiſſion) to go quite out of this Statute.

Thus I have endeavoured to make out what I firſt propoſed, that the receiving a Preſent upon theſe Occaſions is not criminal in it ſelf, or by the Common Law, and that there is not any Act of Parliament whatſoever by which the ſame is made Criminal, or ſubject to any Puniſhment or Judgment which can be pray'd in this Proſecution.

My Lords,

All this Reaſoning is greatly fortifyed by Uſage, by my Predeceſſors; which Uſage is expreſsly proved before your Lordſhips by all the Maſters, who could not refuſe giving Teſtimony; that is, all the preſent Maſters admitted by my Predeceſſors, who are indemnified by the Act of this Seſſion for that Purpoſe: And, I think, is proved too by the former Maſters now living, who declined giving an Anſwer to the Queſtion, when asked, what they gave or knew given; making this their Excuſe, that by our Law no Man is bound to accuſe himſelf, and that to own they had given Money would expoſe them to the Penalties of this Act. For whatever might be the Conſequence of owning they gave Money; there was no Danger in ſaying they gave none. And they might have given an Anſwer in the Negative ſafely, but that the Truth and their Oath would not allow them to do it.

And this Refuſal of theirs to anſwer, was not a Contrivance of mine, they were ſupported in their Objection by the Gentlemen that are Managers, who were pleaſed to give their Aſſiſtance to defend them from anſwering the Queſtion.

And might I have been allowed to have given Evidence of what has been from time to time declared, by Parties concerned, who are now dead, it would have been proved much farther.

But I apprehend the Thing is notorious; altho' ſome Proofs have been offered for Form-ſake, yet it was equally well known before, known to all the World.

Give me leave likewiſe to argue farther upon this whole Matter from what I ſaid once already, that it is admitted that there is not one Inſtance, that ſuch taking Money has been puniſhed either at Common Law or upon Act of Parliament; that this, according to the Rules of our Law, is one of the ſtrongeſt Arguments that it is not puniſhable. For it is not to be preſumed, but that it has been often done; the Statute of Edw. VI. takes notice of the Practice, not only of doing it, but of entering into formal Contracts and Bonds for that Purpoſe.

Littleton, our moſt celebrated Lawyer, upon a Queſtion, whether an Action would lye upon a certain Act of Parliament, reſts upon it as a deciſive Argument in favour of the Negative, that it was never ſeen or heard that any Action was brought upon that Statute; alledging, that if any Action might have been brought for this Matter, it muſt be taken, that at ſome time or other it would have been put in practice. And the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke, in his Commentary upon Littleton, obſerves, that as Uſage is a good Interpreter of Laws, ſo Non-Uſage, where there is no Example, is a great Intendment (as he calls it) that the Law will not bear it. Not that an Act of Parliament (as he goes on) can by non-uſer loſe its Force; but that it may thereby be expounded, or declared how the Act is to be underſtood.

This is what I have to ſubmit to your Lordſhips, that the taking Money for Offices is not criminal, which, I apprehend, is the whole Charge in the Articles, except the Manner of taking it varies the Conſideration, which I ſhall take Notice of afterwards.

There is not the leaſt Pretence, that Money was given for putting in Perſons unqualified, the ſuppoſed Crime is ſingly the taking Money.

And as to what has been ſaid by way of comparing it to the Caſe where any judicial Order or Determination is made for a Bribe; give me leave, with great Submiſſion, to inſiſt upon it, that there is not the leaſt Parity at all betwixt that and the preſent Caſe: For in Matters of Judgment, if the Party have a Right to what he ſues for, he ought not to be put to buy his own; and much leſs, if he has not a Right, ſhould he be at Liberty to purchaſe of the Judge, that which is the Right of another.

But this here is not matter of Juſtice, but matter of Favour and pure Bounty; whether I put in this Man or that Man into a Place in my Diſpoſal, depended wholly upon my own Choice and Pleaſure; ſo that the Caſes are not at all alike.

A Bribe ſtrikes at the Root of the equal Adminiſtration of Juſtice; it is a profeſſed Byaſs, and can mean nothing but to deſtroy Indifferency, and to render the Judgment partial.

It is therefore diſallowed in all Nations, and in all Ages; and is expreſsly forbid by the Law of God. And had the Gentleman who touched upon the Text which condemns Gifts, been pleaſed to cite it at large, it would have appeared to relate to Bribes given in Cases of Judgment, Deut. xv. 18. 19. " Judges and Officers shalt thou make thee in all thy " gates ——— And they shall judge the People with " just Judgment. Thou shalt not wrest Judgment, " thou shalt not respect Persons, neither take a Gift. " For a Gift doth blind the Eyes of the wise.

As to the manner of taking Money in the several Articles V, VI, VII, VIII, the Case stands thus.

V. There are in all, eight Articles relating to this Matter; but they have proceeded only upon four: The first of which is the fifth Article, and relates to the Money taken on Mr. Kinaston's Admittance.

Upon their own Evidence it appears, that Mr. Kinaston was well recommended by Mr. Bayly, a Person of a very good Character; that the first and only Message brought to me, with relation to his Admittance and the Money to be paid, was this; that he desired to be admitted on the Surrender of Mr. Rogers, and would make a Complement of 1500 Guineas, or, if I did not think that enough, I should please my self; and my Answer was, I was pleased with the 1500 Guineas, and he was admitted.

It has been endeavoured to make what was then done odious; by representing, that Mr. Kinaston first offered 1000 l. but Mr. Cottingham would not propose it; that he was work'd up by Mr. Cottingham's telling him that he had bought a good Office; that Mr. Rogers had told him he usually made 1700 l. and sometimes 2000 l. per Annum of it, and that he understood the Profits arose out of the ordinary Profits of the Office, and the Use of the Suitors Money together.

As to the Offer of 1000 l. Mr. Cottingham, a Witness produced by themselves, denies it. And Mr. Bayly, their other Witness, who first broke the Affair to Mr. Cottingham, and at his Return from him, told Mr. Kinaston that Mr. Cottingham said 1500 Guineas would be expected, swears, that Mr. Kinaston immediately submitted to what Mr. Cottingham had so mentioned, only he said he thought it had been but 1500 l. And this was before Mr. Kinaston saw Mr. Cottingham.

So that Mr. Kinaston's Oath is directly contradicted by the Oath of Mr. Cottingham, one of their own Witnesses; and is highly improbable from what Mr. Bayly another of their own Witnesses swears.

And as to what Mr. Cottingham said about the goodness of the Office, he swears it was after the 1500 Guineas were agreed to be paid. And indeed upon that depended not so much what he was to present to me, as what he was to pay to Mr. Rogers, which had been agreed upon before Mr. Cottingham was spoken to.

So that here is nothing but my accepting a Sum of 1500 Guineas, which was proposed to me as a voluntary Offer, when I was at the same time told I might have more, if I would insist upon it; without one aggravating Circumstance, with relatnto the Person admitted, or what I did.

VI. The next of these Articles is the sixth, which concerns Mr. Thomas Bennet, and the Money given me by him, on account of his being admitted Master upon Mr. Hiccocks's Surrender.

And the whole of the Fact, so far as I was concerned in it or knew of it, was but this. That Mr. Cottingham informed me of a voluntary Offer made by Mr. Bennet of 1500 Guineas, which I accepted. I believe he thought himself not ill used, and I being then extremely ill, he pressed to be admitted, for fear (as Mr. Cottingham swears he thought) of falling into worse Hands. On Thursday, and in the Nights before and after, I remember I lost near 50 Ounces of Blood, in about 24 Hours. And that Night Dr. Mead told Mr. Cottingham, that if the Distemper had not a Turn very soon, I could not live 24 Hours. On Friday Mr. Cottingham says, the Doctor told him the Distemper had a Turn: On Saturday Morning Mr. Bennet, after great importunity, was admitted while I was in Bed, but Company kept out of the Room as much as could be.

This is what they have proved by Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Bennet, who mentions nothing at all of me of his own Knowledge, but of the Kindness with which I spoke to him, and told him that he was admitted by a dying Chancellor, is their other Witness, who is to shew invidious Circumstances. And very solicitous he seems to be to do it.

He takes care to say, that he was ordered to come alone, and bring no body with him; as if it were the better to keep secret the Payment of the Money, tho' he knew my great Weakness was the Reason.

He affects to say, the Bank-Notes were taken out in feigned Names, and that it was not thought proper to use my Name or his. Tho' upon another Article, when he is examined again, it comes out, that the feigned Name was that of his Clerk, whom he sent to take out the Notes, and it was merely Bennet's own doing.

He says, he offered 1000 l. to Cottingham at first, and tells a long Dialogue they had about it, but Cottingham himself upon his Oath denies it all.

So that here, at last, nothing is proved that passed with me, but the 1500 Guineas being offered to me and accepted.

And give me leave to observe, that the two Sums in these two Articles, were certainly not paid out of the Suitors Money. For whatever other Objection may be made against taking the Present before Admission, it has this Effect, to shew that it came not out of the Money of the Suitors.

And yet there being a Pretence (without stating the Circumstance of Time, which I have just taken notice of) that they were paid out of that Money, and that the Suitors were in danger of being Sufferers; I brought the Money into Chancery, to be subject to the Orders of the Court.

The two other Articles, the seventh and eighth, were upon Admissions to Places vacant by Death.

VII. The seventh Article concerns the Case of Mr. Elde; and the Fact, as they have themselves proved, is thus:

Upon the Death of Mr. Fellows, the former Master, 5000 Guineas is offered and given to me by Mr. Elde; 6000 l. is offered by another.

It is admitted, that Thomas Bennet about three Quarters of a Year before, upon coming into his Place gave his Predecessor, who surrendred to him seven thousand five hundred Pounds, and to the the Great Seal 1576*l.* in all 9075 l; and that Mr. Kinaſton, two years before him, gave his Predeceſſor 6000 l. and to the Great Seal 1575 l. in all 7575 l.

And Mr. Elde, a Man of unblemiſhed Character, of a good Eſtate, and not one Objection to his Fitneſs, is admitted, though he pays ſo very much ſhort of what others had paid, and leſs than was at the ſame time offered.

And of this that he paid, 3400 l. was returned to him, and only 1850 l. retained.

I will not trouble your Lordſhips in relation to what my private Intentions were in that Tranſaction, if they were capable of being proved, I believe your Lordſhips would not diſlike them.

Some little Reflection has been made upon the Mony being brought in a Basket, as if it were for Privacy, and even to conceal it from Mr. Cottingham.

Whereas it plainly appears, to have been without any Deſign, and only Mr. Elde's making uſe of a Convenience he accidentally had in his Chambers.

But if there had been an Intention to conceal it from Mr. Cottingham, why was he the Hand to convey any thing? why was he the Perſon to bring up the Basket? Mr. Cottingham knew 6000 l. had been offered by another, and might rather gueſs this to be more than leſs.

And had Mr. Elde not been himſelf examined (which at that time it was not expected he would be) and Mr. Cottingham proved, that Mr. Elde had told him he would give 5000*l.* for the Place; that another offered 6000 l; that he had told me of it; that Mr. Elde after delivered him a Basket, which by its weight he believed to have Mony in it; that he brought it to me; and that Mr. Elde was that day, or very ſoon after, admitted: According to the Candour of conſtruing my Actions, this would have been ſaid to be a convincing Proof, that there was 6000 l. in the Basket, or more: it being impoſſible for the avaricious temper of the Earl of Macclesfield, for his Impotency of Mind, his conſtitutional Weakneſs in matter of Mony not to take the greater Sum.

VIII. The 8th Article concerns the Caſe of Mr. Thurſton.

There, upon Mr. Borrett's death 6000 l, was offered me by another worthy Gentleman, but Mr. Thurſton was admitted.

He ſays he gave upon that Occaſion 5000 Guineas, but that all above 2000 l. was returned.

My Lords, Since what paſſed relating to that matter is not capable of proof, I will not trouble you with the particulars of it, which might be material.

Mr. Thurſton is likewiſe a Perſon unexceptionable, Mr. Baron Gilbert, now one of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal, gave me an extraordinary Character of him, and that determined me in his favour.

But there is no Objection to him neither, and therefore there needs no proof.

This is the State of the Fact upon theſe two Articles.

This is ſo far from Extortion; the Mony is voluntarily offered.

So far from Avarice; the greater Sum is refuſed, and a leſs taken. And even the greateſt part of that returned, 3400 l. in the one caſe, and 3250 l. in the other.

And the Perſons ſuch, that were I to go through Weſtminſter-hall, I cannot eaſily pick out two better Men.

Upon the whole, all that can be pretended to be in my hands now, upon theſe four Articles concerning Mr. Kinaſton, Mr. Tho. Bennet, Mr. Elde, and Mr. Thurſton, which are all the Managers have proceeded upon relating to Mony received from the Maſters, is but 3850 l; that is 1850 l. from Mr. Elde, and 2000 l. from Mr. Thurſton; the reſt having been all returned.

And as to that which was given back to Mr. Thurſton; he has ſworn, that he was ſent for ſeveral times, in order to have part of his Mony returned, and received it before the firſt Seal after Michaelmas, near a Month before any Order by the Lords of the Council to call for the Accounts, and while every thing was in the ſame State as when he paid it, and from his Evidence, it cannot be judged to be any thing but the effect of Generoſity.

Mr. Elde's was not returned till after the Accounts were begun to be taken, he continuing a long time in the Country; but when he came to Town, he had it.

IX. The 9th Article relates to 100 Guineas given me by Mr. Tho. Bennet, upon his diſpoſing of his Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies or Lunaticks to Mr. Hamerſley.

The Evidence is quite contrary to the Charge, as it is laid in the Articles, and amounts but to this, That Bennet having agreed to diſpoſe of his Office to another, ſent me a Preſent voluntarily of 100 Guineas upon that occaſion, and tho' I, at that time, knew that more had been given in the like caſe, I was contented with that, and accepted it.

This is within the ſame reaſon, as the Caſe of the Maſters; it has been practiſed by my Predeceſſors, as a Right of their Office, upon Diſpoſitions of this Office, and others of the like nature.

Beſides the proof of what had been paid to the Great Seal, upon another diſpoſition of this Office; it has been proved, that another of my Predeceſſors, the late Lord Cowper, declared his Opinion, that he thought it his right to have a Preſent: And he having then paſſed a Grant of this very Office, without having had a Preſent, upon the Party's having pretended and aſſured him that it had not been uſual to give any for that Office; he expreſſed great diſſatisfaction, and declared that he thought he had been impoſed on, that he ſaw no reaſon why that Office ſhould not pay as well as others of the like nature. Which implies both the Fact of receiving Gratuities, or Preſents upon Tranſfers of ſuch Offices, and his claiming a Right to receive them.

As to the diſcourſe Mr. Bennet pretends to have had with Mr. Cottingham, Mr. Cottingham denies it; and as they both are produced by the Managers to this point, this is a claſhing between their own Witneſſes; and that cannot be ſaid to be proved by them, which is affirmed by one of their Witneſſes, and poſitively denied by the other.

And if there had been any ſuch Diſcourſe, it is not brought home to affect me; for there is no pretence that I knew any thing of it.

But as to the whole Fact, wherein they differ, I think from the Character that has been given of Mr. Cottingham, and what has appeared of Mr. Bennet, it will be no queſtion at all, which of them two ſhould be believed.

X. As to the 10th Article, there is no Evidence given.

XI. The next Article is the 11th. And the Substance of it is, That in order to advance and increase the illegal and corrupt Gain arising to myself from the Sale and Disposal of the Offices of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, in violation of the Trust reposed in me for the Care and Protection of the Suitors, I did admit several Persons to the said Offices of Masters, who at the time of their Admissions were of small Substance and Ability, very unfit to be trusted with the great Sums of Mony and other Effects of the Suitors lodged in their Hands.

The Masters are not by this Article charged with the want of any other Qualification whatsoever, but that of Estate; nor is there the least Proof, or Pretence, that they were not in all other respects, Men of Abilities equal to the Duty to be discharged by them, honest, and unexceptionable in point of Reputation; but the single Objection to them is, that they were Persons of a small Substance.

The Proof offer'd upon this Article is this:

They have produced 3 Orders made in the Court of Chancery in the Months of January and February last, whereby it appear'd that Mr. Conway, Mr. Kinaston, and Mr. Tho. Bennet had not at that time brought in all the Mony that appeared to be then in their Hands belonging to the Suitors of the Court. This is their whole Proof.

But I am intirely at a loss to know, how this can be stretched to prove, what Ability they were of at the times of their respective Admissions, or indeed that they are not of ability now to pay their whole Ballances, merely because on such a particular Day they had not paid their respective Ballances into Court.

Nor is there the least Proof that I had any reason to suspect their Ability, when I admitted them.

Mr. Conway had an Estate of between 5 and 6 hundred Pounds per Annum.

Mr. Kinaston was represented to me as a Man of Substance: Now, that he comes under another Article, to swear it down, he owns that he has an Estate of 4 or 5 hundred Pounds a Year, with Timber upon it worth 2500 l; and had likewise, at that time, in Mony in the Funds, to the value of two or three thousand Pounds.

Tho. Bennet was esteemed a Man of a very good Estate and Substance. He is the Person to swear himself now worth nothing. And, to do it effectually, he sticks not at owning, that he has mortgaged part of his Estate for more than it is worth. Yet there is upon your Lordship's Table, the Particular given in by him to the Court of Chancery, wherein his Estate, besides that which he says he purchased since he was Master, appears to be about 500 l. per ann. and he owns he had, when he was admitted, a Place for Life of 250 l. per ann. which he after disposed of. He says he was worth 20000 l. and had been sufficient still, but for the Losses in 1720, which he owns were not known to me, nor generally suspected.

But, my Lords, these two Gentlemen are making their Circumstances mean, in order to get back the Mony they paid for their Offices; which they could not do by their own Oaths, directly for their own Uses: and therefore they have thought fit to keep back so much of the Mony of the Suitors, when called upon to bring it in, that so the Suitors may complain to the Court of Chancery, and then their Oaths may be made use for the Suitors to found a Demand upon, against their Predecessors.

And it is pretty remarkable, that their Deficiencies are neither more nor less than the Sums they at first paid to their Predecessors and to me, upon their being admitted to their respective Offices. In this therefore I apprehend your Lordships will think their Oaths are of very little value. It is hardly to be imagined, that they should have been so long in their Offices, and have just saved nothing, nor wasted; and that they are not a single Farthing either richer or poorer.

But whatever your Lordships Opinion, with respect to that, may be; I own, I cannot but think, that there is something very extraordinary in the Attempt; that these two Men have agreed with two Masters, that were in possession of two good Offices for Life, to give one of them 6000 l. the other 7500 l. for their Places; and now, that they are got into possession, would have the Mony back, and continue in the Places too: That is, in short, they are tricking those Masters out of their Places, under pretence of buying them.

But whatever their Behaviour or their Estates may now be, they appeared to me Persons of Reputation, and Fortune, when they were admitted. And I do not observe, that the Article hath so much as suggested, that I knew any thing to the contrary.

One of the Managers wondered that I should let in Persons of no Fortune; and he solves it only by this, that they would give better Prices.

That had been something, if the Price had been given to me; but leaves it incredible, that I should let in any, that I had the least Suspicion had no Fortune; for the old Masters to receive 6000 l. and 7500 l. at the same time that they represent me acting upon the view of burying the Masters, and having the whole Price myself.

Where I was to have the whole Price, and the Temptation was greater, there is no pretence I took in Men of no Fortune. And is it possible to think I would do it, where the Masters were to have the Price, and I so small a Proportion?

Great Stress has been laid on comparing the Sums in the Masters hands, with their Estates; in order to shew their Unfitness to be trusted with those Sums.

How that Proportion is to be adjusted, I own, I am a little at a loss. Here is a Master, that has an Office that brings in a considerable Profit, and is worth 5000 l. which cannot be run away with: He has a handsome visible Estate of 4 or 5 hundred Pounds a Year; and a good Reputation. How much Mony may he be properly trusted with? I do not mean as a Borrower, who may be presumed in some want, of one sort, or other, because he borrows; but as a Casheer for the Suitors? There are very few Bankers that have such a Fortune to set up with. And I do not see that any of those Bankers, that is a Man of good Reputation, and good Credit (tho' perhaps he has not a good Fortune of his own) is thought the worse of by those who deal with him, because he is trusted with very great Sums, far more than he is worth. The more he is intrusted with, the more are his Gains, and the safer all think themselves that have Mony in his hands.

There is in the Close of this Article another Charge, that I did publickly in open Court falsely represent the Masters admitted by me, as Persons of great Fortunes, and in every respect qualify'd for the Trust reposed in them, to the manifest Deceit and Injury of the Suitors.

My

My Lords, as to that, I think nothing can more plainly ſhew, than this Article, and what has been ſaid upon it, the forced Conſtructions put upon what I do.

Mr. Waller proves, that in July 1723, I declar'd in Court, that the Maſters were Perſons of as good Fortunes and Abilities as any Set of Maſters had ever been before them. Which is ſpoke of the whole Body of Maſters, and not of thoſe only who were admitted by me. He ſays he was aſtoniſh'd at it. But he has given no Reaſon why. If he knew any thing, that any of them were not ſuch as I deſcribed them; a little Candour would have made him believe, that I was not rightly apprized of their Characters; and a little Concern for the Honour of the Court, wherein he was a Practiſer, would have made him ſet me right.

But, my Lords, is there any Reaſon aſſigned, why I ſhould think otherwiſe than I ſpoke?

Mr. Lightboun is examin'd, to prove, that he told me, ſome of them were ſuſpicious. But he does not ſay any ſuch thing. All he ſays is, that he took notice to me of Mr. Dormer's Misfortune, and told me, he knew not how ſoon the like Misfortune might happen to others. Which might be, though they were all ſufficient; if the Perſon, with whom they ſhould depoſit Effects, upon going into the Country, ſhould fail.

But his Expreſſion is a little remarkable; that he cannot ſay he told me any of the Maſters particularly were ſuſpicious, "For he did not know how "far he might be liable to an Action." An Action! what! for one Maſter informing the Chancellor, of the Circumſtances of other Maſters, in order to have proper Care taken! could he fear it? Who was to be the Witneſs? What muſt be the ground of the Action, if he told nothing but what was true?

But I think, he ſaid he had not any particular Grounds for his Suſpicion; and he ſays, I was unwilling to believe it of any of them. Why? becauſe (as he ſays I told him) I had had very good Characters of them, and therefore I hoped they were all good Men.

It was not very kind, in that Gentleman, to call it an Unwillingneſs to believe, there was Ground to ſuſpect them: When I aſſigned ſome Reaſons, why I ſhould not ſuſpect them; and he gave me none, why I ſhould.

So that here appears not any Reaſon, why I ſhould believe otherwiſe than what Mr. Waller heard me ſay.

But to what end ſhould I ſay it, if I did not believe it? Or how were the Suitors injured, or deceived by my ſaying ſo? Mr. Waller was not deceived; was any body elſe deceived? Or could any one be injured? But they have diſcover'd a reaſon, why I ſaid it. They ſay that Mr. Fellowes was juſt dead, and there was a Maſter's Place then vacant: And that fact they have proved. But can any thing be more ſtrained, than their Inference from it? Did I deſign, by ſaying theſe Maſters were Men of Fortunes and Ability, to raiſe the Price of that Vacancy? or to tempt Beggars to come in, that cared not what Price they gave? Does not what was then done, clear me of all Suſpicion of that kind? Mr. Elde was the Perſon then admitted, a Gentleman of a very good Eſtate, of very good Character in Weſtminſter-Hall, and 750*l.* more offer'd by another, that was no Beggar neither, refuſed. And after that, Mr. Thurſton was admitted, preferably to one that offer'd 6000*l.* Is it poſſible, that I ſhould give better Proof that I had not that avaricious View in it, that is ſuggeſted?

It was obſerv'd by one of the Gentlemen, that open'd the Evidence, that this was upon a remarkable occaſion, when the Maſter of the Rolls had made an Order upon one of the Maſters, to make a Suitor ſome Compenſation out of his own Mony in the Maſter's hands, and I ſet it aſide. And Mr. Waller began to tell ſomething of the Merits of the Caſe. But a very learned and a very judicious Gentleman, one of the Managers, was pleaſed to ſay, They did not diſpute the Juſtice of my Order; nor is there any Charge of ſuch Injuſtice in the Articles.

XII. The next Article is the 12th, which ſets forth

"That whilſt the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macleſfield executed the Office of Lord Chancellor, an unjuſt and fraudulent Method was practiſed in the Court of Chancery upon the Sale of Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court, and upon the Admiſſion of new Maſters, that the Prices or Sums of Mony agreed to be paid for the Purchaſe of the ſaid Offices, and for the Admiſſion thereinto, were ſatisfy'd and paid out of the Monies and Effects of the Suitors of the Court depoſited in the Hands of the reſpective Maſters, ſurrendring their Offices, or dying; either by way of reteiner of the Purchaſe in the hands of the Maſter reſigning, or of replacing the Mony diſburs'd for ſuch Purchaſe or Admiſſion by the ſucceeding Maſter, out of the Mony and Effects of the Suitors coming into his hands; by which Practice the Price and Value given upon the Sale of the ſaid Offices, and Admiſſions thereinto, during the Time aforeſaid, were greatly advanced, and ſeveral Perſons of ſmall Ability and Subſtance were encouraged to contract for the ſaid Offices, upon a Proſpect of the eaſy Method of paying for the Purchaſe of the ſame, by means whereof great Deficiencies have incurred in the Offices of ſeveral Maſters of the ſaid Court, admitted by the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, which they have not been able to anſwer and make good; and although the ſaid Practice was notorious and publick, and the ſaid Earl was well inform'd thereof, and fully acquainted therewith, yet the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macleſfield, in order to increaſe his own unjuſt and corrupt Profit in the ſelling the ſaid Offices and the Admiſſions thereto (which in conſequence of this evil Practice was rais'd and receiv'd by him out of the Effects of the Suitors, for whom he was intruſted) did not at any time, whilſt he continu'd in his Office of Lord Chancellor, uſe or take any Meaſures to reform the ſaid Abuſe, or to prevent the ſame; either by cauſing proper Schedules to be taken of the Money and Effects of the Suitors deliver'd over and transferr'd, or by appointing any Perſon in his behalf, to inſpect or ſuperviſe the Transfers or Deliveries thereof, or in any other manner. But on the contrary, the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, unjuſtly, corruptly, and contrary to the Duty of his ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor (to whom the Superintendency of the ſaid Maſters and of their Accounts did appertain) did ſuffer the ſaid fraudulent Practice to proceed and be exercifed without any Controul or Check, whereby great Embezlements have been made of the Suitors Money and Effects, to their great Loſs, in the Offices of ſeveral of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, who have not been able to anſwer and pay their reſpective

" ſpective Ballances owing upon their Accounts, in " breach of the Truſt repoſed in him for the pre- " ſervation of the Eſtates and Effects of the Sui- " tors, to the diſhonour and diſcredit of the ſaid " Court, and to the great injury and defrauding of " the ſaid Suitors in a Court of Equity, eſtabliſhed " for their Relief and Protection."

My Lords, In ſupport of this Article, two of the Maſters, Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Tho. Bennet, have ſworn, that their Predeceſſors ſtopt the price of the Places out of the Suitors Mony, which was to be delivered over to them: and that they gave the greater Price for their Places, becauſe they found this an eaſier way of purchaſing them. Indeed I muſt confeſs, that according to the manner of proceeding of theſe two Gentlemen, it will come out to be an exceeding eaſy way, which they have diſcovered: ſince, if they can prevail in their preſent Attempt, they will have paid no price at all for them; they are to have their Mony back again, and not be in the leaſt impoveriſhed by the Tranſaction. But is there any proof, that I was (as the Article charges) well informed of it? Or that I knew any thing of it at all? Not in the leaſt, but only upon the Oath of Mr. Tho. Bennet, who ſwears that in a Converſation with me about a Treaty between him and Mr. Hiccocks, I took notice of an Article in his Account, delivered in to the Lords of the Council, wherein he mentioned 9075 l. of his Caſh to be in the hands of Perſons of Ability, meaning as he after explained it, in the hands of Mr. Hiccocks his Predeceſſor and my ſelf; and ſaid, I was ſorry for it, becauſe it was diſcovering the method of paying for their Places out of the Court Mony, which I had taken care conſtantly to deny.

This (ſuppoſing my meaning to be what he would have) is ſurprizing. He ſays that at the beginning of this diſcourſe I was ſo cautious, that I would not ſpeak to him about returning the Mony I had had, becauſe probably he might be examined about that Converſation in another place. And yet he pretends that in the ſame Converſation I told him this. But does even he pretend, that I ever knew this, which I had taken care to deny? And was this a time to tell him of it, when he ſays, I expected he might probably be examined about his Converſation with me?

But I believe your Lordſhips will not give him the leaſt credit, in this or any thing elſe that affects me. I beg leave to remind your Lordſhips that I asked him whether he did not then tell me, that, if Mr. Hiccocks would give him 2000 l. he would pay the reſt of the Mony (which was to ſhew that he was worth at the leaſt all but that 2000 l.) He denyed it. My Lords, I then told your Lordſhips I could not diſprove him in that, for I cannot be a Witneſs for my ſelf. Therefore I asked him to another thing, wherein, if he did not tell the Truth, I might be able to falſify him; I asked him, if he had not ſaid ſo to ſome body elſe? He poſitively ſaid, No. He ſaid there was ſuch a report, but he denyed the thing. At laſt he did own that he had ſaid, that if Mr. Hiccocks would repay 2000 l. he would ſtand it, or run the hazard, but never told any body he would pay the reſt; he was not able. But Mr. Holford ſwears, that Tho. Bennet ſent a Meſſage by him to Mr. Hiccocks, that if Mr. Hiccocks would repay 2000 l. he would diſcharge the Article in the Account, and take care to pay the reſt, and he believed that Mr. Bennet was able to pay it, or he would not have carried the Meſſage. And another Gentleman ſwears, that he ſaid he would make it up, and a third that he could or would pay it. So that he ſtands contradicted in this particular, which I apprehend is material, by three Witneſſes.

As to the Method of Payment mentioned in the Article, it is ſtated to be, that the Price of the Office was ſatisfy'd out of the Effects of the Suitors, either by way of Reteiner of the Purchaſe Mony in the hands of the Maſter ſurrendring, or of replacing the Mony diſburſed for ſuch Purchaſe by the ſucceeding Maſter, out of the Mony and Effects of the Suitors coming to his hands: and the Methods ſuggeſted for preventing this, are, cauſing proper Schedules to be taken of the Mony and Effects deliver'd over, or appointing Perſons to inſpect or ſupervife the Deliveries; but I took not theſe Meaſures, nor any others.

My Lords, the Method of paying by Reteiner could only be upon Surrenders. And why ſhould I there aſſiſt to raiſe the Price? why aſſiſt to get a higher Price for one, whom I was to have no more to do with, only to have a poorer Man come in, that might bring Diſgrace upon the Court and upon me?

As for the other Method, the replacing the Mony paid, that is, as I underſtand it, borrowing the Mony to make payment, and then when the Effects are transferred, diſcharging the Debt out of them: How was that to be hindered? not by Schedules, and ſeeing the Effects deliver'd over. The Delivery of the Effects is neceſſary to put that Method in practice, and is far from hindring it.

But is this delivery over of the Effects ſo very material? Mr. Meller did not deliver over the Effects to Mr. Borret of ſome time: had they been ſtill in his hands, had it been the worſe for the Suitors? Whatever a Maſter does not deliver over, he continues reſponſible for, and the Suitors have the ſame Security for them, as they had before. Hiccocks and Rogers did not deliver over the Effects, but ſtopt Part for Payment; the conſequence is, that they are compelled to bring them in. Had Schedules been made, and the Effects deliver'd over, and ſo Kinaſton and Bennet been forced to purſue the other Method, the Suitors had not had either Hiccocks or Rogers at Stake.

Indeed I never apprehended it neceſſary for me to ſee the Orders for Transfers obeyed, any more than any other Orders of the Court. It is the Intereſt of the new Maſter to call for the Effects, and of the old one to have a regular Diſcharge, which I do not ſee how he can have, without an Inventory of the Particulars, and a Receit upon it; which is what I underſtand to be a Schedule, tho' it be never filed; tho' I apprehend the word Schedule is taken in a different Senſe in the Report to the Council. And this I did believe the Intereſt of the Parties had made them do. Nor has it yet been ſhewn, that it was my Duty to look after theſe Transfers. By what Law, by what eſtabliſhed Practice, where does it appear, that a Chancellor is bound to ſee ſuch Schedules made, and the Effects transferred? If it be his Duty, without doubt there is ſome Method, by which it may appear he has diſcharged it, in caſes where he has done ſo. But is there ever any Entry made of it? Are the Schedules filed with any Atteſtations, that the Effects were actually delivered over in preſence of Perſons appointed by the Lord Chancellor? The Effects in Mr. Holford's Caſe were deliver'd over, I think, the day of his admittance, in Mr. Lovibond's in about a Week, in Mr. Bennet's in a ſhort time; whether in preſence of Inſpectors, ap-appointed for that purpose, or not, has not appeared. Yet, my Lords, the Question is not now, Whether it be wiser and better to have Schedules prepared and filed, and for a Lord Chancellor to give Orders to see it done: But whether it be his Duty so that it is a Crime not to see it done? If the Suitors desire to have Schedules filed, in order to be the better able to know how much the new Master is charged with: it is their part to search and make Application; and upon such Application, it is the Chancellor's part to make proper Orders; which they again are to take care to draw up, to enter, to prosecute, and see executed. And as to my Desire, and Intention, to increase my own unjust Gain; which is to give the Tincture of Guilt to this, and make it criminal: can it be conceived, that I, who take not advantage of a higher Price, when I may have it; should, in order to raise the Price, refuse to check a Practice which the Masters are supposed to make use of, to the prejudice of the Suitors, and only for their own Gain?

XIII, XIV, XV, XVI, XVII.

The 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17th Articles all relate to Dormer's Affair; and contain several supposed Stratagems to conceal his Deficiency: all founded upon the same View, and to prevent the Gain upon Sale of Offices from being lessen'd. Without that View to Gain, I do not see any thing in these Articles, that is criminal. And therefore, if in your Lordships Judgment, I shall stand acquitted of that, upon a full examination how my Heart stood affected in that Particular, I think all must fall to the ground.

XIII. As to the 13th Article particularly; It sets forth That from an Apprehension that a publick Discovery of Dormer's Deficiency might lessen the unjust Gain I proposed to make to myself by selling and disposing the Offices of Masters, I neglected and declined either to secure his Person or Estate, or to make a proper Inquiry into the Deficiency; but endeavoured by many indirect Practices to conceal from the Suitors the true State and Condition of his Office, as well with respect to his Effects, as to his Debt to the Suitors. And the latter part of the Article says, That upon Motion made in the Court of Chancery (after I knew Dormer was absconded) to have the Effects of some of the Suitors transferred to another Master for better securing them, I, to delude the Suitors into a Belief that the Effects were safe, and thereby prevent a publick Inquiry, there said, That the Parties need not be in haste, that Dormer was only gone to take the Air in the Country, that he would return in a little time, and all would be well.

As to this latter part, they have not so much as examined a Witness to prove it. So that what Evidence has been offer'd upon this Article, amounts in truth to no more, than a Proof of Dormer's being deficient. But as to any Endeavour of mine to conceal the State of that Affair; or any refusal, or neglect to do my Duty; there is no Proof.

It appears, that he went off in November 1720, that his Clerk and his Servants by his Order, gave out, that he was only gone into the Country for a while. But he was gone into Holland for fear of a Gaol. I knew nothing of it till after Christmas, and then all the Steps were taken that were thought most likely to get as much as possible for the Suitors. His Chambers were searched by some of the Masters, and Directions were given to stop the transferring his Effects in the publick Funds. And it was carried on so far, that he was stripp'd of all, and with Tears begged, that Application should be made to me, for some Allowance out of it for his Subsistance; which Mr. Cottingham refused, because the Estate fell short, and he knew I could not order him the Mony of other People. And it is not now pretended, that any thing was not discovered by him, but only a parcel of Hops; and that plainly was not concealed fraudulently; for he made no advantage of it; the Hops are unsold to this day.

But the Charge of concealing Dormer's Affair being the Foundation of so many Articles, give me leave here to say something of it, tho' they have made no Proofs of it, or of the other Facts in this Article.

My Lords, He going away in November, and never appearing more in Court, or in his Office, but another put into his place in May; it is impossible his failing was, or could be, kept a Secret. Must not all the Suitors, who had Mony in his hands, know that he was gone? For my own part, I never imagined, it was a Secret. And as they, and their Agents, could not but know what was doing; had they not been satisfied, that the Court was taking the best measures to make up the Deficiency; would they not have made Application for some Relief? I did believe the Masters would make it good, Mr. Cottingham swears he told me so from them: He indeed does not now rightly remember the time, and answered not at first very readily whether it were before, or after November 1721, when the second Letter about the Accounts was wrote. But, of necessity, it must be before; because Mr. Edwards says, Mr. Cottingham told him it would be made up, just about the time of his being made Master; which was in May 1721; and it is not pretended, there ever was any Thought, that it should be made up any other way, but by the Masters. Mr. Edwards says too, some of the Masters told him it would be made up; He does not remember by whom they said it should be made up; but I think he says, he thought; I believe the thing speaks, it could be by no body else but the Masters. And even Mr. Lightboun's Letter in 1722 takes notice of it as a thing always under deliberation, how the Masters should make it up; and that he differed from the rest only in the Manner, and in insisting that at the same time care should be taken, that the like Accident might not happen again, and they be exposed to another Contribution. If I was too credulous in believing this, sure it is no Crime. And I am apt to think, your Lordships will be of Opinion, that the Suitors believed the same, or those, whose Money lay so that it might probably continue some Years, would have applied to have an Account taken, and that their Proportion should be reserved. But nothing of that kind was done by them. Afterwards there breaks out a Dispute between the Masters and the Master of the Rolls, thereupon Mr. Lightboun informs your Lordships, that many Orders were made in prejudice of the Masters in other Branches of their Office; the Language of the Court varied (as he expresses it) in Orders; and the Mony put into another Channel; whereby they lost, not only any Advantage that might be made of the Mony, but many Fees and Perquisites, that arose thereupon, and in the other Branches of their Office. Had not this happen'd, or should it be cured, I am perswaded that Dormer's Deficiency would all be made good. Contrary Measures may prevent it.

There was ſome little Reflexion made upon that part of the Evidence, which related to the Meſſage I firſt ſent to the Bank; and alſo for that the Order, which was afterwards ſent, and a Copy of it read, was never enter'd with the Regiſter.

But your Lordſhips have had an Account that the Effect of my Meſſage to the Bank (tho' there was no formal Order made) was, that a Memorandum was entered in their Books, that no Transfer ſhould be made without Leave from the Court of Directors, or Court of Chancery; which had the deſired effect. But it is true I made no formal Order, becauſe I did not apprehend, that I had Authority to hinder them from permitting him to transfer, by an Order of Court to be entered in a Cauſe, wherein they were no Parties. And that which was ſent after, was only to deliver them from the Reſtraint, they, it ſeems, look'd upon themſelves to be under, by that Meſſage; and to anſwer the Entry in their Book.

And as to its not being enter'd; I muſt likewiſe obſerve, that even the Directions ſent in November laſt to the Maſters by Advice of the Committee of Council, for preparing and bringing in their Accounts were never entered: and yet the Gentlemen will not imagine, that that could be with a deſign to have it kept a Secret; but the true and only reaſon of it was, that thoſe Forms are not neceſſary, but in adverſary Suits, or unleſs there be occaſion to inforce the execution of ſuch Orders by the Proceſs of the Court.

But they charge and argue, altho' they have proved nothing, that I have neglected my Duty.

My Lords, It is proved that I did a great deal more than they have proved to be my Duty. And what did I omit?

Obj. I did not (ſay they) ſecure his Perſon.

Reſp. My Lords, was that a Crime? He was in Holland out of my reach. When he came into England, it was to deliver up all he had to the Suitors, and on promiſe of Liberty.

But if I had, would that have been of uſe to the Suitors?

Obj. I iſſued no Sequeſtration to ſeize his Eſtate.

Reſp. The Eſtate was got without one, which is much better. The moſt uſual Allowance upon a Sequeſtration is 6 s. 8 d. a day to every one of the Sequeſtrators that are employed to put it in execution, which would ſoon have eat up great part of the Eſtate. And I do not know that the Sequeſtrators would have found out the poor parcel of Hops, which is all that was not got then; and it was not imbezled, but has been brought in now without the help of a Sequeſtration.

Obj. I did not examine him upon Interrogatories.

Reſp. I order'd Cottingham to propoſe to the Maſters, whether they would have one; and they thought he would make a fair Diſcovery without, and were afraid leſt that appearance of Diſtruſt and Hardſhip might drive him away again, but if they ſhould find it requiſite, they would apply. No Application was ever made to me to have it, nor does there any fraudulent Concealment appear, nor any thing diverted from the Satisfaction of the Suitors. And if he made a fair and honeſt Diſcovery of all, what imports it, whether he were ſworn, or not ſworn to it?

But I would beg leave to ask, Why ſhould I neglect what was proper?

The Reaſon they aſſign is, That if I had done theſe things, it would have made a Noiſe and brought the Matter out.

My Lords, what could make a greater Noiſe, than that a Maſter in Chancery abſconded, and no Mony was received or paid, nor Buſineſs done in his Office from November to May, and then another put in his Place?

One of the Gentlemen expreſſes his Aſtoniſhment, how it could enter into my Heart, that this could always be concealed, or that ſo ghaſtly a Wound could ever heal of itſelf, without the application of proper Remedies.

My Lords, it is yet more aſtoniſhing, that it ſhould enter into my Heart to endeavour to conceal it for thoſe Reaſons which he ſuppoſes I had in View. And I ſhould have thought, the Arguments that raiſed his Wonder at my having done ſo, ſtrong Arguments that I never did it; And indeed it is impoſſible I ſhould endeavour or hope to conceal that, which I knew was ſo notorious and publickly known. Nor was I without Endeavours towards healing the Wound: Some of thoſe Endeavours are attempted now to be made part of my Crime.

XIV. The 14th Article ſuggeſts, "That the "ſaid Fleetwood Dormer having towards Satisfac- "tion of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, aſſign- "ed to Henry Edwards, Eſq; (who ſucceeded "him in his Office of Maſter of the ſaid Court of "Chancery) a Debt of 24046 l. 4 s. or ſome other "great Sum due from William Wilſon, a Banker, "to the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, to the intent that "the Mony received on the Account thereof, "ſhould be applyed and diſpoſed of, as the ſaid "Court of Chancery ſhould Order and Direct, the "ſaid Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continu'd "Lord-Chancellor of Great-Britain, for the un- "lawful Purpoſes aforeſaid, with Regard to the "Intereſt of the Suitors, by Colour of his Office, "did, in an Unwarrantable, Clandeſtine, and Un- "uſual Manner, Authorize, Direct, and Eſtabliſh, "a precarious and trifling Compoſition with the "ſaid William Wilſon, upon the Terms of the ſaid "William Wilſon's paying the Sum of 1463 l. 2 s. "1 d. and aſſigning 10000 l. part of a Debt of "22060 l. 12 s. 5 d. pretended to be due to the "ſaid William Wilſon from Edward Poulter, or to "that Effect, in diſcharge of the ſaid Debt: and "to that End, upon the Report of John Hiccocks, "Eſq; then one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, "without any Attendance ordered or had there- "upon, and without Notice to the ſaid Suitors, "did by a private Order not made in open Court, "order the ſaid Henry Edwards to accept of the "ſaid Compoſition, in full Diſcharge of the ſaid "Debt, which ſaid Edward Poulter was a Perſon "inſolvent, and has ſince abſconded for Debt, "and none, or a very ſmall part of the ſaid 10000 l. "has been, or is ever likely to be received."

This Article your Lordſhips obſerve relates ſingly to the Compoſition with Wilſon, which is charged to be authorized by me to the unlawful Purpoſes aforeſaid, that is, to conceal Dormer's Deficiency, and keep up the Prices of the Offices.

Suppoſe this Tranſaction had been publick, nay, ſuppoſe Wilſon had been openly ſued for this Debt; would that have fallen the Price of Offices, or diſcovered Dormer's Deficiency? If his abſconding and aſſigning his Place to Mr. Edwards, did not diſcover it; would the Proof of his aſſigning this Debt to Mr. Edwards have diſcovered it? What End then could the Privacy of this Tranſaction ſerve?

But

But tho' it does not anſwer the Purpoſe, that is charged. Yet it is inſiſted upon to be prejudicial to the Suitors, and giving up a great Part of the Mony due to them from Wilſon, and done in a Clandeſtine Manner, and without their Knowledge.

What Proof then is there, that this Compoſition was prejudicial to the Suitors? A ſmall one it is indeed, but for a deſperate Debt; and what Proof is there that they could have had a better; or that it had been better to have had none?

It is ſaid, that Wilſon paid to ſome of his Creditors their whole Debts.

It is true, that was ſaid, but it has not been proved. If it had been proved, and the Circumſtances ſhewn, probably it would have appeared, that he had a particular View in paying thoſe their whole Debts, and it might be more beneficial to him to do ſo, and keep them his Friends; than if he had paid them only a part, as he did to his other Creditors.

And as ſmall as the Sum is, my Lords, give me leave to ſay, it had never been got in for the Benefit of the Suitors, if this Compoſition had not been made. So that 2463 l. has been got for the Creditors, tho' no more ſhould be recovered from Poulter, than the 1000 l. already got from him; where nothing had elſe been had, for what appears.

Obj. But Poulter was inſufficient, and the Debt aſſigned from him worth nothing.

Reſp. As to Poulter's Circumſtances at that time: Some Perſons have been called, who have proved ('tis true) that he was inſufficient at that time, and could not pay more than three or four thouſand Pounds; but the ſame Witneſſes give an Account, that his ill Circumſtances were then known but to four or five Perſons of his Acquaintance, and that by all other People, who had any Knowledge of him at that time, he was looked upon to be very ſufficient; he had left off his Buſineſs upon having raiſed an Eſtate; he was of good Reputation; he lived at Hackney in a Houſe making a good Appearance, with good Furniture, and a great quantity of Plate, till the laſt, till the time of his being put in Priſon, which was not till laſt Year, that he ſurrendered himſelf in diſcharge of his Bail.

But ſuppoſe he was not ſufficient, how does that affect me? I was not obliged to concern my ſelf with it, and left the Compoſition to the Management of the Maſters; they made it: Wilſon had ſworn an Affidavit in Writing of his Circumſtances, and that this was as much as he could pay to the Suitors; Mr. Hiccocks, a Gentleman of very good Reputation, was the Maſter, he being then Senior Maſter, to whom I referred the Conſideration of it, according to the Courſe of the Court; he was upon his Oath in what he acted therein, and made his Report, that he was of Opinion this Compoſition would be for the Advantage of thoſe to whom the Mony was to be paid. And upon that I grounded the Order.

Obj. But the Suitors had no Notice to diſpute it.

Reſp. The Conſequence of that is only, that Mr. Edwards being their Truſtee, and Wilſon knowing it, whatever could be done between them would not bind the Suitors, if it were any way detrimental to them: Therefore they have the Benefit of all that has been got in upon it, and yet have ſtill a right to enquire into the true Circumſtances of Mr. Wilſon, and to recover, in proportion with his other Creditors, any Effects he ſhall appear to have unfairly concealed.

Upon the whole of this Matter, could the Maſter, or I, have any indirect End to ſerve, by allowing Wilſon to compound at an under rate? It is not pretended I knew him, or could intend him a Favour. Why then ſhould I deſignedly leſſen Dormer's Fund, which was before deficient, and which I was endeavouring to make up?

Obj. But it is ſaid, that this was by my Direction.

Reſp. Suppoſe it were; they have not proved any thing to induce a Suſpicion that it was not perfectly innocent, nay beneficial to the Suitors, or probable to be ſo.

But the Proof is only, that Mr. Edwards ſpoke to me about it, and asked me, if he might compound it of himſelf; I thought not: But Mr. Hiccocks having afterwards informed him, that it was uſual to do things of that kind upon a Report grounded on the Party's Oath, and an Order founded thereon; he propoſed that Method, and I thought it might be ſo done. And he did it.

But whether this was prudent, or imprudent; where is the Crime? This tended nothing to conceal Dormer's Affairs: He was known to be broke; and Wilſon's Debt was eſteemed deſperate. There was no other View, nor could be, but to get ſomewhat towards Dormer's Deficiency, and no body is at all hurt by it.

Obj. But this was unuſual.

Reſp. In what?

Obj. No day was appointed to hear Councel upon it.

Reſp. My Lords, There was no occaſion for Counſel; there was nothing for Councel to be heard to; there was nothing for them to argue. The Order is in direct purſuance of the Report.

Indeed, upon careleſly reading the Article, one would imagine the Charge to be, that this was an Order made upon Mr. Edwards, without giving him Notice, or hearing Councel for him. And that would be very unuſual and unjuſt; if it were not that it is ordered upon his own Petition, and at his own Requeſt.

Your Lordſhips will likewiſe obſerve, that this was the 3d of Auguſt, after the Seals were over; and if I muſt have appointed it to come on, upon a publick day (not to have it concealed) it muſt have waited till October; And by that time Wilſon, and his Effects, might probably have been gone, and the Opportunity of getting any thing loſt.

As to ſome few new Obſervations made upon reading theſe Proceedings, I ſee not how they tend to prove any Crime in me.

Obj. They are not filed.

Reſp. That is not my Affair. And if they are never filed, they will affect no body, and cannot poſſibly do harm.

Obj.

Obj. Some Lines or Words appeared razed out, which import that Mr. Edwards ſhould be indemnified.

Reſp. If he acted fairly in this matter, he would be indemnified, tho' thoſe Words were out; And if he did not, they ought not to be in.

In ſhort, here is not the leaſt Evidence, but that this Compoſition was made with a View to get as much as could be for the Suitors, out of a deſperate Debt; there is no body hurt by it; and if it be not of advantage to the Suitors, they may avoid it.

XV, XVI. The 15, 16, and 17th Articles were opened together; but one Gentleman ſpoke more particularly to the 17th, as being of a different nature from the others; and therefore I will ſpeak to it ſeparately.

The principal Subjects of the 15th and 16th Articles, are 4500 l. raiſed by the Maſters, and 1000 l. by myſelf, towards Dormer's Deficiency.

In the laſt Article I ſpoke to, the Crime was, the leſſening Dormer's Effects by a trifling Compoſition; in theſe, increaſing them 5500 l. is a Crime.

At firſt ſight, one would think this commendable, but by I know not what Fatality, every thing grows criminal by my having any concern in it. My Intention infects all. It is ſaid that I intended by it to carry on my corrupt Purpoſes, that is, as one of the Gentlemen explained it, to conceal Dormer's Deficiency.

But all that appears upon the Proofs offered relating to my Intentions is, that here was a ſtrong Deſire to make good Dormer's Deficiency; And that way of concealing it is ſurely not blameable.

But then as to the 4500 l; it is ſaid, that I induced the Maſters to pay it by Colour of my Authority.

How is this proved?

Mr. Conway produces, and proves, the Receit he had given him by Mr. Edwards, for 500 l. voluntarily contributed by him towards Mr. Dormer's Deficiency: and ſays, that he had promiſed it in February, and paid it accordingly in Auguſt.

Mr. Edwards ſays, that in 1721 he received 500 l. apiece, from all the Maſters, but Mr. Lightboun.

Mr. Lightboun ſays, that when Mr. Cottingham ſpoke to him of it in February 1720, he told him, all the other Maſters had agreed to it; but Mr. Lightboun refuſed it: That I never ſpoke to him of it till January 1722, which was near two Years after; that then, I was ſo far from making uſe of my Authority, that when he asked me, whether it was my Propoſal, or the Maſters; upon its being ſaid, it came from the two Senior Maſters, he took occaſion to ſpeak more freely againſt it; and tho' I uſed ſome Arguments with him, yet he ſays I left him to his own Inclinations.

My Lords, theſe are their Proofs. But they are to be helpt out by ſome Conſtructions.

Obj. It is ſaid, that the Letter which I cauſed to be ſent in February 1720 to require them to give in their Accounts, was in order to terrify them to come into a Compoſition: for it is ſaid, when that had its Effect, and the Mony was paid, they were not obliged to bring in their Accounts.

Reſp. This then, I ſuppoſe, is that Colour of Authority by which (according to the Charge in this Article) I induced them to contribute.

But in the firſt place I beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider, whether it can be thought, that any of the Maſters would pay 500 l. rather than let me know what was in his hands? which was all the Conſequence of my having an Account. If it can not; why ſhould it be, without the leaſt Proof, imagined, that I ſhould expect it?

In the ſecond place I muſt beg leave to obſerve, that the Maſters beſt know, what effect that Letter had upon them, and what was the Motive of their advancing that Mony; but none of them have ſworn, that they were in the leaſt induced to pay the Mony by the fear of that Letter, or by the apprehenſion of being forced to give in their Accounts if they did not comply. Nor do the Circumſtances ſhew it. For Mr. Conway came in but in that February, and had but little Mony in his hands, and a very ſhort Account to make. Mr. Kynaſton and Mr. Tho. Bennet, who are now deficient, were not then Maſters. Mr. Holford had got an Account ready, yet he paid. Mr. Lightboun gave in no Account, and yet he did not pay.

So that upon a View of the Evidence, here is a good Action done, very beneficial to the Suitors; and no indirect Practice to bring it about.

And therefore the Charge not being proved, I am according to my general Plea, not guilty of the Matters contained in this Article, or any of them, in manner and form as they are therein charged againſt me. And there is no occaſion to make out, what I have ſtated in my Anſwer, to have made this matter more clear, in caſe they had given occaſion, by having produced Evidence to maintain their Charge.

However I have ſhewn a ſecond Letter, written by my Order, in November following, requiring thoſe Accounts with more earneſtneſs. Mr. Cottingham produces the Draught of it, and tho' he will not ſwear poſitively that he deliver'd or ſent it; becauſe he does not find any memorandum of it: he verily believes he did, and has not the leaſt ground to ſuſpect the contrary.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve, how very particular the Account was directed to be.

The firſt Letter was wrote the 14 of February 1720, Your Lordſhips will give me leave to read the Copy kept of it.

[Reads.] " 14 February 1720.

" I am commanded by my Lord to ſignify to " you, that you do, with all convenient ſpeed, " lay before his Lordſhip an Account in ſeveral " Columns.

" 1. Of the Cauſe.
" 2. Sollicitour, or Agent.
" 3. The Date of the Order.
" 4. For what Purpoſe the Mony was brought in.
" 5. How much was brought in.
" 6. When.

" 7. How much in hand.
" 8. How much on Securities.
" 9. How much paid out.

A diſtinct Account of Securities.

" 1. Cauſe.
" 2. From whom the Security is taken.
" 3. What the Security is.
" 4. In whoſe Name taken.
" 5. For how much each Security.
" 6. The total of the ſeveral Securities.
" 7. In whoſe hands lodged.

A diſtinct Account of Money paid out.

" 1. Cauſe.
" 2. By what Order, of what date.
" 3. When paid.
" 4. To whom.

The ſecond Letter is dated the 7 November 1721. And is in theſe words:

[Reads.]

" By my Letter of the 14 of February laſt, I " ſignified to you my Lord Chancellor's pleaſure, " which was that you ſhould with all convenient " ſpeed lay your Account before his Lordſhip, " the Method whereof was to be in ſeveral Co- " lumns ſubſcribed at the foot of that Letter. I " am now farther to acquaint you, that his Lord- " ſhip is very much ſurprized to find that in all " this time no ſuch Account hath been laid be- " fore him; and therefore hath commanded me " to tell you, that it is expected to be delivered " on or before the laſt Day of this Term; and if " this is not complied with, you will oblige his " Lordſhip (tho' very unwillingly) to think of " other Meaſures, which I doubt not but you " will avoid by a ready compliance with what " is a ſecond time required of you. And to the " end there may be no miſtake as to the Method " of your accounting, I have ſubſcribed it again " at the foot of this Letter.".

And Mr. Cottingham explains what he apprehends was meant by that Paſſage of other Meaſures, that I would make an Order in form, that is, an Order of Court to be entered with the Regiſter. He tells your Lordſhips what Repreſentations they made of the Difficulties of drawing up ſuch Accounts: And I did not afterwards inſiſt upon them. And your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to obſerve, that the Letter ſent by me, in Form of an Order, in November laſt, by Advice of the Lords of the Council, was for an Account much in the ſame manner. The words are theſe:

" Dated 3 November 1724.

" Let the ſeveral Maſters of the High Court " of Chancery forthwith prepare and deliver to " me a perfect Account of the Mony in their " Hands, therein diſtinguiſhing in ſeveral Co- " lumns
" The Names of the Parties to the Cauſe.
" The Dates of the Orders for bringing in } Mony or Securities.
" The Time of bringing in each Sum.
" Particularly expreſſing the Sums tranſ- " ferred and paid to them at their " coming into their Office, in the firſt " Place.
" How the ſame hath been diſpoſed,
" What Sums paid out, and to whom, } when and by what Order.
" What inveſted in Securities, } Order.
" Specifying the Securities by Dates, Numbers, &c.
" Where the Securities are at preſent,
" What Mony remains in their Hands,
" Where the ſame now is.

Mr. Holford tells your Lordſhips, that another Account was carried in by my Order inſtead of one ſo particular; for that an Account drawn up in that manner, would have taken up ſeveral Months: And in February 1721 or 1722 it muſt have taken up many more; becauſe there were then Maſters, who had been much longer in their Offices, than Mr. Holford the now Senior Maſter had, in November laſt, been in his. And thoſe Accounts muſt have gone through their whole Time. And, if your Lordſhips will be pleas'd to look upon the Report on the Table, it will appear that the Judges and Directors reported, that no regular Accounts could be taken, unleſs they were brought down from the Beginning of the time, that each Maſter had been in his Office; and yet the Lords never inſiſted on any ſuch Accounts afterwards (tho' I had made an Order for them by their Advice) nor the Lords Commiſſioners ſince; which what is it, but falling into the ſame Sentiments that I had done before? The requiring the Dates of the Orders on which Mony was paid, and the Sollicitors Names (which I found not one of the Maſters was able to give me) was intended by me, that I might be able to make ſome Examination into the Truth of the Accounts, that ſhould be given in: And for want of that, your Lordſhips know, what Methods the Lords Commiſſioners have been forced to take; to have the Accounts of the ſeveral Maſters printed and publiſh'd, and diſperſed throughout England at a publick Expence; that People may come in voluntarily to make a Surcharge. And yet it is well known, that the preparing the preſent Accounts, ſhort as they are, containing only the Ballances of Securities and Caſh, which the Maſters owned to be then in their Hands in each Cauſe, ſo took up their Times, that the Buſineſs of the Court before them ſtood ſtill for ſome time, and their Attendance in Court was diſpenſed with. No Wonder then if I did not inſiſt on theſe Accounts, which were to be attended with ſo troubleſome, ſo tedious, and ſo fatiguing an Enquiry.

Theſe are ſome Facts, that I have not indeed examined to; but with Submiſſion I do not ſtand in need of them: If I did, they are notorious; and I believe the Managers, ſome of them at leaſt, know them, and will not deny them; and the Maſters, being your Lordſhips Attendants, may be aſked to them, by any of your Lordſhips, who ſhall think there needs any farther Satisfaction to be given concerning them.

Obj. But why then did I not content myself with the shorter Accounts, and take them at least, such as were deliver'd into the Committee of Council?

Resp. As to those Accounts; I shall beg leave to say something upon them under the 18th Article, which, I flatter myself, will give your Lordships intire Satisfaction on that Head.

Upon the 16th Article I take the Liberty to say as to the 1000*l.* paid on Mrs. Chitty's Account; I never expected that an Act of Humanity to Mr. Lochman should be made a Crime.

The supposed Crime, I think, consists in this, That it was in farther Prosecution of my unjust and corrupt Purposes, that is, Keeping up my gain in selling Places, by concealing Dormer's Deficiency.

How is this proved?

Mr. Lochman tells of his applying to me, and my saying to him at first, that it should be paid; but telling him after, that there were not sufficient of Dormer's Effects left; that the Masters were in great Apprehensions of losing the Profits of their Places, and were not willing to advance any Mony; that he told me of a Composition he had made, that the Time was near; that then I said, I would order Cottingham to pay the Mony; but told him, that if Mrs. Chitty had nothing else, he might by marrying her make himself worse; for there would be no more Mony paid her thence. And he swears that he did not look upon that Sum to be paid out of Compassion, but only as it was due. He says, it was about a fortnight before the 1000*l* was paid, that I told him no more would be paid. Upon some Questions put to him by me, he said, he asked for another 1000*l* on account of Mrs. Chitty's Children: But that after I had told him, no more than the first mention'd 1000*l* would be paid, which was a fortnight before it was paid, he asked it no more; and deny'd that he apply'd for the Payment of 500*l* or 574*l* after I had promis'd the 1000*l.*

My Lords, all this, supposing it true, does not prove that I paid this Mony to conceal Dormer's Deficiency; for he says I told him before, that Dormer's Effects were all gone; and at the Time when I made the Promise of that Mony, I told him no more of her Mony would be paid.

And is it rightly collected from this Action, without farther Proof, that my Intention in paying this Mony, was to conceal the very thing, which I at the same Time expresly published?

But, my Lords, it is fully proved on my Part by Mr. Cottingham and Mr. Elphinstone, that this 1000*l* was advanced out of a generous Compassion, and not out of any by-end: That his Application was founded on this, that he was to marry Mrs. Chitty, and was to have this 1000*l* to pay a Composition for his Debts; that I had sent him word of the Deficiency, and that he could not have the Mony; so the great Secret was out: But that he afterwards appear'd in the utmost Distress and Agony, in Danger of laying violent Hands on himself, and desperate: This Distress moved me; I told him, I would order the Mony to be paid out of Compassion to him; he afterwards spoke of it with the utmost Acknowledgment: I told him this, and gave the Order accordingly on Monday, and it was paid the Thursday following, which was the 30th of July; and as to Mr. Lochman's Testimony, who denyed that he apply'd for a farther Sum; it has been proved, under his own Hand, that he apply'd for 574*l* for Mrs. Chitty, on Pretence she could not otherwise spare him the whole 1000*l*, and this after the time was appointed for Mrs. Chitty to receive the 1000*l.*

Here the Earl of Macclesfield informing the Lords, that he found himself so far spent, as not to be able to proceed at present, the House adjourned during Pleasure, and after some time the House being resumed, the Earl of Macclesfield went on.

My Lords, when your Lordships were pleased to allow me to retire, I was just upon Mrs. Chitty's 1000*l*, and had spoke of that Part of the Transaction that related to Mr. Lochman. And as to the next, which is the Charge of endeavouring to persuade the Masters to advance that 1000*l*, and using the Arguments in the Article mention'd for that Purpose:

Upon the Evidence it does appear, that there was a Meeting of the Masters at my House in the latter end of July last; and some such Arguments used as in the Articles, but not (as is charged) to have a present Purpose of paying the 1000*l* answered, but to have Dormer's Deficiency all made good, by small annual Payments out of each Office. A View, which I hope your Lordships will think very innocent and commendable, whether likely to be successful or not. And this was so much the Intent of my desiring the Masters to come together, that tho' that 1000*l* was the immediate Occasion, that discover'd the Effects to be then all gone, and so might naturally be mentioned, and I doubt not but it was, I do not yet remember that I persuaded the Masters to pay it; Nor does Mr. Lovibond remember it; and Mr. Holford's Expression was (if I took him right) only, that he apprehended it was mentioned as if the Masters should contribute to make up that 1000*l*. However, my Lords that was not the End which I aimed at and mentioned; and upon the whole Evidence all agree, that the Discourse about the 1000*l* was soon over, and ended with my saying, That I would take, or had taken, Care of it. Mr. Lightboun says, he is not sure which of the two Expressions I made use of. And even Mr. Tho. Bennet says, that when I had said so, nothing was afterwards said of that, but of Dormer's Deficiency; and then came in the Discourse of the Parliament. Mr. Holford represents it, that after some Discourse of the 1000*l*, I spoke of Dormer's Deficiency; and particularly of the Mischief, which was what Mr. Edwards had a little before said, that some had had all, and others none (which would not at all be cured by Payment of this 1000*l*) and that then I mentioned, that that might make great Clamour, and possibly occasion a Parliamentary Enquiry: Where if it were resolved that buying those Places was against the Statute of Ed. 6. it might affect me in the Disposal of the Places, and the Masters in the Enjoyment of their Places: He says several things were proposed, but nothing agreed on. One Proposal was, whether if the Masters were continued on the same Foot they had been, it would not be worth their while to contribute?

The Masters have not had so good Memories in this Case as I hoped. But Mr. Lovibond does swear, ſwear, that all or the greateſt Part did then agree, that if their Offices were eſtabliſh'd, as they had been for forty Years, they would make an annual Contribution towards Dormer's Deficiency. And he heard no body ſay otherwiſe, only he himſelf (he ſays) did not agree to it.

So that it appears upon the whole, that what I ſaid was not with Intent to ſupply a preſent Purpoſe, as is charged; for I had declared to them, I had taken care of that, or would take care of it. And if I could, by ſetting ſuch an Example, or by any Arguments I could uſe, induce them to contribute by Payments, as they could be ſpared out of the Profits of their Offices, to make good the whole Deficiency, or if not all, yet to make good the Proportion of thoſe who had had no part of Dormer's Effects, I ſee no harm; and I am ſure there was no Fraud in it. It is to conceal it and prevent Clamour or Inquiry about it, only by paying it; which would leave no Room or Occaſion for Clamour or Inquiry; or if they could not pay the Whole, by paying the Proportion which any one could be intitled to.

And this Propoſal, to have it paid by Annual Payments out of the ſeveral Offices, did not tend to raiſe the Price of them, but on the contrary by laying a Burden upon them, would greatly diminiſh their Value.

Whether the Deſign I had, or the Arguments I uſed, were prudent, or diſcreet, or proper, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment; but the Arguments were not uſed for the Purpoſes in the Article, but for the Benefit of the Suitors of the Court.

But to give this ſome appearance of a Crime, they are forced to attribute it to criminal Views and Deſigns, of which they have made no Proof, nor ſhewn any Probability, ſcarce Poſſibility, that they were the Principles of this Action.

I might farther obſerve, that the paying the 1000 l. and leaving the 500 l. (which in the very ſame Order is directed to be paid to the Plaintiff) unpaid, and the 574 l. demanded by Mr. Lochman, unpaid; would not at all hinder the Deficiency from breaking out.

As to the Expreſſion charged in the End of the Article, to be uſed by me, I agree, I uſed one very near it; but with other Expreſſions along with it (which the Witneſs in effect owns) that ſhew, I could not poſſibly have any ill Deſign in it; nor could any Inconvenience enſue upon it. No Queſtion had till that time been laid before the Court relating to Dormer's Deficiency: Chitty's was only an Application for Favour, for a Sum then particularly wanted, becauſe there were at that time no Effects, and was paid by me out of Compaſſion; there was no Queſtion of Right about it to be decided, as was here, when the Diſpute was, who was to bear the Loſs, if any, and could be determined only upon Circumſtances. I at the ſame time was ſo far from endeavouring to have it believed, that there was no Deficiency in Dormer's Office, or that I knew not of it, that I declared a great deal, which I knew about that matter.

As to what they object, that the Order is drawn up in ſuch a manner as implies (as they ſay) my being wholly ignorant of the matter, by directing an Enquiry whether there was likely to be any Deficiency or not:

Give me leave to ſay, that if I had known more of it; if I had known to a Farthing what Dormer's Deficiency would be; I could not as a Judge found an Order upon my own private Knowledge, but muſt make it in the ſame manner as if I had known nothing at all; and accordingly that Order is worded in the ſame manner, as it muſt have been, if I had never heard of Dormer's Failure before.

Beſides, it had been then talked, that Hilton had not dealt fairly in his Compoſition; and if ſo, and if he were worth it, the Suitors might recover near 22,000 l. more againſt him. A matter extremely proper for the Maſter to enquire into.

XVII. As to the 17th Article, which relates to Orders for payment of Monies depoſited with Dormer; which Mr. Edwards (as is charged) was directed by me to pay, without regard to that Proportion, which ought to have been obſerved in a defective Fund.

They have read four Orders made by me, and no more, three of them in one Cauſe; and only one of them directs the whole Mony to be paid out. I ſaid in my Anſwer, that I did not know that I had made any other Order than that of Chitty; but believed the Court might have made others: which gave occaſion, it ſeems, to ſome of the Gentlemen to wonder at the Diſtinction between me and the Court. My meaning was, that ſuch Orders might have been made by the Court in my abſence, for ought appeared; that is, by the Maſter of the Rolls and Judges, with others in Commiſſion for hearing of Cauſes.

But as to what was done by me; the proper Anſwer to this Article, the true one, and I hope a ſatisfactory one, is, that I acted ſo as I thought would be moſt for the good and benefit of the Suitors. I fully believed all along, that the Whole would be made good, to which I contributed all I could; and I acted accordingly. If I was miſtaken, I hope it is no Crime.

XVIII. As to the 18th Article, three Neglects are charged upon me in this Article.

1. Not taking proper care of the Securities lodged with the Maſters.

2. Not taking Security for the Caſh.

3. Not taking the Maſters Accounts.

There is another thing expreſſed, which is permitting and incouraging the Maſters to traffick with the Suitors Mony and Effects. But that I apprehend means only, that the not taking due care to hinder them, is permitting and incouraging them. So that it does not make a diſtinct Branch of the Article; but is only a ſuppoſed Conſequence of the reſt.

As to the Securities and Caſh, what I am charged to have omitted doing, was never done before by my Predeceſſors, nor deſired then of me by the Suitors. And, therefore I ſuppoſe, there is a particular Reaſon aſſigned why it ſhould have been done by me, tho' not before; and that is Mr. Dor- mer's Failure, which is charged to have been chiefly occasion'd by his taking upon himself unduely to diſpoſe and employ the Mony and Effects of the Suitors in his hands. And this the Article charges that I knew.

My Lords, as to this particular Reaſon: To add a new Duty to my Office from it, and to lay me under an Obligation to do that, which my Predeceſſors were not obliged to; it ought to be clearly made out that the Fact is true, that this was the Cauſe of Dormer's Failure; that I knew it to be ſo; and that thereby it became my Duty, unasked by the Parties intereſted, to make the new Proviſion expected. But there is no Proof that Dormer did unduely diſpoſe of or employ the Mony and Effects of the Suitors in his hands; much leſs is it proved, that I ever knew it, or had the leaſt reaſon to ſuſpect it; but the contrary.

The Account Mr. Parkhurſt gave of what paſſed at the time of Dormer's going off, was this (which was repreſented to me, and never ſhew'd to be falſe) That Mr Dormer, who was his Uncle, informed him, that having happened to receive a greater Sum than ordinary out of the Exchequer, and going into the Country in the Long Vacation 1720, he knew not where to leave it ſafer than with Mr. Wilſon, an eminent Banker; and he left it with him to the value of 24,000 l; that upon his return to Town, he found Mr. Wilſon ſtopt payment; and that therefore he would withdraw himſelf, for fear of a Gaol; that accordingly he went into Holland, and wrote a Letter from Rotterdam to Mr. Parkhurſt, with one incloſed, to be ſhewn to the Maſters, and ſent to me or Mr. Cottingham; he gave ſome account of the Letter, that it ſet forth the Caſe to the effect above; and the Draught thereof is in the hands of the Managers, which they might produce, if they thought proper. This I took to be the true State of the Caſe; and never heard any thing to the contrary (except Mr. Lightboun's Gueſſes, founded on no Fact, but on the greatneſs of the Sum, which this accounts for another way) till December laſt, when I was told, that Wilſon pretended, he borrowed it of Mr. Dormer at an high Intereſt; but as this appears to be ſpoke in excuſe of himſelf, an After-thought at four Years diſtance is little to be regarded, and however, if it were true, ought not to affect me, to whom it was never diſcloſed. But according to this that I have ſtated above, which was certainly the truth of the Caſe, or however what appeared to me; Dormer's Failure was not occaſioned by his undue diſpoſing of or employing the Mony and Effects; but it was a Misfortune owing to the Year 1720, and Circumſtances peculiar to that Time; ſo not likely to happen again. On Dr. Eddisbury's Failure there appeared no Accident, but his own ill Conduct: Yet no Change was made by the Lord Chancellor, as to the Effects, or Caſh, or giving Security.

But it was urged, that tho' this had not been deſired of me by the Suitors, it had been propoſed to me by the Maſters themſelves:

And three of the Maſters were called to prove this. But only two of them pretend to have ſpoke to me about it, Mr. Lightboun and Mr. Kinaſton. Mr. Holford the 3d ſays, He never was once with me about it, only he liked ſome things which Mr. Lightboun told him he propoſed.

Mr. Lightboun's whole Evidence, taken all together, clearly proves what I ſet forth in my Anſwer; that I had in view three things. 1. The making good Dormer's Deficiency. 2. Settling the Maſters in their juſt Rights. 3. Securing the Suitors from future Accidents. The 1ſt was the Principal, and always uppermoſt with me. The 2d was plainly neceſſary, in order to that. The 3d for ſecuring the Suitors from future Accidents of that kind, I was likewiſe very deſirous of; but, I own, at that time, while I thought the Maſters then in being Perſons of Ability and Subſtance, and he gave me no reaſon to think otherwiſe, I apprehended there was no need of any extraordinary Expedition in it.

As to making good the Deficiency; It appears, that at the time of Mr. Lightboun's Propoſal, the Maſters were all willing to contribute; only Mr. Lightboun ſtood out; and his Reaſon, which in his Examination to the 16th Article he ſays, he upon one Occaſion mentioned to me as ſufficient, was, that it would be a Precedent for his paying other Debts of other Maſters. And upon his Examination to this Article, he ſays, that he told me in diſcourſe on that Subject, that as Dormer's Accident had happened, the like might again; and ſo often, that it could not be ſupported; and afterwards, that if any thing could be done to make good Dormer's Deficiency, and put things upon a ſecure Bottom, he would be as ready to contribute as any body. He then gives an account of the Propoſals he made, which he ſays, I deſired him to reduce into Writing for my Conſideration, which he did; the Copy of it was produced and read, and I have the Letter it ſelf here in my hand; and there only, I apprehend, is to be found the Propoſal which is to affect me, and not that which he now from his Memory mentions to be the Propoſal, but differs from the Writing in ſeveral things; which not being in the Letter, if he had mentioned them curſorily in that Diſcourſe, I muſt have looked upon them as what upon farther Conſideration he did not think proper.

My Lords, The occaſion of the Propoſal was my ſpeaking to him about contributing to Dormer's Deficiency; and both that and the Propoſal it ſelf ſhew, that it was really no more, than laying before me the Terms upon which he would contribute.

In thoſe Terms, the principal thing inſiſted upon by him was, that the Mony ſhould be continued to be brought before the Maſters; which, I apprehend, had then been a little broken in upon: which is expreſſed in theſe Words, ſhewing the Improbability, that a Fact objected ſhould happen, "if (as his words are) the Mony be directed as "uſual to be brought before the Maſters, both "by your Lordſhip and the Maſter of the Rolls; "without which the Maſters cannot think themſelves much intereſted in the Event of Mr. Dormer's Affair."

The

The other thing he inſiſted upon was, that he ſhould be ſecure from being expoſed to the like Inconvenience, by failure of another Maſter; and therefore what he propoſes in relation to ſecuring the Effects, is not a thing propoſed to be done of itſelf, ſeparately, but in company with the other Regulations.

That part that relates to the Rights of the Maſters, was afterwards preſſed farther, as it was apprehended they were more broken in upon; and produced the Repreſentation of the Maſters, which Mr. Lightboun the other day mentioned to your Lordſhips.

And this likewiſe explains ſeveral parts of his Evidence: It explains what he ſays, that he preſſed me ſo often to do ſome thing, and thought that to be Irreſolution, which was indeed my Caution to proceed upon ſure Grounds, in doing a thing, which, if not perfectly well founded, might have the Appearance of being contrived on purpoſe to advance, or keep up the Profits of the Offices of the Maſters. It explains his Apprehenſion, that if I did not do it, it would not be done by my Succeſſor, unleſs the Seal ſhould come into the Hands of a noble Lord, whom he named. It ſhews, that what he preſſed, was not ſo much for the Maſters to give Security, or to make up Dormer's Deficiency, and retrieve the Honour of the Court, as to have Orders made, for the Benefit of the Maſters; which I thought ought to go together.

For it wanted no Reſolution in me, or in any other Chancellor, to make Orders upon the Maſters, to ſecure the Effects of the Suitors in their Hands; had that been the thing preſſed, and eſpecially if, as is pretended, they themſelves deſired it. But it might require Reſolution to ſupport the Maſters againſt the Claims of an honourable Perſon, with whom they then had a Diſpute.

This View of this Matter will make your Lordſhips conſider it in a different light from what the Managers have endeavoured to ſet it in; and that my Slowneſs did not proceed from my concern for the keeping up of the Maſters Offices, but from my Caution not to be too precipitate in advancing them.

And had I taken the Meaſures deſired, and made Orders to prevent the Maſter of the Rolls from directing, in his Decrees, the Mony to be brought before the Uſher, and from referring Irregularities to the ſix Clerks; and to ſettle in their favour the other Matters in diſpute (tho' I will do them the Juſtice to declare, that I do ſo far, as I have ſeen of it, think the Maſters in the right therein) yet I am apprehenſive, that at firſt ſight it would have been matter of Complaint againſt me, as a contrivance to advance the Offices of the Maſters; and that the Schemes propoſed by Mr. Lightboun for giving the Security he repreſents as ſufficient, would not have been thought a Ballance to it.

Having ſaid this, give me leave to weigh the Propoſals.

And firſt, his Propoſals for providing for Dormer's Deficiency.

The way of doing it, which he propoſes, is this: Having ſtated, in the firſt page of the Letter, what he takes to have been the occaſion of "this great Deficiency, he goes on, "which I "hope may be provided for, and the Credit of "the Court retrieved and ſupported by every "Maſter advancing 2000 l, or ſuch other Sum, "as ſhall be agreed on, out of the Caſh of the "Court in his Hands; which being placed out "at Intereſt, the yearly Income thereof, toge-"ther with the Produce of Mr. Dormer's Eſtate, "will anſwer the Demands that may be ex-"pected on his Succeſſor, and will in due time "make good the Debt upon the Office."

But as to this, I thought it both impracticable and inſufficient; and I told him, and he very fairly owns it in his Evidence, that I could not make an Order of that kind; becauſe it would indeed be ordering one Man's Mony to be put out at Intereſt, to pay another's Debt.

His next Propoſal relates to the Securities, lodged in the Hands of the Maſters, which he thought of the greateſt Conſequence; becauſe, as he now ſays, he told me that Dormer's Accident came by trafficking with Securities; which he inferred from a Suppoſition that there was not then ſo much Caſh in his Hands. This Fact is contrary to the Repreſentation made as above to me, and the Suppoſition, with reſpect to the quantity of Caſh, is obviated by his having juſt received a great Sum out of the Exchequer. And your Lordſhips have heard from the Report to the Lords of the Committee of Council, that the Maſters have brought in all their Securities; ſo that what Mr. Lightboun thought the greateſt Danger, has proved to be none at all.

However, to prevent that, which he thought the greateſt danger, he propoſes the taking all Government Securities for the future, in the Names of two or more Maſters; his Words are in page the 2d. "Having before obſerved from "whence this great Deficiency aroſe, I ſubmit "it to your Lordſhip, "whether the taking all "Government Securities for the future, in the "Name of two or more Maſters, may not pre-"vent the like Misfortune hereafter." He ſays now, that he propoſed them to be taken in the Names of ſome Maſters, and of a third Perſon; but that is not mentioned in the Letter, nor does Mr. Holford mention it in his Evidence.

As to this Propoſal, he has now ſworn, as the Truth is, that I ſtarted a Difficulty upon that Head, by objecting that this would not anſwer all Caſes, particularly with reſpect to the Eaſt-India and South-Sea Bonds, by reaſon that they are payable to the Bearer. And his Anſwer was, That there was no neceſſity of taking theſe Securities; ſuch might be taken as are transferrable in the Books of the Companies.

On conſulting others upon this, I found, that as to Eaſt-India and South-Sea Bonds, wholly to diſallow the taking thoſe Securities would be hard. Many People chooſe them, becauſe there is little variation in the Price, only ſometimes a few Shillings higher or lower; whereas in Annuities, and much more in other Stock, the fall of the Price, by the time the Mony was to be paid out, might eat up the Intereſt and more. That there would be a difficulty to diſpoſe of thoſe at that time in the Hands of the Maſters; probably the Owners would not conſent; it had been their Choice, that had determined the laying out of the Mony upon thoſe Bonds; that to ſend them to the Market all together would occaſion a fall of the Price, and a great loſs, which would raiſe a Clamour, and give great Diſſatisfaction.

I thought theſe ſeveral things had great Weight, and deſerved moſt ſerious Conſideration. I then thought of locking up theſe Bonds in Cheſts, with two Locks, one to be kept by the Maſter, to whom they belonged, and the other by the next Maſter after him, and to take the other Securities in the Name of two Maſters.

But I was told by Perſons of great weight, that that was but two Maſters inſtead of one, and would not be ſatisfactory: And ſhould I join more of them, it would occaſion more trouble, and poſſibly more charge; but they were ſtill Maſters.

At laſt I reſolved to take the Securities (other than the Bonds) in the Names of two Maſters, and a third Perſon to be named by the Parties. But ſtill I ſtuck at the Bonds, and was never ſet right in that, till it was too late. But I have now learned, which neither I, nor Mr. Lightboun, as your Lordſhips may obſerve by his Evidence, had skill enough to know, that they might be indorſed to two Maſters and a third Perſon, and ſo the Property be fixed in them. Which, had I afterwards continued Chancellor, I was determined to have put in Practice.

As to the Caſh, how that might be made ſecure, his whole Propoſal is contained in theſe Words in the ſecond Page: "The Depoſit to "be put out at Intereſt, to raiſe a Fund for the "Payment of Mr. Dormer's Debt, together with "our Office, would in a great Meaſure be a "Security for the Caſh, with which we ſhould "then only be intruſted." By the Depoſit he means that of 2000 l, or ſuch other Sum, as ſhould be agreed upon, as I before read to your Lordſhips.

This is the Nature of his Propoſal, with relation to the Security for the Caſh; which I apprehend muſt appear to be neither practicable, as I obſerved before, nor ſatisfactory. And had I built upon this, and made a Regulation accordingly, I was very apprehenſive thoſe that were before diſſatisfied, would call it trifling.

He then takes notice of the Mony being lodged with the Maſters very effectually, tho' it is by way of anſwer to an Objection, that every Maſter may not always have ſuch a Sum in his Hand; to which he anſwers: "I will "venture to ſay, it's ſcarce poſſible that can happen, "if the Mony be directed as uſual by your Lordſhip "and the Maſter of the Rolls;" and then he adds (to ſhew the Streſs laid upon this) "without "which the Maſters cannot think themſelves much "intereſted in the Event of Mr. Dormer's Affair." And ſays in the 3d Page: "If I have the happineſs to have offered any thing thought practicable by your Lordſhip, when I have the "Honour to be admitted to wait upon you, I "hope to ſatisfy your Lordſhip, that I ſhall with "Pleaſure contribute, as becomes me, to facilitate any Undertaking of this kind."

I think this proves what I ſaid in the beginning; and I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether I am criminal in not complying with theſe Propoſals.

My Lords, I have told your Lordſhips ſeveral thoughts I had about the Securities. Give me leave to mention ſomething of my thoughts, with relation to the Caſh.

I thought to take a ſmall Security would only ſhew that I was convinced that a Security was neceſſary, and yet trifled in it; and thoſe, that were willing to find fault, would ſay, it was done only to amuſe the Suitors and lull them into a falſe Security.

And till I could adjuſt the matter of the Securities lodged with them, particularly the Eaſt-India and South-Sea Bonds, no Security, that it would be practicable for the Maſters to give, would bear any Proportion to what was in their hands, when it ſhould be 50, 60, or 80 thouſand Pounds.

But if I could contrive to make all the Securities ſafe, and reduce the Caſh into a narrower Compaſs, by making Orders for putting out the Money of courſe, whenever, through neglect of the Parties, or otherwiſe, it ſhould happen to lie beyond ſuch a time; then a Security might be given by the Maſters to anſwer it.

But, as I told your Lordſhips, the Eaſt-India and South-Sea Bonds were too hard for me, till the matter was before the Committee of Council; and had the Maſters behaved themſelves, as I expected they would in the matter of their Accounts, I then intended to have laid my thoughts before the Council, and to have had their Authority and Sanction for putting them in Practice.

The other Propoſal ſuppoſed to be made to me, is ſpoke to by Mr. Kinaſton, and him only. And though he ſays all, or moſt of the Maſters, agreed to it, and thereupon he waited upon me about it; I do not find that any of the reſt know any thing of it. I obſerved, that neither Mr. Lightboun, nor Mr. Holford, both produced to this Article, are examined to this great matter, upon which the Maſters are ſaid to be agreed: Nor is any other Maſter called to it, tho' his Account of it is ſo very imperfect, and ſtands in need of being explained, as well as ſupported. As to the Securities, it reaches not all; the Bonds are left under the ſame difficulty as before: And as to the Caſh, he mentions no Sum or Value in which the Security was to be given.

But, my Lords, upon the whole, both from what Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Lightboun ſay, it is plain they were conſulting their own Intereſt, to keep the Office free from Incumbrances: and their Intereſt and mine (if I could have any in view) was the ſame: So that if it was their Propoſal, what ſhould hinder me from agreeing to it, but that I thought it inſufficient?

The third thing charged in this Article, is, That I did not take the Maſters Accounts, that is, Accounts of what Effects of the Suitors they had in their hands.

My Lords, It is true, this was proved to be done by my Lord Cowper at his entrance into his Office, both the firſt and ſecond time; it was done by another noble Lord, as has been proved at your Lordſhips Bar, once, and I believe it was done by that Lord oftner.

My Lords, Had I taken their Accounts too, I doubt in me it would not have had the ſame approbation, as it had in thoſe noble Lords. In my caſe it would have been asked, What care I had taken to be ſure that the Accounts delivered me by the Maſters were true? whether I had ſeen the Securities and Caſh? and what Satisfaction I had, that they were able to make them good? I ſhould, perhaps, have been told, that without that, the bare taking of an Account was of no uſe. And thoſe Enquiries were of ſuch a Nature, that if they were to be purſued effectually and with exactneſs, I own I had not ſtrength to go through them.

Nor did I think the taking Accounts from the Maſters neceſſary, becauſe I do ſtill take the Liberty to ſay, I was fully perſuaded, all the Maſters were good and honeſt Men; and if they were not, I do not ſee it would be of any uſe to take ſuch Accounts. For I would be glad to know, whether if I had taken an Account yearly from every Maſter, he would have been one half-penny richer or poorer, or at all more able to pay the Suitors?

Obj. It is ſaid indeed, that all theſe were wilful Omiſſions; and for fear the Price of Places ſhould be ſunk.

Reſp. But of that there is not the leaſt Proof. And the Circumſtances of the Caſe above ſet forth, I hope, give a much more natural account of it. And the Difficulty what to do in ſuch a caſe cannot be expreſſed by any words I can make uſe of ſo ſtrongly as by what has paſſed, ſince I order'd the Mony and Effects to be locked up, and lodged at the Bank, which were intended (and ſo the Order of the 17 December expreſſes it) to continue there only till the Affair could be more maturely conſidered, and a proper Proviſion made for the Security of the Suitors. Five Months are now elapſed, and nothing has been yet done: Tho' the Suitors ſuffer vaſt Inconvenience. For, in order to get any Mony from thence, there muſt be a Maſter and a Six-Clerk and two Directors, and a Certificate from the Regiſter, which occaſions ſo great an Expence, that, in the caſe of ſmall Sums, People do not think it worth their while to go for them to the Bank, but chooſe to be without their Intereſt rather than come at it through ſo many Difficulties. And if the Lords Commiſſioners, three of them, ſuch great Men, have found this Matter too difficult to ſettle to their Satisfaction; is it a Crime in me, that I was not able to diſcover a Method for making things eaſy and ſecure?

This Article is cloſed with the great Deficiencies that have happened with regard to the Effects of the Suitors.

But, my Lords, give me leave to ſay, if that Deficiency have not happened by any fault of mine; if thoſe Misfortunes, which have befallen ſome of the Maſters, be not owing to any Crime in me; no part of all that is charged in this Article, ought in Juſtice to lie at my door. As I have obſerved before, the great danger, which was at firſt apprehended and ſo often talked of by Mr. Lightboun, related only to the Securities, which the Maſters had in their hands; but that which hapned related to the Mony only. And tho' this Accident fell out, whilſt I had the Great Seal, yet it might as well have happened in my Predeceſſor's time, ſince nothing that I have done has given the leaſt occaſion to it.

But is there at laſt, any Deficiency made out to be in theſe Maſters, by which the Suitors are to be Sufferers?

Mr. Thompſon has been called as a Witneſs to prove theſe Deficiencies; but he has only ſhewn an Eſtimate of Borret's Deficiency, and that ſome of the preſent Maſters had not paid in their Ballances at ſuch a time; and how much the further Sums they were to pay amounted to.

But have the Suitors therefore loſt the Mony? No, my Lords, that does not appear; but on the contrary,

Mr. Conway, one of them, and whom they have themſelves produced as a Witneſs, has ſworn, that he has aſſigned an Eſtate ſufficient to pay all his Deficiency.

One of the Managers was pleaſed to own that he meant by Deficiencies, the Mony not yet paid in, nay the Mony not paid in at the time of making the Orders read; and did admit, that ſince thoſe Orders, there had been Satisfaction or Security for the moſt part.

But, my Lords, it is the Loſs of the Suitors, that alone can give ground to complain.

The Order concerning Mr. Tho. Bennet mentions his Deficiency to be only 7500 l and 1575 l repreſented by him to be in the hands of his Predeceſſor and me.

The latter Sum of 1575 l is brought into Court. And we have ſhewn that Mr. Hiccocks, his Predeceſſor, has petitioned, that he may pay in the 7500 l which is the whole Deficiency. And here appears a conſiderable Eſtate, of I think 750 l per ann. of Mr. Bennet's beſides.

Mr. Kinaſton's Deficiency is repreſented to have been before Chriſtmas 26,908 l 11 s 3 d ½; ariſing all, but what he ſaid was in my hands, and the hands of Mr. Rogers his Predeceſſor, only hence, that his Caſheer was dead inteſtate, and Adminiſtration diſputed; and ſo he could not come at the Mony.

There is paid in by me - - -	1575 l
There is offered to be paid by Mr. Rogers, and will be paid - - - - - - - - -	6000
A Debt from Mr. Delahay, which he ſwears a juſt one, is aſſigned - - - -	20,850
In all	28,425
And the Deficiency being computed at - - - - - -	26,908	11	3½

This exceeds it in the Sum of 1516

And he has an Eſtate of between 4 and 5 hundred Pounds a Year, and Timber of the Value of 2500 l to make good any part that may not be got from Delahay's Eſtate, tho' his Effects fects are in one of the Reports mentioned to have been then found to be in London alone above 20,000 l. And I have heard that the Lords Commiſſioners have ordered them to be brought into Chancery, and that 16 or 18 thouſand Pounds are actually brought in.

What is ſaid to be Mr. Borret's Deficiency, is the foot of an Account, which the Report that repreſents it, and Mr. Thompſon in his Evidence, ſay could not be properly taken.

And when fully examined into, there may come out to be no loſs there neither. Mr. Godfrey ſwears Mr. Borret to have been in good Circumſtances when admitted; to have an Eſtate; to have ſold an Office for, I think, 5000 l upon the occaſion of his coming in Maſter; to have lived with ſmall Expence, his Wife's Father maintaining his Family. And, as he enjoyed the Office four Years, there can be no great Deficiency, and probably will be none at all.

But, my Lords, it is extremely hard upon me, if by their producing an uncertain Eſtimate, I am to be obliged to ſtate the Accounts of one, who is dead, whoſe Adminiſtrator is Sollicitor againſt me, without their ſearching into his Papers and Affairs, and giving a perfect Account how they ſtand. It is exceeding hard, give me leave to ſay, that your Lordſhips ſhould be judging upon me as Criminal, from Facts of this kind, to which I am an intire Stranger, when there is nothing like proof, that there will be a farthing Deficiency at laſt, but only that the Mony is not yet come in.

I beg leave to obſerve one thing more, That the Maſters, that are now called the deficient Maſters, are not one of them in Cuſtody; though it is made an Article againſt me, that I did not commit Mr. Dormer, who was in Holland. Therefore, ſince they are at Liberty, it muſt be taken for granted, that the Lords Commiſſioners had good Reaſon not to commit them; and yet their Deficiency, which is not a Crime in them, ſufficient to juſtify the committing them; is to be made a Crime in me, ſufficient to ſupport a Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. Your Lordſhips ſee how far this ought to affect me; and I ſubmit, upon what I have ſaid, whether it can ſupport the Charge in this Article.

XIX. As to the 19th Article, which relates to what was done about taking the Accounts: It charges,

" That whereas his moſt ſacred Majeſty, out " of his Fatherly Goodneſs to his People, did in " or about the Month of November laſt, direct " an Enquiry to be made into the Accounts of " the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, " to the Intent that proper Methods might be " taken for the Security of the Suitors of the " ſaid Court; the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, being then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, in order to obſtruct the " ſame, and to prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry " into the State and Condition of the Offices " of the ſaid Maſters, in Breach of the ſeveral " great Truſts repoſed in him, did give Advice " and Encouragement to the ſaid Maſters to aſ- " ſiſt and ſupply each other with Mony and Ef- " fects, and did repreſent to the ſaid Maſters, " that it would be for their Honour and Service, " to appear able and ſufficient; and that if they " made a bold Stand now, it might prevent a " Parliamentary Enquiry, or to that Effect; and " did perſuade ſeveral of them to make falſe " Repreſentations of their Circumſtances to his " Majeſty, by adding a Subſcription to their re- " ſpective Accounts deliver'd to the ſaid Earl, to " be laid before his Majeſty, to the Effect follow- " ing (viz.) That they were able to anſwer the " Mony and Securities in their Hands, and were " willing to pay the ſame to ſuch Perſons as " were entitled thereunto, although the ſaid " Earl knew, or had good Reaſon to believe, that " ſeveral of the Maſters were not then able to " anſwer the Ballance of their Accounts, nor are " they yet able to ſatisfy or make good the " ſame; and when the ſaid Maſters were after- " wards required to produce the Caſh and Ef- " fects of the Suitors in their Hands, ſome of " the Maſters, according to ſuch Advice and " Encouragement given by the ſaid Earl, did " ſupply others of them with Caſh and Effects, " to make a falſe Shew and Appearance of their " Ability and Readineſs to anſwer the Ballance " of their Accounts.

My Lords, the two things, which are made the Heads of the Charge in this Article, relate to the Subſcriptions of ſome of the Maſters written under their Accounts; that they were able to make good the Ballances; and their afterwards producing Caſh, to make a falſe Shew and Appearance of their Ability. As to the firſt; I take it, that the material Part of the Charge is, that I perſuaded them to make falſe, Repreſentations of their Circumſtances by a Subſcription, which I knew, or had good reaſon to believe, was falſe.

As there is not the leaſt Proof offered that I knew or had reaſon to believe the Subſcription falſe, this Charge I think intirely falls to the Ground.

Upon the Proof attempted to be made, I think it appears, that when Mr. Holford brought in his Account purſuant to my Order, he (without my knowing any thing of it) had wrote a Subſcription at the End of it, to this Effect, " I " have all theſe Securities ſtanding in my Name, " as in this Account is ſpecify'd, and will pro- " cure Certificates from the proper Offices, " that I have and had them before this Account, " if your Lordſhip require it, and as to the " Mony, I am ready to give your Lordſhip Sa- " tisfaction to a Demonſtration, that I have it in " my Power to anſwer it to every Perſon, that " ſhall appear to be intitled to it, and who can " give me a legal Diſcharge."

They ſay, I read it, and ſpoke of it with Approbation.

There were only Part of the Maſters ready with their Accounts; and Mr. Lovibond was the next, that delivered me his, and he had wrote to the ſame Effect in Subſtance; only as to the Caſh, he wrote that he was ready to give Security.

My

My Lords, Every body knows that he was able to anſwer it; and he ſwears he had it ready, and was able to have paid it the next Day; and he appears to have lent 10,000 l. to a Brother Maſter on that Occaſion. I was therefore ſurprized to ſee him make uſe of an Expreſſion, which looked as if he were not able to pay the Money. And upon that it was, that he ſays, I recommended to him to make uſe of the ſame Expreſſion, as had already been uſed by Mr. Holford; and ſo accordingly he did.

Thomas Bennet had ſubſcribed, before he came, thus, " I have all the Securities ſtanding in my " Name as in the within Account are ſpecified, " as alſo the Tallies, Orders, and Bonds in my " Cuſtody;" but had ſaid nothing of the Money: He ſwears, that I ſaid, I wiſhed all would make uſe of the ſame Form as Mr. Holford had done: And that it would be for their Honour and Service to appear able and ſufficient. He ſays, that Mr. Lightboun, as I remember, asked what was the Meaning of bringing it before the Committee? and that I ſaid, it would be a Means to prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry; that I did not ask him whether he was able, but directed him to write; I ſuppoſe he means by the general Direction; for I do not apprehend he ſays, that I ſpoke it to him in particular: And it is not pretended, that he made the leaſt Scruple of ſigning it as true, or expreſſed any Backwardneſs in it; and he in Effect owns he did not. But he informs your Lordſhips how extremely tender he was, not to write any thing but what was ſtrictly true; and that therefore, in his Subſcription, he took Care to leave out the Words to a Demonſtration, which are in Mr. Holford's. And Mr. Holford's Subſcription running, " And as to the " Money, I am ready to give your Lordſhip Satis- " faction TO A DEMONSTRATION that I have " it in my Power to anſwer it to every Perſon that " ſhall appear to be intitled to it, &c." Mr. Bennet could not come quite up to this; but he ſubſcribes, " And as to the Money, I am ready to " give your Lordſhip Satisfaction, that I am able to " anſwer it to every Perſon that is intitled thereto." This therefore, that he has ſubcribed, is, I ſuppoſe, if he is to be credited, exactly true: And if ſo, I have not perſuaded him to make a falſe Subſcription.

Mr. Kinaſton ſays, it was recommended to them by me to make ſuch a Subſcription as Mr. Holford's; that I ſaid, it would look well to the Council, and prevent farther Enquiry or Parliamentary Enquiry, or ſome other Enquiry, he knows not which; ſo he comply'd. But, my Lords, his Subſcription is not what I recommended. Mr. Holford only undertakes to ſhew he had it in his Power to anſwer the Money, &c. that is, that he either had the Money, or Effects, which being diſpoſed of, would raiſe it. But Mr. Kinaſton goes farther, he ſays, I am ready to pay it to the Perſons intitled.

Mr. Lightboun heard nothing ſpoken of the Subſcription; he went away to finiſhh is Accounts, which were not compleat.

Mr. John Bennet was not there; but at his coming, being told what I had ſaid to the others, he, without Scruple, ſubſcribed, without my ſpeaking to him.

Mr. Edwards ſays he was able to pay it.

Mr. Lovibond was called laſt; but I before gave an Account what he ſaid.

So that of the ſix Maſters who made Subſcriptions, I ſpoke only to five.

Three of them have proved themſelves able; and I believe no body doubts it.

Mr. Thomas Bennet made no Objection, or Difficulty, and has been curious not to let his exceed the Truth.

Mr. Kinaſton, has voluntarily gone beyond what I deſired. And I make no Queſtion but he thought himſelf able to anſwer it, though I doubt his being ready.

But is there the leaſt Evidence offered, that I knew Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Thomas Bennet were not able, or had Reaſon to believe or ſuſpect it? No, on the contray, Mr. Lovibond, their own Witneſs, who is one of the Maſters, and converſant among them, told your Lordſhips upon his Oath, that by their Converſation he believed they were able to make good their Accounts.

In the mean time, your Lordſhips obſerve, that theſe deficient Maſters had all their Securities ready, and voluntarily ſubſcribed ſo to their Accounts, without my ſpeaking to them. In which Point Mr. Lightboun, under the laſt Article, thought there was the moſt Danger.

As to the Words, That it would be for their Honour or Service to appear able and ſufficient;

I will not be poſitive as to the Words, whether it were to appear able, &c. or to make appear that they were able, &c. In a fair Conſtruction, the Senſe of the firſt is the ſame as the latter.

When Mr. Holford ſubſcribes, That he is able to pay to every Perſon, who ſhall appear to be intitled; or, if I ſhould ſay, Mr. Thomas Bennet appears not ſo fair or able a Man, as I formerly thought him; does it import only a falſe Shew?

As for what is ſaid of preventing a Parliamentary Enquiry,

Mr. Thomas Bennet repreſents it to be ſpoke in Anſwer to the Queſtion, What was the Meaning of bringing it before the Committee? And ſays, my Anſwer was, That it would prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry.

If I ſaid it, the Reaſon is obvious, and the Thing innocent.

It is notorious, that the laſt Summer there was a great Clamour againſt Maſters in Chancery, which was heightned by ſome Diſputes they cauſed in the Court of Chancery; that it was generally believed, that it would come into Parliament; and I am perſuaded it would have come into Parliament ſomething ſooner, if the Committee of Council had not taken this Matter into Conſideration.

I am likewiſe perſuaded, that had the Maſters all been able to make good the Money in their Hands, and proved that they were ſo, and that they had behaved themſelves well; and that the Lords of the Committee, after finding their Accounts Right, had proceeded to adviſe proper Regulations, the Matter would never have come into Parliament with Reſpect to them, whatever it might as to me.

And as to them, I believe, they were not deſirous to have the Matter in Parliament, becauſe of the vaſt Trouble it muſt give them, had there been nothing elſe in it. And it was natural for me to think, that nothing would more tend to make them eaſy, in complying with what the Committee ſhould think fit, than by letting them know, that if it gave them Trouble in one reſpect, it would eaſe them more in another.

And ſo far I thought it for the King's Service, and my Duty, to haſten the Accounts before the Council, and to uſe all Means I could to have things carried on with Speed and Effect; that ſuch Members of Parliament, as had their Eyes on this Affair, might plainly ſee that proper Meaſures were effectually carrying on by the Lords; ſo that there would be no Occaſion to take up this Affair in Parliament, or for the Legiſlature to interpoſe.

But as to my own Share, I freely own I had not the leaſt Apprehenſion of what has ſince befallen me.

I was ſo far from obſtructing the taking theſe Accounts, that Mr. Holford has informed your Lordſhips, that when the firſt Order was ſuch, as would require a very long Time to be complied with, I preſſed them not to make uſe of that as an Excuſe for Delay, but to bring in an Account of their preſent Ballances, and to let the Lords know the Reaſon, and then to ask Time for more perfect Accounts, if ſuch ſhould be required; which were not.

As to their making a falſe Shew of Caſh purſuant to my Advice and Encouragement,

They have not offered a Word of Proof of any Thing ſaid or done by me, or by my Order, concerning any Part of that whole Affair; if they had, I am ſure, whatever had appeared to be done by me, would at the ſame Time have appeared not capable of the Conſtruction in the Article.

But inſtead of that they have given a confuſed uncertain Account of ſomething, that paſſed between Mr. Cottingham and the Maſters; but never called Mr. Cottingham to bring it Home to me, nor any way ſhewn that I knew any thing of it, either before or after. Nor do I really underſtand it at laſt. I do not apprehend that Mr. Cottingham adviſed them to furniſh one another with Money, but upon good Security; nor did they do it. Nor do I ſee, what harm it is, if a Maſter, having Occaſion for Money, borrows it of another Maſter, upon good Security.

The only Perſon that they ſeem to fix any Fraud upon, is Mr. Conway; and, which appears very odd, only by his own Evidence; and yet he ſeems to juſtify himſelf too.

But if not; there is no Proof, nor Ground of Suſpicion, that I was any way privy to it, or aſſiſting in it, or that I had any the leaſt Share whatſoever in it:

And therefore I am not Guilty.

XX, XXI. On the 20th and 21ſt nothing has been offered.

My Lords, I have now gone through all the ſeveral Articles, that have been endeavoured to be ſupported againſt me; and I think I may ſay as I did in the Beginning, that except thoſe relating to the Diſpoſal of Places, which are of another Kind and another Conſideration, all the reſt muſt, to be made criminal, turn upon that Aggravation in the Articles, from my inordinate, wicked, and corrupt Deſigns of procuring to myſelf exceſſive and exorbitant Gains and Profits by divers unjuſt and oppreſſive Practices after mentioned.

It is ſuch a corrupt Heart only can change Actions, that in themſelves are innocent, and ſome of them perhaps commendable, into ſo many Crimes.

And yet it is very extraordinary, and ſcarce poſſible to be conceived, but that if there had been ſuch a corrupt Heart, it muſt have broke out upon ſome other Occaſion of my Life. Not one inſtance of my whole Life has been yet produced to ſhew it.

Several of thoſe under me have been examined; ſeveral Officers immediately attendant on me, that received conſiderable Profits and Salaries, to the amount of Three or Four Thouſand Pounds per Annum, and more; If I had ſet my Heart upon Gain, a certain Profit might have been there yearly made, amongſt thoſe whom I had wholly at Mercy, and in private. But there has no Appearance been found of any thing of that Kind: And is it not more likely that I ſhould have laid hold of a certain Profit, than be laying Schemes for Advantages upon the uncertain Contingency of the Sales of Maſters Offices.?

The Value of ſuch an Expectation is a mere Trifle; and with Reſpect to the Probability of its happening, it was exceeding uncertain whether I ſhould have an Opportunity of putting in one ſingle Maſter.

Three Maſters have happened to dye in my Time; and two of thoſe in leſs than the Space of a Year: But I think not one in nine Years before.

My Lord Cowper admitted but one in the laſt Time of his being Chancellor, which was four Years; and that was upon a Surrender.

There are 24 Curſitors; only one has dyed in my Time: 30 Commiſſioners of Bankrupts; only one dyed in above ſix Years.

Surrenders of the Offices of Maſters are rarely till after 16 or 17 Years, ſometimes 30 or 40 Years Enjoyment.

My Life was very uncertain: The Office of Chancellor much more ſo.

Little therefore was to be hoped from the Profit to be made by Maſters Places.

My Lords, in the next Place, I apprehend, that it appears I did not take the Advantage I might have taken.

When the Time came for me to reap the Fruit of all my Contrivances, all thoſe Schemes and Stratagems, the Work of above three Years, (a great Space in the Time of a Chancellor) ſee, whether there be the leaſt Mark or Symptom of this impotent Deſire of Gain!

What I did, proves, beyond all Contradiction, that I never had any ſuch Views, as theſe they lay to my Charge.

I took not the Advantage I might have done; I took a leſs Sum, when a greater was offered; and Part of the Money was returned again to Mr. Elde and Mr. Thurſton. And when Mr. Thurſton's Money was returned, only for being more than it was expected to be, every thing was in the ſame State as when it was paid.

And poſſibly your Lordſhips will think, from ſome other Evidence given, that amaſſing a great Eſtate was never my View; and that rapacious and baſe Ways of getting Money are not conſiſtent with my Way of laying it out.

As this is a full Anſwer to the Charge of my Deſire of Gain; and the whole Malignity of all I am charged with ariſes from that ſuppoſed Principle of my Actions; without this, though there ſhould have been Imprudence, Indolence, too great great Confidence, perhaps Credulity, Irresolution, or any other Defect or Weakness, there has been nothing wicked.

And, if your Lordships are satisfied of this one Thing, I apprehend the Sting of this Impeachment is taken out.

My Lords, Having thus gone through all my Observations, it may possibly be expected I should close them with offering something in General. But I think it properer to forbear.

I am not conscious to my self, that it is necessary in this Case to apply to the Passions; which is a common Artifice to assist a weak Defence. If I have done any publick or private Good (of which last some Specimen has been laid before your Lordships) it will, I am confident, have its full Weight.

I submit my whole Life and Conduct to your Lordships Judgment; and rely entirely upon your Justice for my Acquittal.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I am not going to make any Observations upon this Speech; neither did I interrupt the Lord in making it. But one thing I am to say for Form Sake: We produced to your Lordships a Copy of a Letter writ from Mr. Lightboun to my Lord, he hath now read the Original Letter; I desire that the Original may be delivered into Court, that we may have the Perusal of it.

E. of Macclesfield. I believe the Gentleman is perfectly in the Right of it. It is here.

Friday May 21, 1725. The Tenth Day.

THE Lords being seated in their House, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence: As also the other Proclamation, That all Persons concerned were to take Notice, that Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now stood upon his Tryal, and they might come forth in order to make good the Charge.

Ld. Ch. Jus. King. Gentlemen of the House of Commons you may proceed.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, The Part assign'd to me in this Impeachment against the Earl of Macclesfield, is to reply to his Defence upon the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Articles.

Before I enter into the particular Examination of the Objections made against the Charge of the Commons contained in these Articles, and of the Matters alledged, either in Justification, or Excuse of the Lord Impeached; I shall take the Liberty of observing,

That your Lordships are now exercising a Power of Judicature, reserved in the original Frame of the English Constitution, for the Punishment of Offences of a publick Nature, which may affect the Nation; as well in Instances, where the Inferior Courts have no Power to punish the Crimes committed by the ordinary Rules of Justice; as in Cases within the Jurisdiction of the Courts of Westminster-Hall, where the Person offending is, by his Degree, raised above the Apprehension of Danger, from a Prosecution carried on in the more usual Course of Justice; and whose exalted Station requires the united Accusation of all the Commons of Great-Britain, by their Representatives in Parliament.

This High Jurisdiction may be exercised for the Preservation of the Rights of the Lords and Commons, against the Attempts of Powerful Evil Ministers, who depend upon the Favour of the Crown;

Or, it may be put in Execution for the Ease and Relief of a good Prince, whose Honour has been betray'd by a corrupt Servant; and yet, whose Clemency makes him unwilling to punish; so that it becomes necessary for his faithful Commons to take into their Care the prosecuting such an Offender.

Former Reigns have supply'd your Journals with many Examples of the first Kind.

The present Reign produces an Instance of the latter Sort, wherein the Commons bring before your Lordships in Judgment a Peer offending, with the greatest Ingratitude, against a most just, and most merciful Sovereign.

For, The King's Royal Munificence bestowed upon this Earl, in the most abundant Measure, could not exempt the Inferior Officers from his Exactions, nor protect the Suitors and their Properties in the King's own Court of Chancery.

The general Crime charged upon the Earl, in Five of these Articles, is Extortion by Colour of his Authority as Lord Chancellor.

The Offence alledged in the other two Articles, is gross and wilful Negligence in his Office, to the great Damage and Loss of the Suitors of the Court, but to his own private Gain and Advantage.

The particular Exactions are his taking One Hundred and Five Pounds from Mr. Thomas [illegible], for accepting the Resignation of the Office of Clerk of the Custodies in the Court of Chancery, in order to obtain a New Grant to Mr. Hugh Hamersley, and procuring the same to pass the Great Seal accordingly.

His exacting Fifteen Hundred Guineas from Mr. Kinaston, for the admitting him to be a Master of the Court of Chancery, upon the Resignation of Mr. Rogers.

His exacting the like Sum of Fifteen Hundred Guineas from Mr. Thomas Bennet, for the admitting him to be a Master of the same Court, upon the Surrender of Mr. Hiccocks.

His exacting the Sum of Five Thousand Guineas from Mr. Elde, for the admitting him to be a Master of the same Court, upon the Death of Mr. Fellowes.

His exacting the like Sum of Five Thousand Guineas from Mr. Thurston, for the admitting him to be a Master of the same Court, upon the Death of Mr. Borret.

The last Article relating to Mr. Thurston is charged with this Aggravation, That the former Master was Dead Insolvent, greatly indebted to the Suitors of the Court; and that the Earl did not secure a just Satisfaction to the Suitors.

And the Exaction of the One Hundred and Five Pounds from Mr. Thomas Bennet, is alledg'd to be done when the Earl was one of the Lords Justices.

These Misdemeanors, as well as all the other Offences, of which the Earl is now accused, were committed by him whilst he executed the Office of Lord Chancellor.

From whence the Earl and his Council take Occasion to make a Triumph upon the supposed Justice and Regularity of his Administration and Conduct, when he presided in the Court of King's Bench; because the Commons have not produced any Misbehaviour in the Execution of of that Office wherewith to furniſh out an Article againſt him.

This may be an Inſtance of the Lenity of the Commons, but it is no Proof of the Earl's Innocence; who beſt knowing his own Behaviour, declines to abide the Examination of his Actions during the ſix Years of his Continuance in the Office of Lord Chancellor;

But flies to a Sanctuary for Indemnity and Diſcharge; which ſhews, that the Earl eſteem'd himſelf more ſecure under Shelter, than upon a Juſtification of his Conduct.

And the Succeſs of the Commons, in the very ſtrong and full Evidence, which they have laid before your Lordſhips in Maintenance of thoſe Articles, upon which they have proceeded, leaves very little Reaſon to imagine that they would have fail'd in their Proof, if they had extended their Inquiry into his former Life, or had enter'd into the reſt of the Articles.

And after the ſtrict and long Examination of Witneſſes, which has entertain'd your Lordſhips for ſo many Days, I may venture to ſay, that the Conſiſtency and Uniformity of the Proof given in Support of the Accuſation of the Commons, upon ſo many different Heads, are ſufficient to convince all the World of the Neceſſity, which there was, for the Honour of the King, and the Welfare and Satisfaction of the Nation, to carry on the preſent Proſecution;

And I hope, have already fully ſatisfied your Lordſhips of the Truth and Juſtice of the Commons Impeachment.

But as there have been ſeveral Objections made on the Behalf of the Earl impeach'd, as well to the Foundation of the Charge it ſelf, and to the Event and Conſequence of it, as to the Sufficiency of the Evidence of the Facts alledged; it will be neceſſary for me to give an Anſwer to theſe Objections, and to maintain the Charge in theſe Reſpects; which I ſhall proceed to do by ſhewing, that the Impeachment is well founded, and that the Facts in the Articles before ſtated have been plainly and fully prov'd.

The Earl himſelf began with inſiſting, That his General Oath of Office has no Relation to the Offences charg'd; and that no Inference can be made to his Prejudice from the Tenor of that Oath.

But the Earl's Remembrance, or Explanation of his Oath, is very defective; he has ſet it out at large in his Anſwer, and thereby he ſwears, that He will well and truly ſerve the King and his People in the Office of Chancellor, and do Right after the Laws and Uſages of this Realm; which comprehends the Obſervation of every thing, which is Part of the Duty of, or incident to his Office,

And the avoiding of every illegal and unjuſt Action in the Execution of it.

And the Omiſſion of any Part of his Duty, or the Commiſſion of any Offence againſt the Duty of his Office, is a Breach of this Oath of Office, altho' the Particulars are not enumerated in the Oath; and the contrary Opinion will open a Door to the Commiſſion of all Manner of Injuſtice and Rapine by Civil Officers.

The Earl likewiſe relies upon it, That the whole Charge turns upon his wicked and corrupt Intent and Views alledg'd in the Introduction, which (as he ſays) have not been made appear;

But theſe will be apparent from the Proof of the ſeveral Facts charg'd; which, if they are unlawful and unwarrantable, and do tend to the raiſing Money by corrupt and extorſive Meaſures, will manifeſt that Intent, and prove it as ſtrongly as if he had declared his Deſigns in open Court; for ſuch Acts cannot be done with a good and honeſt Intention.

The main Objection againſt the Articles is, That there is no Matter of a Criminal Nature contained in the Money Articles; or if there is a Crime, yet that there is no Puniſhment annexed or incident to it, which your Lordſhips can now inflict upon the Earl, after he is removed from his Office.

In anſwer to which I ſhall inſiſt, That,

The Earl's ſelling theſe Offices, or diſpoſing of them for Money taken by him before the Admiſſion of the ſucceeding Officers in the Manner alledged and prov'd, is an Offence at the Common Law, and puniſhable by Fine and Impriſonment, upon Indictment or Information; as well, where the Money was taken for an Admiſſion upon a Reſignation, as upon a Death.

To make out this, it muſt be conſider'd, That

The King having the executive Power, or the Adminiſtration of Ordinary Juſtice, lodged in Him, is in Conſequence obliged to provide and appoint capable and ſufficient Officers, neceſſary for the due Execution of Juſtice, in his ſeveral Courts, for the Benefit of His Subjects; His Coronation Oath proves this.

And accordingly the Crown has always paid the Salaries or Fees of the Lord Chancellor, and other principal Officers of Juſtice, and alſo of many inferior Miniſters, out of the Royal Revenue; and other ſubordinate Miniſters were maintain'd by the chief Officer, to the End that the Subject ſhould not be expoſed to Exaction or Oppreſſion, under Pretence of any Demand of Fees or Reward by the Miniſters of publick Juſtice for the Execution of their Offices; which is the Source of all that Corruption, which at any Time ſprings up in the Courts of Juſtice.

The Antient Law of England was, that none having any Office concerning the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, ſhould take any Fee or Reward of any Subject for the doing of his Office, to the End he might be free and at Liberty to do Juſtice. Stat. Weſtm. 1. cap. 10. A. 3 Ed. 1. Co. 2. Inſt. 176, 209, 210. Co. 3. Inſt. 145, 147, 148.

And ſeveral Charters of former Kings, and Statutes declaratory of the Common Law in that Reſpect, have been made to inforce the due Obſervation thereof, as,

Stat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. I. c. 26. 20 Ed. III. c. 1.

My Lord Coke, 3 Inſt. 146. ſays, the 20 Ed. III. c. 1. is only a Commandment of the King; and that there is no Record of any ſuch Act in any Parliament Roll, and yet neceſſary to be printed, becauſe the 4th Chapter of this Parliament refers to the Pains contained in it. Co. 2. Inſt. 74, 176, 209, 210.

Yet, if it be only the King's Charter, it is a Declaration of the Common Law at that Time; but it is printed in Old Raſtal's Edition of Statutes, Fol. (89) and in all the reſt of the printed Statutes.

20 Ed. III. cap. 6. and more particularly the Act of 11 H. IV. Rot. Parl. Num. 28. by which it is enacted,

Item, That no Chancellor (this High Officer is mention'd in the firſt Place by Name) Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal, Counceller of the King, * ſworn of the King's Council, nor no other Officer, Judge, nor Miniſter of the King, receiving Fees or Wages of the King for their ſaid Offices or Services, take in no Manner in Time to come, any Manner of Gift or Brocage of any Perſon for doing their ſaid Offices and Services, upon Pain to anſwer to the King the Treble of what they ſo take, and to ſatisfy the Party, and to be puniſh'd at the King's Pleaſure, and ſhall be diſcharg'd from his Office, Service, and Council for ever, &c.

* N. B. The Printed Books have miſtaken this Word

This Statute is enter'd on the Parliament Roll of that Year, amongſt the Records in the Tower; it is not indeed enter'd on the Statute Roll: But the Parliament Roll is the Original, and is the Warrant for the Statute Roll, and is therefore of greater Authority.

Reſpectuatur per Dominum Prineipem & Conſilium.

For which Reaſon my Lord Coke ſays it was never printed in the Book of Statutes, of which he highly complains; and therefore has recited it at large, and cauſed it to be printed in his 3*d. Inſt.* Fol. 146. c. 68. of Bribery, Extortion, &c. and c. 101. of Judgements and Executions, Fol. 224, 225. which is one of the firſt Books, relating to the Crown Law, read by the Students of the Law, and was thus publiſhed by that great Man to impreſs an early Abhorrence of every thing which may tend to Exaction and Extortion; and muſt have often come under the Conſideration of the impeach'd Lord.

Theſe Statutes have indeed been opened, and alter'd by ſubſequent Statutes, as to ſeveral inferior Officers; and ſome ſmall Fees have been antiently allow'd, and permitted in particular Caſes; but it has been obſerv'd, that from ſuch indulgences many Oppreſſions of the People have enſued.

Co. 2. Inſt. 74, 209, 210.

But the Common Law, and the ſeveral Acts of Parliament before mention'd, do not only ſtill remain in Force, with reſpect to the Lord Chancellor, but have been confirm'd and inforced by other Statutes.

And the Great Charter of our Liberties, Magna Charta, c. 29. Co. 2. Inſt. 55, 56. does imply this, which according to my Lord Coke's Comment, Is ſpoken in the Perſon of the King, who in Law is preſent in his own Courts of Juſtice, and repeating theſe Words, which (ſays He) extend to the End, which is Juſtice, and to the Mean, whereby Juſtice may be attained, which is the Law; or, as it muſt be underſtood, the Adminiſtration of the Law by the Officers of Juſtice; unleſs it can be ſuppoſed, that the Statute provides againſt the leſſer Evil, but allows the greater Miſchief; that it prohibits the Sale of a particular Decree or Order, which may be right and juſt in it ſelf;

Nulli vendemus Juſtitiam aut Rectum;

But leaves the King's ſuperior Officer at Liberty to ſell the whole Body of the Suitors of the Court in the Groſs, to the Exaction and Oppreſſion of the under Officers, in the Fees which they ſhall demand againſt Law and Right.

So that if the Earl impeach'd had exemplified this Rule of my Lord Coke in the Court of Chancery, where he immediately repreſented the King's Royal Perſon; and once in a Term ſitting in Court between his Maſters, who paid for their Places out of the Suitor's Effects, had repeated to the Suitors this glorious Declaration,

Nulli Vendemus Juſtitiam;

He muſt have made a very inconſiſtent Figure, in the Opinion of the meaneſt Capacity.

It will then be plain, That as to ſuch Offices, which are in the immediate Gift and Diſpoſal of the Crown, they cannot in their own Nature be ſaleable, or diſpoſed of for Money; becauſe the King himſelf cannot be ſuppoſed to ſuffer them to be put to Sale.

And the Miniſters of the Crown, who have no immediate Right in the Office; and are only to execute and confirm the King's Pleaſure in the Diſpoſal of the Office, cannot ſell that which is not their own;

Nor ought, or can they lawfully take any Fee, or Reward, for accepting Reſignations, or making new Grants, or Admiſſions into Places, or for conferring inferior Offices, with which they are intruſted by Virtue of their own Office; which would be the taking Money, for the doing of their Office, contrary to the Law, and the before mentioned Statute.

But there is another very good Act of Parliament, which has been read at your Lordſhip's Table, and proves this Practice of ſelling ſuch Offices, to be an Offence at the Common Law, viz. the 12 Rich. II. c. 2. Intituled, None shall obtain Offices by Suit or for Reward.

Co. 3. Inſt. 145. 147, 148.

Item, It is accorded, that the Chancellor (by expreſs Name) Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal, Steward of the King's Houſe, the King's Chamberlain, Clerk of the Rolls; the Juſtices of the one Bench, and of the other; Barons of the Exchequer, and all other that ſhall be called to ordain, name, or make Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Eſcheators, Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, or any other Officer or Miniſter of the King, ſhall be firmly ſworn, That they ſhall not ordain, name, or make any ſuch Officers, nor other Officer or Miniſter of the King for any Gift or Brocage, Favour or Affection.

The Act proceeds farther in a different Form of Expreſſion, and to another Matter;

Nor, that none which purſueth by him, or any other, privily or openly, to be in any manner of Office, ſhall be put in the ſame Office, or any other; But that they make all ſuch Officers and Miniſters of the beſt and moſt lawful Men.

The Earl apprehended the Streſs of this Statute, and how much it preſſed upon him; and therefore has endeavour'd to diſtinguiſh himſelf, not only out of the Oath, but out of the intire Act, by objecting, that this Statute, and the Oath therein directed, only extend to ſuch Nominations as are made in the Nature of Elections, by an Aſſembly of all theſe great Officers and Miniſters, when they are called together for that End; which Word (together) is of his own inſerting, to ſerve his Purpoſe; as in the Caſe of Sheriffs, and not to their ſingle and ſeparate Nomination of Officers, in Right of their reſpective Offices, by themſelves.

This is the Earl's own Objection, and not of his Councel, and will (if allow'd) expound away the whole Act, in all the expreſs Inſtances mentioned in the Statute, ſave one;

For there is but one Officer named in the Act, who is nominated thus in an Aſſembly or publick Meeting, which is Sheriff; and all the reſt are ordain'd, and made by the great Officers ſeparately, in their own Right; as Juſtices of Peace by the Chancellor; and Eſcheators, Cuſtomers, and Comptrollers by the Lord Treaſurer.

And the reſt of the Words of the Act, viz. Or any other Officer or Miniſter of the King, will be totally expunged by this nice Interpretation.

But the Words plainly mean, that every one of theſe Officers, who by virtue of his Office ſhall be call'd (not call'd together) by Command of the Crown, or in Execution of his Office, to name or make any inferior Officer, ſhall be ſworn; for they never are all call'd together, unleſs on the Nomination of Sheriffs.

The Earl, for more Security, and for the ſake of better Company, objects farther; That the Argument from this Act and the Oath will go too far; for then they are ſworn not to preſer any who make Suit or Application for any Office.

But that is no Part of the Oath; and they are only ſworn ſo far as the Statute extends it, which is to the former Part; and this Clauſe in the Concluſion of the Act is only directory, and introduces a new Inſtruction to the great Officers, but does not carry on the Purport of the Oath; for the Words are, It is Accorded, that the Chancellor &c. (in the Affirmative) ſhall be ſworn, that they ſhall not name, &c. and the Sentence which follows is a new Clauſe, beginning with a Negative, viz. Nor, that none which purſueth, &c. ſhall be put into any Office, &c. and refers to the Perſon applying, and not to the Officer appointing.

So that this latter Part of the Statute ought to be obſerv'd; but the Officer is not required to be ſworn to the Obſervation of it.

This Statute takes it for granted, that the contrary Practice of naming ſubordinate Officers for Gift or Brokage was unlawful before at the Common Law; ſince it does not create or enact it to be an Offence, but provides an additional Conſtraint or Obligation upon the ſuperior Officer by an Oath, not to commit the Offence; and it ſtill remains an Offence at the Common Law, and don't depend on that Statute, but is a great Offence, altho' the Oath be not taken.

This Statute contains the moſt extenſive and general Words, and mentions Officers of many Sorts, and different Degrees, as well high, as low, relating to the Peace, publick Juſtice, and the Revenue; and that no Officer, of any Kind whatſoever, in the King's Service, nam'd or ordain'd by the great Officers of State, might eſcape or be omitted, the Act concludes the Deſcription with theſe Words; Or any other Officer or Miniſter of the King;

And therein manifeſtly comprehends both theſe Offices of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, and of Maſters in Chancery.

For this Statute refers to Officers who are only nam'd or recommended to the King by the Chancellor, &c. and yet are conſtituted by the King's Letters Patents, as Juſtices of the Peace, and Sheriffs, whereby the uſurped Fee for Recommendation is declared illegal; and alſo to other Officers, who are immediately conſtituted and appointed by the chief Officers, by Authority deriv'd from the King, and by virtue of the Truſt in them repoſed for the King's Honour and Service, and for the Benefit of his People, as Eſcheators and others; and thereby the other pretended Fee for Nomination is condemned.

Sheriffs and Eſcheators named in the Act, are Officers relating to the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice; and Eſcheators more eſpecially, to Inquiſitions touching Idiots and Lunaticks, and the Commiſſions and Proceedings thereon; which is the chief Part of the Truſt and Office granted by the Letters Patents to Mr. Hamerſley, as Clerk of the Cuſtodies, and which was reſigned by Mr. Thomas Bennet; and it will appear by the Patent it ſelf, that this Office in the Court of Chancery, has a very near Relation to the Office of Eſcheator; and the Grant very fully deſcribes the Nature and Antiquity of this Office.

And as to the Nature and Antiquity of the Offices of Maſters in Chanſery, they appear fully from the Oath taken by every Maſter upon his Admiſſion, which is of the ſame Import and Effect, in many things, with the Oath taken by the Lord Chancellor himſelf, viz.

To ſerve the King and his People, and to counſel the things that toucheth the King; to prevent the Diſheritance of the King, or Fraud to his People; and not to diſcloſe the Counſel which he ſhall give give touching the King; and to redreſs Damage or Fraud in the keeping the Great Seal, and to adviſe the Chancellor thereof, &c.

And alſo from the ancient Commiſſions produced and read, giving the Maſters Authority, by the Name and Deſcription of Maſters of the Court, to hear Cauſes, and make Decrees (in like Manner as the Judges Aſſiſtants) in the Abſence of the Chancellor; and to puniſh Contempts, and to do other like Acts of Juriſdiction; and likewiſe from the actual Exerciſe of their Offices in making Reports, and Taxation of Coſts, and the Manner thereof prov'd by ſome of the Maſters (and not contradicted) as that a Subpœna iſſues immediately upon the Maſter's Taxation of Coſts, without any Order or Confirmation of the Lord Chancellor; that their Reports in other Inſtances are turn'd into Decrees of Court, if not alter'd upon Exceptions, and from many Authorities in the Law Books.

By all which it is evident, that the Offices of Maſters in Chancery are judicial Offices, or Offices which partake of a judicial Authority and Nature; and do touch and concern the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in that Court; and that the Maſters are aſſociated for that Purpoſe to the Lord Chancellor, as alledged in the Articles.

But upon this Occaſion it will be proper to recite more particularly the Authority of the Statute of

A. 13. Edri. 1. call'd Weſtm. 2. cap. 24. Et quotieſcunque de cætero evenerit in Cancellaria, quod in uno caſu reperitur breve, & in conſimili caſu cadente ſub eodem jure, & ſimili indigente Remedio non reperitur; concordent Clerici de Cancellaria in brevi faciendo, vel atterminent querentes in proximum Parliamentum, &c. & de conſenſu juriſperitorum fiat breve, ne contingat de cætero quod curia Domini Regis deficiat conquerentibus in Juſtitia perquirenda.

Co. 2. Inſt. 405, 407. Thoſe here called Clerici, were at this Time, and before, called Magiſtri Cancellariæ, and were aſſociated to the Lord Chancellor; of whom Fleta ſaith, Cui aſſocientur Clerici honeſti & circumſpecti, Domino Regi Jurati, qui in legibus & conſuetudinibus Anglicanis notitiam habeant pleniorem, quorum Officium ſit ſupplicationes & querelas conquerentium Audire & Examinare, & eis ſuper qualitatibus Injuriarum oſtenſarum debitum Remedium exhibere per brevia Regis.

The granting and iſſuing the Writ, or firſt Proceſs, upon the Prayer of the Plaintiff, or Party proſecuting, is the firſt judicial Act of the Court, upon the Commencement of a Suit.

And this proves ſtrongly, that the King by his Royal Office, confirm'd by this Act of Parliament, did at his own Expence, and not at the Charge of the Suitor, provide theſe Clerks or Maſters, to the End, that no Subject who had a Right, ſhould be without a Remedy in the King's Courts;

Ne curia Domini Regis deficiat conquerentibus in Juſtitia perquirenda.

And the Nomination of theſe Maſters is only intruſted with the Lord Chancellor, as repreſenting the King, and for the Relief of the Subject.

13. Edri. 1. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 24, 50. Co. 2. Inſt. 407, 486. Co. 1. Inſt. 54. b. John Webb's Caſe 8 Co. 48, 49. Co. 3. Inſt. 82.

So that it is a Breach of his Truſt in the Lord Chancellor, to confer any of theſe Offices for Gift or Brocage, or to name and appoint unfit and inſufficient Perſons; ſince it is the Duty of his High Office to provide a Supply of proper Officers to carry on the due Execution of Juſtice in that Court.

But it is ſaid, hat it Thas not been conſtantly uſed to put all the Maſters into Commiſſion, and that in the Commiſſion 9. Oct. 4. Ed. VI. four of the Maſters only were in Commiſſion; and when they are in Commiſſion, that they have no Authority to act without the Preſence of the Maſter of the Rolls, or one of the Judges; and therefore theſe Commiſſions did not give them a judicial Authority.

Theſe Commiſſions, as well as the Office of a Maſter, ſubſiſting ſo anciently, ſhew, that They were to be taken Notice of, and comprehended within the Statutes made to prevent the Sale of Offices of Juſtice; and of late Times they have all been put into the Commiſſion, as appears by the late Commiſſions granted to the preſent Maſters, ſince the Earl had the Cuſtody of the Great Seal, and produced at the Table; and (without entring into the Diſpute between the Maſter of the Rolls, and the Maſters in Chancery, touching Juriſdiction, wherein the Earl, in his Defence, has declared, he thought the Maſters were in the Right) the Judges themſelves in theſe Commiſſions are only authoriſed to hear Cauſes, and make Decrees, with the Preſence and Concurrence of two Maſters; ſo that the Authority under this Commiſſion is not leſs of a judicial Nature, from the Number of Perſons neceſſary to make a Court; no more than it can be argued from the ſame Reaſon, that the Judges in that Commiſſion are not judicial Officers, becauſe they cannot make a Decree without two Maſters.

And altho' the Commiſſion is not properly incident to the Office of Maſter, as annexed thereto; yet as it has always attended upon, and accompanied the Office, it proves, that the Maſters from the firſt iſſuing theſe Commiſſions, have been always inveſted with a general judicial Power, if they had not enjoy'd ſuch Authority before.

But it is not neceſſary to rely intirely upon that Point; for if theſe Offices were only Miniſterial, yet they concern the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the Court of Chancery, and, as ſuch, are under the Regulation of the like Offices at the Common Law, and are fully within the Deſcription of the Statutes of 12 Ric. II. and 5 and 6 Ed. VI. And this,

According to the Earl's Opinion, when he endeavour'd to terrify the Maſters to contribute to Maſter Dormer's Deficiency.

And as the Earl impeach'd, in Right of his Office of Lord Chancellor, was only intruſted with the Nomination of the Maſters, for the Service of the King, and for the common Benefit of all the King's Subjects; theſe Offices are no more ſaleable, or to be diſpoſed of for Money, than if they had remain'd in the immediate Gift of the Crown, by Grant under the Great Seal.

It was objected, that Maſters in Chancery are not expreſly mentioned in the Act of 12 Ric. II. and that the Statute is a Penal Law, and ought to be conſtrued ſtrictly, and ought not to be extended by Equity to theſe Officers.

But the conſtant Rule of Expoſition of Statutes of this Nature contradicts that Aſſertion; for,

Statutes made for the Furtherance and Advancement of Juſtice, for the Suppreſſion of Extortion and Oppreſſion, which (ſays the Book) are horrible and odious Crimes, ſhall have a benign and favourable Interpretation.

Beawſage's Caſe, 10 Co. 101, 102. Twine's Caſe, 3 Co. 82. Gooch's Caſe, 5 Co. 60. Booth's Caſe, 5 Co. 77. Powlter's Caſe, 11 Co. 34.

And upon this Occaſion permit me to repeat the Words of that Great Man, the Lord Coke:

Beawſage's Caſe, 10 Co. 101, 102. Extortion is no other than Robbery, but is more odious; for Robbery is open, and has always the Appearance of Vice; but Extortion puts on the Viſage of Truth, and is more difficult to be try'd and diſcern'd, and is for the moſt Part accompanied with the damnable Vice of Perjury in the breaking that Oath which the Officer took when he was admitted to his Office;

Co. 3. Inſt. 149.

Which proves the Import and Effect of the general and uſual Words in an Oath of Office.

And here I can't help taking Notice of the Attempt of the Earl Impeach'd, by his own croſs Examination of Mr. Eyres, the Officer of the Exchequer, and the Queſtions propoſed by himſelf relating to the Manner of his being ſworn purſuant to the Statute of 12 Ric. II. viz. The Earl ask'd him,

What was it that you did read? Did I ſay any thing? Or what did I do? Or to that Effect;

The Officer anſwers, I read over the Statute out of the Exchequer Book in Old French; and after I had read it, I carried the Bible to the Lord Chancellor, &c. who, at the Concluſion, kiſs'd the Book, but he ſaid or repeated nothing. But this has been the antient Form, which I have obſerv'd for forty Years, and I believe has been always uſed.

In this Inſtance, your Lordſhips ſaw an Endeavour of the late Supreme Officer of Juſtice to explain away, or turn to Ridicule, the ſtricteſt and moſt ſolemn Tie and Obligation upon his Conſcience and Honour, impoſed by Authority of Parliament for the preventing Corruption; whereby the Earl did then (tho' ſince upon the Obſervation made by the World of ſuch his Behaviour, he has a little recollected) ſhew, that his calling God to Witneſs to his Promiſe for the Obſervation of an Act of Parliament made againſt that Vice, deſerv'd to be as little conſider'd by him, and to have as little Influence upon his Mind,

As Oaths taken by Traders at a certain Place, for their better Accommodation in carrying on a prohibited or fraudulent Traffick.

This is a full Explanation of his Reſerve in an equivocal Anſwer, where he ſays, That when he took the uſual Oath of Office, he at the ſame Time took the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, but no Oath of Office beſides that above ſet forth.

Altho' he could not but underſtand the Meaning of the Introduction to the Articles, alledging, That he did take ſuch other Oaths as have been accuſtomed; and could not but remember his repeated Obſervations of the Ceremony, at leaſt, which he had annually practiſed under this Statute.

But the Earl's Councel have made it neceſſary to enter farther into this Tranſaction, by their inſiſting, that here was no Formal Oath preſcrib'd or taken, no Entry or Regiſtry kept of it; and that the reading over the Statute is meerly an Admonition or Exhortation by the Officer to the whole Aſſembly.

And the Earl has inſiſted, That it is not an Oath of Office, becauſe an Oath of Office (as he expreſs'd it) is taken once for all, but this is repeated Annually; and if it is an Oath of Office, yet it is not particularly charged in the Articles, nor referr'd to in any Manner, becauſe the Articles ſuppoſe it to be taken at the Time of his coming into the Office, which was in May 1718. and this Oath, at the ſooneſt, could not be taken by him till the November following.

To this I anſwer, That the Manner of adminiſtring this Oath is in the moſt ſolemn and ſignificant Form poſſible; for the repeating an Oath briefly to obſerve the Statute in all things, or containing a ſhort Abſtract of the Subſtance of it, would not be near ſo explicite and directory, as the reading over aloud, by a proper Officer of the Court of Exchequer, the Act of Parliament it ſelf, the Chancellor at the End Kiſſing the Bible; an Exhortation, which ought to make the deepeſt Impreſſion upon the Conſcience of a righteous Magiſtrate, when confirm'd by the Sanction of a Promiſſory Oath.

And to ſay, that it is no Oath of Office, becauſe he repeated it Annually, is to contradict the Act it ſelf, which enjoins him to take it as Chancellor, and in the actual Execution of his Office; and the Repetition of it Annually, upon this great Occaſion of nominating Sheriffs, demonſtrates the Opinion of our Anceſtors of the Importance and Conſequence of the Obſervation of it, for the Service of the King, and the Benefit of His Subjects; becauſe there can be no other Time more memorable, or more likely to engage Attention to it, than in ſo publick an Aſſembly proceeding to appoint the Sheriffs of the ſeveral Counties of the Kingdom, upon whoſe Power, Fidelity, and Juſtice in the Execution of their Offices, not only the Properties, Liberties and Lives of the Subjects of this Kingdom ſo much depend, but even the Security of His Majeſty's Perſon in any Time of Danger; and the very Being of the Houſe of Commons, upon the juſt and fair Returns which ought to be made by Sheriffs, upon the Election of Members to ſerve in Parliament.

Can this Statute then be treated and called obſolete, which is thus publickly proclaim'd every Year, to enforce the more exact Obſervation of it?

And to ſay, That the Articles are confin'd to ſuch Oaths of Office, as were taken by him on his firſt Appointment, is an equivocal Interpretation peculiar to the Anſwer; for the Articles refer generally to all ſuch Oaths which have been accuſtomed to be taken by the Lord Chancellor by reaſon of his Office. And this Oath ought to have been taken by him upon his firſt Appointment, if the Uſage of adminiſtring it at this Annual Seaſon had not been an Excuſe for his poſtponing it to that Time; and from that Uſage it has follow'd, that this Oath is not taken by any of the Officers at any other Time; but it was the Earl's Duty to obſerve this good and wholſome Law, as well before his taking this Oath, as afterwards.

And

And the Earl could not have forgotten this his ſolemn Engagement without Deſign; it was for his Intereſt not to mention it; and he might flatter himſelf, that the Managers would not have taken notice of it.

And as to the Difference in the Form of adminiſtring this Oath from the common Method, it is not material; for the uſual Form is not eſſential to the Oath itſelf, it being ſufficient that there is a calling Almighty God to be a Witneſs of the Truth of the Earl's Promiſe, by his touching the Holy Scripture.

Co. 3 Inſt. 164, 165.

But whether the Oath be conſtantly or uſually taken in Practice, or not, it will not alter the Law; and the Crime of ſelling theſe Offices for Gift and Brokage ſtill remains, notwithſtanding the Neglect of this additional Obligation to refrain from the Commiſſion of it.

The Objections made by the Earl and his Council upon this Head, have occaſioned this Digreſſion.

The next Part of the Earl's Defence is a direct Juſtification of the Fact of which he is accuſed; and, not contented to leave it to his Council (for whoſe Excuſe it might have been ſaid, that they were willing to try every thing) the Earl himſelf has inſiſted upon it, that his taking theſe Sums of Money is lawful; becauſe, as Lord Chancellor, he had a Right of Recommendation of Mr. Hamerſly, as an Officer appointed by Patent under the Great Seal, and alſo the Right of Nomination and Admiſſion of the Maſters, ſolely in himſelf; and a Man may diſpoſe of and diſpenſe his own Favour upon what Terms he pleaſes; and Officers may give Money for their Places, and yet be good Officers, as it is ſuggeſted.

But ſome Inſtances of a very extraordinary Nature were cited out of the Hiſtory of the Exchequer, to prove that Chancellors, Judges, and other Officers of Truſt, had purchaſed their Places of King Stephen and King John; viz. That Richard Fitz Alured gave King Stephen fifteen Marks to hear Pleas; and Walter de Gray gave King John five thouſand Pounds to have the King's Chancery for Life; and other Officers there named.

Madox's Hiſt. of the Exchequ. 43. 743. He ſays it may ſeem ſtrange, and excuſes it.

Mr. Madox, the Collector and Publiſher of this Hiſtory of the Exchequer, 43, 44, mentioning theſe Inſtances, ſays, That in the Time of King Stephen, Geoffrey the Chancellor fined in three thouſand and ſix Pounds and a Mark for the King's Seal. This I underſtand to be a Fine then lately made with the King for the Office of Chancellor, or to have the keeping of the King's Seal. But at the ſame time Mr. Madox the Publiſher makes this honeſt Reflection upon his Precedents:

Which Precedent, ſays he, may juſtly ſeem ſtrange to us at this Day; but it ſeemeth that in thoſe times things of the like kind with this were ſometimes done. Which Obſervation the Council, or the Earl himſelf, were not pleaſed to repeat.

And ſome Inſtances were cited out of the Roman Law, where Part of the Revenue of the Emperors did ariſe out of Perquiſites of this Kind; from whence it was inferr'd, that the taking theſe Sums for Sale of Offices, was not againſt Natural Juſtice.

But theſe are of no Authority in this Kingdom, when they are repugnant to the Law of the Land, and have never been receiv'd; and the Common Law of England muſt be the Rule of Juſtice in this Caſe.

And Mr. Dupper, the Earl's late Under Secretary of the Bankrupts, was produced, to prove by his Opinion and Obſervation, that no Office whatſoever paſſing by Grant under the Great Seal ought to be ſurrender'd or granted without an Acknowledgment (as he call'd it) to the Chancellor or Keeper; and that he had formerly communicated theſe his Thoughts to the Earl and his Secretary Mr. Cottingham.

And your Lordſhips, upon Recollection of the Evidence, will find the Uſe and Improvement they were pleaſed to make of this Advice, in the Caſe of Mr. Thomas Bennet's Surrender.

But in Anſwer thereto, it appeared upon the Evidence in regard to Mr. Hamerſly's Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, that there being no Salary annexed to the Place, it did belong to the Secretary of State to recommend or to obtain the Sign Manual; ſo that the Earl's Deſire of Gain in this Inſtance carry'd him beyond the Limits of his own Office, where he had no Right of Recommendation, to raiſe the poor low Sum of One hundred and five Pounds, at the Time when he was One of the Regents; and thus he join'd his Share of the Royal Authority to his Power of Lord Chancellor, in order to get and ſecure to his own private Uſe ſo conſiderable a Sum as One hundred and five Pounds from an exhauſted Maſter! a ſtrong Evidence of his corrupt Intent and Views.

This ſingle Exaction overturns the whole Fabrick of Merit, ſuppoſed to be raiſed by the few ſcatter'd Inſtances of Charity, which he has been pleaſed to divulge in Evidence.

But if the Authorities cited for the Earl to this Purpoſe prove any thing, they prove too much; that the Offices of the Judges in the Supream Courts of Juſtice were lawfully to be bought and ſold at the Common Law, before the Act 5 Ed. 6. which is an Opinion that the Earl himſelf, in his Anſwer, did not think convenient to diſcloſe or inſiſt upon; and it is going a long way back for an Example to prove the Lawfulneſs of an Action, which he could not find without the Aſſiſtance of an Antiquary.

He might have brought more recent Inſtances from Countries, where unlimited Power does prevail, and where Juſtice itſelf, and the Places in which it is to be diſpenſed, are not to be attained without a Bribe.

But it ſeems as if the Lord impeached had an early Inclination to look out for a Precedent, to give him a Countenance in ſuch like Practices; yet he found none publiſh'd to the World, except in the Reigns of two Princes, whoſe arbitrary Behaviour produced that memorable Law, the Great Charter of our Liberties, firſt paſs'd in the Form of a Charter ann' 17 Johan', and confirm'd ann' 9 Hen' 3. wherein it was at that time found neceſſary to declare by a Law, Nulli vendemus Juſtitiam aut Rectum. Magna Charta, cap. 29. Co. 2. Inſt. 55.

From which Declaration of the Crown it neceſſarily follows, that the Adminiſtration and Execution of Diſtributive Juſtice to a free People, are not to be eſteem'd the Property or Eſtate of a Great Officer, to be raiſed or encreaſed by his Sale of the ſubordinate Offices of Juſtice; but are the great Prerogatives of an Engliſh Prince, to be exerciſed freely for the Safety and Eaſe of the Subject, without introducing Expence and Charge upon the People in their Application for Juſtice and Right.

And when a Doctrine of this dangerous and deſtructive Nature to the Rights and Liberties of the whole Nation, as it expoſes their only Security to Sale for Money, is thus avowedly and openly juſtified and inſiſted upon at your Lordſhips Bar, by a Peer of your Houſe, who has born the high Office of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain in the firſt Reign under the Act of Settlement of the Crown: Your Lordſhips will take the beſt Meaſures to render the Subjects ſecure in their Expectation of Juſtice, by a ſuitable and publick Mark of your Deteſtation of ſo licentious an Opinion; and thereby convince the Nation, that even the meer Suggeſtion of ſuch a corrupt Principle is an undeſerv'd Reproach, and highly injurious to his Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

Yet if it ſhould be ſuppoſed by way of Argument (which has not been proved, and therefore cannot be admitted) that the Sale of theſe Offices has been of late tolerated, for the greater Increaſe of the Perquiſites of the firſt Officer of the Crown in the principal Court of Juſtice; yet the Earl's raiſing and receiving theſe exorbitant Sums above double to any Inſtance before his own Time, which he has made appear, upon a Pretence that the Buſineſs of the Court of Chancery was very much advanc'd during his Reſidence there, will be as criminal, as if he had put the Offices to Auction, when no Sum or Fee had ever been taken or heard of.

And in his Method of Practice there can be no Diſtinction between a Preſent and a Price; for he made the moſt always of his Share or Claim in the Office. When he was only to admit upon a Surrender, he took fifteen Hundred Guineas for his Good Will and Approbation meerly; and when he admitted upon a Death, he took five thouſand Guineas at the leaſt, altho' the Office was greatly in Debt; as in Borret's Caſe, where the Suitors will loſe upwards of twelve thouſand Pounds of their Effects, by the loweſt Computation.

As for the ſmall antient Fees which have been paid to the Great Seal for Time immemorial, upon the ſealing every Patent, theſe are out of the preſent Queſtion; and where Uſage beyond Time of Memory has allow'd the Receipt of theſe little Sums, it will be preſum'd (if there was Occaſion for it) that ſome Act of Parliament had paſs'd to make it lawful.

And when it is ſaid, that a good Officer may give Money for his Place, and may reſiſt the Temptation of Extortion; it is what the Law of England would not truſt to human Frailty; and if all the Actions and Behaviour of the beſt of the Maſters, with reſpect to their Fees, their Manner of Proceeding upon References, and their diſpoſing and trafficking with the Money of the Suitors, were to be enquired into more particularly, there can be no doubt, from what has appeared in Evidence upon this Tryal, but that the Temptation and Inclination to Profit, towards reimburſing themſelves the Money advanced to the Earl, and the preceding Maſter, have overcome their moſt ſteady Reſolutions to Virtue and Self-denial.

As to the citing particular Caſes, wherein the Sale of Offices Judicial, or of the like ſort with thoſe in Queſtion, have been determin'd to be illegal at Common Law, I apprehend it is not neceſſary; for that the Reaſon of the Common Law, and the Purport of the ſeveral Statutes mention'd, do fully and ſufficiently maintain the Validity of the Articles in that reſpect.

And the Managers might more properly call upon the Earl and his Council for Authorities or Judgments to the contrary.

But Matters of a corrupt Nature are always privately tranſacted, and no Witneſſes, or at moſt very rarely, are to be produced beſides the Parties concern'd.

And if the Earl will produce any Inſtance in the Books, where ſuch a Tranſaction has been mention'd, I may engage to ſhew him at the ſame time, that it has been holden illegal.

The Authority already cited by a Learned Manager is expreſs:

Stockwith cont' North, Moore 781. North was fined in the Star-Chamber, for that he being Sheriff of the County of Nottingham did take Money for the Goalerſhip and the Bailiwick for his Year; and at firſt he gave them to his Servants, who ſold them, but himſelf received the Money; and this was adjudged to be a letting to Farm of his County, contrary to the Statute of 4 Hen. 4. cap. 5. Yet there note, ſays the Reporter, that the Statute itſelf gives a Penalty certain and pecuniary, and it is malum prohibitum, non in ſe. But the Court held, that in as much as great Corruption enſues from the Greedineſs of the Officers, and they are inforced thereto by the Prices which they give for Things which ought not to be ſold, that this ſetting of Offices to Farm and Sale, is malum in ſe, and finable. Noy 102.

But the Earl objected, that this Opinion is extrajudicial; and the Court were miſtaken in one part, when they ſay, that the Statute 4 Hen' 4. did inflict a Penalty; whereas it did not, but only prohibited the letting to Farm the Bailiwick, which was lawful before, and therefore properly finable, as a Breach of the Act.

In Anſwer to which, it is plain upon Peruſal of the Book, that that Part relating to the Act 4 H. 4. impoſing a Penalty, is only the Note of the Council, or Reporter, who took that particular Offence to be only malum prohibitum; and whether the Court did impoſe that Fine by Force of the Statute, or as warranted by the Common Law, it will not weaken the Authority; becauſe the Court expreſly declare it to be their Opinion, that the ſelling of the Office of Goaler was malum in ſe, and finable; which ſhew'd the Judgment of the Court on that part of the Queſtion; ſo that there is no Miſtake to be imputed to the Court.

And my Lord Coke, in his 3 Inſt. fol. 146. cap. 68. of Bribery and Extortion, and fol. 224 & 225. cap. 101. of Judgments and Execution, deſcribes theſe Crimes as Offences at the Common Law, and puts his Examples accordingly, which may be there conſulted.

So in the Caſe of Smith and Mall, 2 Rolls, Rep. 263. and Linley's Caſe, Hutton. 70. where it is holden, That if any Judge or Officer takes more than the uſual Fees, he is puniſhable by Indictment at the Common Law. Which neceſſarily implies, that they are puniſhable at the Common Law, for taking Money where no Fee at all is due.

The ſtrict Definition of Extortion is, When any Perſon Colore Officij extorquet Feodum non debitum, pluſquam debitum, aut antequam debitum. Hutton. 52, 53. Co. 3. Inſt. 149, 150. Beawfage's Caſe, 10 Co. 101, 102. Dive and Maningham, Plowden, 68. a. Co. 1. Inſt. 368. b. Sir John Bingley's Caſe, Poph. 149. Rex & Gover, 1 Sid. 91.

But largely, Extortion is taken for any Oppreſſion by extort Power, or by Colour or Pretence of Right. Co. 1. Inſt. 368. b.

But it is urged by the Earl and his Council, that it appears from the Statute 5 & 6 E. 6. that the the buying or selling of these Offices was lawful at the Common Law, and is not prohibited by the Statute 12 Rich. II. and that the Statute of E. VI. neither declares nor creates any Crime, but only imposes a special and particular Penalty, by Loss of the Office or Disability, and therefore the Earl having been dismiss'd the Great Seal, there can be no Punishment inflicted upon him.

It is agreed by them, that the Statute 5 and 6 E. VI. includes both these Offices, of Clerk of the Custodies, as an Office of Clerkship in a Court of Record; and of the Masters in Chancery, as Offices touching the Administration and Execution of Justice, in point of Description.

And upon reading the Act it is evident, that this Statute in the Preamble, and throughout the whole Act, treats this way of dealing, as a Corruption, and illegal in its Nature, and expresly calls it so.

The Preamble says, For the avoiding of Corruption, which may happen hereafter to be in the Officers and Ministers in those Courts and Places, wherein there is Requisite to be had the true Administration of Justice or Services of Trust.

And this Statute carries the Punishment farther, but does not take away the Punishment of it as a Misdemeanor at the Common Law, by Fine or Imprisonment upon Indictment.

And there is not any Proviso in the Act which mentions or exempts the Court of Chancery, or any of the Officers of that Court; but in consequence, when it mentions other Courts in a Proviso, must more strongly be intended to include them in the Act.

The first Proviso extends to Offices of a private Nature, and to Offices of Inheritance, and can't relate to any judicial Office, nor to either of these Officers, who hold only for Life; altho' where the Nature of the Office has allow'd it to become inheritable, it makes it alienable; but no such Instance is to be met with in the Case of judicial Offices.

The second Proviso is to prevent any Person's being surpriz'd into the Penalty unwittingly, before Notice of the Act, or by a Retrospect. And altho' the Statute takes Notice that divers Persons did make such corrupt Bargains, it is only by Way and with an Intent of preventing, and not of legitimating them; and it leaves them all as they stood at Common Law, until that Day appointed by the Act was past.

And the last Proviso does nothing more, and leaves the Justices to act upon their own Knowledge and Discretion in the Law, according to the Nature of the Office, without casting any Imputation upon them unnecessarily.

But so exceeding cautious was the Legislature, that there is not any Expression in any Part of the Act to declare or enact such Bargains in the Cases excepted to be good.

But the Statute leaves them entirely to the Regulation and Direction of the Common Law and former Acts of Parliament.

So that altho' the Earl of Macclesfield, by his being dismiss'd from the Office of Lord Chancellor, is not liable to suffer the additional Punishment contain'd in this Act of Loss of his Office: Yet he will still be liable to the Punishment at Common Law, and upon the several other Statutes, and accordingly remains open and subject to your Lordship's just Sentence.

For where a Statute does give or impose a new Penalty, for a Matter which was an Offence at the Common Law, the Prosecutor may pursue either of the Remedies; altho' where a Statute makes or creates the Offence, that Remedy must be taken which the Statute gives.

Regin' cont. Wigg' Pas' 4. Anne Banco, Regin' Salk. 460. Com' Leicest. & Mandy 2. Sid. 32. Dr. Hussey's Case, 9. Co. 74. Cranbank's Case, 2. Rolls Rep. 49. Burgen's Case, 1. Ven. 13. 1. Sid. 409.

Thus I have gone into this long Debate, to shew that the Commons have founded their Articles upon the general Rules of the Common Law, supported and inforced by divers Acts of Parliament.

As to the Proofs.

I shall now take notice of the Evidence upon the particular Articles assign'd to me, and shall observe not only upon the Proofs given by the Commons in Maintenance of those Articles, but likewise upon the Examination made on behalf of the Earl impeach'd, and in his Defence.

As to the Money Articles, I shall make this general Observation upon the Evidence, that it has been agreed by all the Witnesses examin'd thereto, as well by Mr. Cottingham, the Earl's Secretary, and on these Contracts his Lordship's Broker, as by the Masters themselves, and their Agents, that the whole Transaction was done and finish'd, and the Money actually paid and deliver'd into the Lord Chancellor's own Hands (except Mr. Thurston's Five Thousand Guineas, which were deliver'd to another for his Lordship's Service) before the Resignation of the former Officer was accepted, and before the Admission and Swearing of the Successor.

So that the principal Point and main Stress of the Articles are thus in fact agreed upon by both Parties.

But as to these Articles, and more particularly with respect to the One Hundred and Five Pounds receiv'd from Mr. Thomas Bennet, and the Fifteen Hundred Guineas each receiv'd from Mr. Kinaston and Mr. Bennet, the Earl and his Council have suggested a Deficiency in the Proof, arising from a Contrariety in the Evidence given by Mr. Cottingham the Earl's Secretary, to what has been sworn by Mr. Bennet, Mr. Kinaston, and Mr. Charles Baily; and, upon the Credit of the Secretary's Testimony, would suppose that each of these Sums proceeded first from the free and voluntary Offer of the Masters, and was not insisted upon by the Earl or his Secretary before hand, as charged in the Articles, and prov'd by the Masters, but only accepted and receiv'd by Cottingham and the Lord Chancellor.

But the Nature of the Transaction, and the Circumstances of the Persons, do very strongly support the Credit of the Witnesses produced by the Commons, and the Probability of their Testimony, who have prov'd every Part of those Articles, in the very Words of them; and Mr. Cottingham himself has confess'd enough to maintain the Articles in Substance, altho' he should be credited in any Circumstance wherein he varies from the other Witnesses.

As to the ninth Article, it will be very difficult to believe that Mr. Bennet, who had lately paid the Lord Chancellor so large a Sum for his Admission to the Office of a Master, which he had borrowed of his Brother, and who had paid no Admittance Money for this Place of Clerk of the Custodies to the former Chancellor, the Earl Cowper; and who had likewise been informed by his Brother Mr. John Bennet, that nothing was paid by him to Earl Cowper upon his being admitted to the same Office, and that Lord Cowper himself had declared declared to Mr. John Bennet that there was nothing due upon his Admiſſion; that Mr. Thomas Bennet under theſe Circumſtances ſhould of his own Accord firſt propoſe a Preſent (as it is called) when he could not well imagine that there was any Pretence to it; that is hardly credible.

And Cottingham himſelf has own'd, that he told Mr. Thomas Bennet that ſomething was expected, and that he carried the Propoſal of One hundred and five Pounds to the Earl, who accepted it, and thereupon he receiv'd the Money from Mr. Bennet, and paid it over to the Earl; after which the Earl then took the whole Care upon himſelf of expediting the Sign Manual and the Patent.

Now, Cottingham being the Factor employ'd by the Earl in all theſe Bargains, who has been avow'd by the Earl to be his Agent, and has been produc'd as his Witneſs, and ſupported by him; every thing that Cottingham declares and acts in compleating theſe Contracts, will be conſider'd as the Act of the Earl himſelf, and his own bartering; eſpecially, when Cottingham (as he depoſed before your Lordſhips) did not conclude the Bargain, until he had receiv'd the Earl's Approbation thereof; and when the Earl at the End confirms the whole by his Receipt of the Money.

And a Lord Chancellor's expecting ſomething, or a Sum of Money, be it more or leſs, and this his Expectation declared and notified by his Secretary to the Perſon applying to be admitted into the Office, is a peremptory Demand, and an inſiſting, when the Lord Chancellor alone, and no other, has the Power of taking the Reſignation, or making it effectual by paſſing the new Patent, and of admitting the new Officer.

But this Matter has been explain'd and confirmed by the Evidence of Dupper the Under Secretary, the Earl's own Witneſs, upon whoſe Authority the Earl relied, who acquainted your Lordſhips, that upon Cottingham's telling him of the intended Surrender of Mr. Thomas Bennet, Dupper ſaid, there ought to be an Acknowledgment to the Great Seal, and he had heard that Money had been given, which Cottingham himſelf at firſt doubted of; but Dupper ſoon ſatisfied both the Earl and his Secretary that Money might be ask'd.

This confirms the Evidence of Mr. Thomas Bennet, that nothing was ſaid about Money to be given, or an Expectation of ſomething at his firſt meeting with Cottingham, but it was introduced by Cottingham at their ſecond Meeting; which muſt be after this Advice and Information of Dupper, and that then the Reſolution was taken of expecting a Sum of Money.

This argues the Diffidence of the Earl impeached in ſetting up this Pretence, and his Suſpicion of the Illegality of it; yet the Opinion of the Perſon adviſing, and the Earl's own Inclination to Gain, were too powerful to be reſiſted.

But to remove the Foundation of this Objection: The Point or Charge of theſe Articles lies in the taking theſe Sums by the Earl, colore officii ſui, as Lord Chancellor, and without Right, which is Extortion and Corruption.

And if he did receive theſe Payments by Colour of his Authority, and without Right, (and he has made out no Pretence of Right) he will be guilty of the Crimes charg'd upon him, in how artificial a manner ſoever he tranſacted theſe Matters.

It will amount to the ſame, whether they propoſed the Sum to him, or he made the Demand upon them; yet if ſomething was expected by him, and he declin'd doing the Duty of his Office, until that ſomething was offered and paid to him, it is an Exaction and an Impoſition, which is criminal, and maintains the Articles.

Co. 3. Inſt. 148. 149. E. Mallin's Caſe.

And it is remarkable, that the Earl would never give Credit for his Preſent, but always had it ſafe in his own Hand, before he admitted the Officer.

It has been attempted, on behalf of the Earl of Macclesfield, to prove that former Chancellors have uſed to claim and receive Money upon the taking Surrenders, and making new Grants of this Office; but herein the Earl has fail'd, and has not been able to give legal Proof of any one Inſtance of that kind, upon the change of this Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies.

For Dupper did not ſee any Money paid on that Occaſion, nor knows any thing of it of his own Knowledge, but only copied an Account which he came by very odly, wherein (as he ſays) there was an Item to that effect; and his Evidence depended meerly upon Hear-ſay, and ought to have no Regard.

The Evidence of Mr. Oker turns againſt the Earl; for altho' there were Surrenders in both the Times, when Earl Cowper held the Great Seal, yet nothing was paid or taken by him; and upon the Surrender of Thompſon to Edwards in the late Queen's Time, it was ſaid that nothing was given; and upon the Surrender of Mr. John Bennet to Mr. Thomas Bennet, whilſt Earl Cowper enjoyed the Seal under his Majeſty, nothing was paid or claimed.

And the ſuppoſed Intimation or Opinion of Lord Cowper, which Oker mentions, was between theſe two Surrenders, which makes it very unlikely that Earl Cowper ſhould make ſuch a Declaration; yet if ſuch Diſcourſe there was, it is plain, that upon better Conſideration, the Lord Cowper departed from ſuch Pretenſion, and diſcover'd no Expectation of any thing, upon the laſt Surrender and Grant of this Office.

And as nothing was taken by Lord Cowper, upon the Surrender of Mr. John Bennet to Mr. Thomas Bennet, it will be prov'd, that on the Surrender of Mr. Edwards to Mr. John Bennet, Lord Cowper refuſed to hear of a Preſent, when it was hinted at, and declared that nothing was due to the Great Seal.

But this Defence, which is founded upon a ſuppoſed Uſage to receive a Fee for permitting ſuch Surrenders, and from thence would infer a Right, or an Excuſe to the Earl impeach'd, in doing the like, is a Proof and Confirmation of the Article, as charg'd by the Commons; That the Earl did inſiſt upon the Money, as his Right and Due.

ART. V. As to the Bargain with Mr. Kinaſton, it appears from his Teſtimony, and the Evidence of Mr. Charles Baily, who paid the Money, that Mr. Kinaſton endeavour'd to obtain the Admiſſion at a lower Rate. At firſt he offer'd but one thouſand Guineas; and at the End Mr. Baily underſtood it to have been agreed for at fifteen hundred Pounds; and when Mr. Cottingham ſaid fifteen hundred Guineas were expected, Baily did not proceed till he had informed Mr. Kinaſton therewith, who anſwer'd, that ſince Mr. Cottingham had mentioned that Sum, he muſt ſubmit, and do accordingly.

And this Diſpute, upon the Difference between Pounds and Guineas only, explains the manner of theſe Dealings; That they were formal Contracts and Bargains between the Secretary and the Maſters, at the beſt Price that could be got; and tho' there was no hagling with the Earl himſelf

(as Cottingham expreſs'd it at one of theſe Dealings) yet he had a faithful Steward, who could and did haggle very well for him; and when the Secretary had done his utmoſt, the Earl accepted the Price which had been agreed upon.

ART. VI. As to the fifteen hundred Guineas, paid by Mr. Thomas Bennet for his Admiſſion, and the manner of making that Bargain, Mr. Bennet's Evidence of his firſt offering one thouſand Guineas, and Cottingham's Refuſal of it, ſaying, He hoped Mr. Bennet would not lower the Price, and the Hazard of his being refus'd, and that there was no haggling with my Lord, and at laſt agreeing for fifteen hundred Guineas, is ſupported from the uſual Behaviour of Cottingham, as well as from the Probability of the thing it ſelf; that a Man may reaſonably be preſumed to endeavour to ſave what he can, and when he is purchaſing, to get it at the cheapeſt; altho' (as it has appear'd upon the Examination) Mr. Bennet had little Reaſon to expect that a ſucceeding Chancellor would be ſatisfied with his Circumſtances, and admit him.

Upon the Earl's Defence againſt the Charge contained in theſe two Articles, it was prov'd by Mr. Goldesbrough the Regiſter, that the Earl about the 23d of February laſt had paid thoſe two Sums into the Court of Chancery, to be apply'd for the Benefit of the Suitors; and this is offer'd either in his Diſcharge, or as a Merit. But this was done ſeveral Days after the Impeachment, and after publick Complaint had been made againſt the Earl upon theſe two Inſtances, and is a very proper example of the Earl's own Conſtruction of a voluntary Preſent; for after the Houſe of Commons had taken this Affair into their Conſideration, and had demanded Juſtice and Satisfaction from the Earl by a Parliamentary Proſecution, the Earl then did freely and voluntarily, and of his own Accord, make a Preſent to the Suitors of the Court of theſe two Sums, which he had, in the like free and voluntary Manner, receiv'd as a Preſent from Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Bennet.

But this Action contradicts his whole Defence; and ſhews that he was convinc'd that he had no Right to receive or detain the Money, and was afraid to keep it any longer.

ART. VII. and VIII. As to the two five thouſand Guineas receiv'd by the Earl of Mr. Elde and Mr. Thurſton, it is prov'd that the Price was ſettled between them and Mr. Cottingham; and when Mr. Elde (of whom the Earl expreſs'd ſo good an Opinion) offered five thouſand Pounds, Cottingham ſaid Guineas were handſomer; and the particular Method of Payment ſhews the inward Rebukes of his Conſcience, and his Fear of a Diſcovery.

And theſe two Facts ſhew the Prevalency of his Avarice, above any other Paſſion. For in Mr. Elde's Caſe, he broke thro' the Obligation of Gratitude and Friendſhip to him, to receive his Money in a cover'd Manner, in a Basket. And in Mr. Thurſton's, he tried to beguile his Fear of a Diſcovery, by ſuffering the Money to come to him thro' a private and unſuſpected Hand.

And theſe two Inſtances were of ſo nice a Nature, that his faithful Secretary own'd, that he was not admitted into the Secret. For it appears that the Earl either knew or ſuſpected there would be a Loſs in Borret's Office by his Inſolvency, tho' it was not reduc'd to any Certainty; and it now appears, at the leaſt, to amount unto twelve thouſand Pounds.

But the Earl left the Suitors of the Court to bear that Loſs, and never took Care to procure a juſt Satisfaction to them. Which the Commons urge both as an Evidence and an Aggravation of his Guilt; ſince he therein preferr'd his own private Gain, to that Security, which his high Truſt required him to have provided for the Creditors of the Court.

And the returning great Part of theſe two Sums after the Confuſion and Diſorders of the Court became publick, and Part of Mr. Elde's Money, after the Maſters had been call'd upon to bring in their Caſh, and which upon Mr. Elde's Evidence may be reaſonably preſum'd to have been made uſe of by him to make a falſe Shew before the Commiſſioners, are rather Decrees againſt himſelf, than any Extenuation of his Guilt.

And as to the Earl's great Merit, which he ſo largely dwelt upon, and ſo often repeated, that he might have had ſix thouſand Pounds from Mr. Lucas, which he relinquiſh'd to accept of five thouſand Guineas from Mr. Elde. The Managers will call Mr. Lucas, who (in anſwer to Mr. Eld's Teſtimony) will prove, that when he offer'd the ſix thouſand Pounds, it was upon this expreſs Condition, that if the Money of the Suitors, or the Caſh, was taken out of the Maſters Hands on a Parliamentary Inquiry, he ſhould have a Return of ſome Part; and that the Earl ſhould indemnify him againſt all Deficiencies.

So that the Earl did not refuſe Mr. Lucas's ſix thouſand Pounds, from a Diſinclination to the Sum, if he could have kept the whole ſecurely; but becauſe five thouſand Guineas paid abſolutely, was better than ſix thouſand Pounds ſubject to a Condition of refunding, and incumber'd with an Engagement of Indemnification.

But the Earl's chief Defence is rais'd from the Practice of his Predeceſſors, who (as he pretends) led him into theſe Miſtakes; and he has prov'd ſeven hundred Pounds to have been paid by Mr. Lovibond, about twelve Years ſince, and eight hundred Pounds by Mr. Holford, and five hundred Pounds by Mr. John Bennet in the Year 1716. upon their reſpective Admiſſions into the Offices of Maſters; and from thence inſiſts, that altho' he can't claim the exact Sum of fifteen hundred Pounds receiv'd by himſelf upon Admiſſions, as a certain and eſtabliſh'd Fee or Perquiſite, becauſe he has taken twice as much as his Predeceſſor did: Yet this Practice gives him a Right to a Preſent, and it was in his own Diſcretion to declare the Sum, as he ſhould think reaſonable, according to the late Increaſe of the Buſineſs of the Court.

But, a Preſent altogether uncertain in the Quantum, and depending in this Manner upon the Pleaſure of the Perſon who is to receive it, ſeems to differ very little, if at all, from a Price.

The Earl inſiſts likewiſe, that the Denial or Refuſal of ſome other of the Witneſſes to anſwer his Queſtions, is a farther Proof that they paid Money. This ſhews that the Earl thinks he wants the Proof very much, when he makes uſe of ſuch an Argument to raiſe Evidence.

The Witneſs refuſes to anſwer ſuch Queſtions, which he is not oblig'd by the Rules of Law to reſolve, concerning the Manner of his Admiſſion, and the Commons cannot call Witneſſes to contradict or explain that which has never been deliver'd in Evidence.

Yet the Earl deſires your Lordſhips to believe this as Evidence, tho' you never did hear it, and to act and vote, upon your Honour, as if you had heard and admitted it.

But howſoever the Earl may have directed himſelf, he can never think that ſuch an unjuſt Inſinuation will ever prevail upon your Judgment; or that he can thereby move your Lordſhips to give up your Honour, in the higheſt Exerciſe of your judicial Power.

And theſe two or three late Inſtances, which he has produced, cannot change the Common Law, or repeal the ſeveral Acts of Parliament, whereby they are declar'd illegal; and if he makes uſe of them as Precedents, he ought to take them with all their Circumſtances, which upon the whole Matter rather turn againſt him. For Mr. Holford and Mr. Lovibond were at that time, and ſtill continue Men of Subſtance; and Mr. John Bennet was of Ability at the Time of his Admiſſion, altho' in the Year 1720. he ſuſtain'd ſeveral Loſſes, which impair'd his Eſtate. And they all paid the Sums of Money mention'd out of their own Eſtates, and no Part of it out of the Suitor's Caſh or Effects. And the whole of the Suitor's Effects was deliver'd over to them by an Account with which they ſtood charg'd.

So that altho' theſe few Inſtances were not animadverted upon, either becauſe they were not publickly known, or that no Inconvenience did enſue therefrom: Yet they will afford no Excuſe to the Earl impeach'd for taking double and treble the Value of thoſe Sums upon his Admiſſion of Maſters, who were Perſons of ſmall or incumber'd Eſtates, and who were neceſſitated to employ the Caſh and Effects of the Suitors in the Payment for their Offices, and for their Admiſſions; and thro' whoſe Inſolvency ſo great a Loſs and Damage has come upon the Suitors.

But an Officer of publick Truſt and Service ought to look well to his Precedents before he follows them; and if he will purſue an illegal or unjuſtifiable Precedent, he does it at his Peril, and muſt anſwer for the Conſequences; eſpecially in the Situation of the higheſt Officer in the Kingdom, who was intruſted with the Adminiſtration of publick Juſtice, in the ſupreme Court of Law and Equity; and whoſe Duty it was as well to declare and expound the Law to others, and to regulate and reform the Exactions and Abuſes, which at any Time may have crept into the inferior Courts of Juſtice, to the Injury and Oppreſſion of the Suitors of other Courts, as to prevent or ſuppreſs Corruption and Extortion in the Court, where he more immediately preſided.

ART. XI. As to this Article, the particular Circumſtances of Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Thomas Bennet have been prov'd, and the Deficiencies in their Offices, and how unequal they were to the Truſt of the great Sums and Effects depoſited in their Hands.

By the Orders of the Court, which have been read, it appears that Mr. Kinaſton's Deficiency amounts to 26,908 l. 11 s. 3 d. 1 q. and Mr. Bennet's to 16,075 l. Mr. Kinaſton had about 50,000 l. in Money and Effects of the Suitors in his Cuſtody, and Mr. Thomas Bennet near 100,000.

This is likewiſe a high Breach of Truſt in the Earl, and is an Offence againſt the Statute of 12 Rich. II. cap. 2.

12 Rich. II. cap. 2.—But that they make all ſuch Officers and Miniſters of the beſt and moſt lawful Men.

Which Words in the Law import Sufficiency of Subſtance, as well as Capacity.

And the Statute 2 Hen. VI. cap. 10. takes it for granted, that the ſuperior Officers were before that Time under the Obligation of the Common Law, or ſome former Statute to that Effect; when by the ſaid Act, 2 Hen. VI. cap. 10. Co. 4. Inſt. 114. intituled, What manner of inferior Officers ſhall be appointed in the King's Courts, it is enacted, To the Intent that better and more ſure Government be had within the Courts of our Lord the King, for his Profit, and Eaſe of his People, which have to purſue and to do in the ſame; it is ordained and eſtabliſhed, That all the Officers made by the King's Letters Patents Royal within the ſaid Courts, which have Power and Authority by virtue of their Offices of old Times accuſtomed, to appoint Clerks and Miniſters within the ſame Courts, ſhall be charged and ſworn to appoint ſuch Clerks and Miniſters for whom they will anſwer at their Peril, which be ſufficient, faithful, and attending to that which pertaineth to them in Performance of the Buſineſs, as well of the King as of his People.

This Act would have been extended farther, if it had been eſteemed neceſſary.

The Frame of both theſe Statutes does ſhew the Bent of the Engliſh Conſtitution, to provide for the Eaſe and Benefit of the Subject.

But the old Rule, reſpondeat ſuperior, will hold againſt the Earl in this Caſe, eſpecially when it appears by the Evidence of Mr. Goldesbrough the Regiſter, a Witneſs produc'd by the Earl, that this Practice of paying Money generally into the Hands of the Maſters, was not in uſe at his firſt coming into the Regiſter's Office, about the Time of the Revolution. So that the Earl impeach'd took upon himſelf the Diſpoſition of the Suitors Money, without a proper Ground and Juſtification.

And the Offence contained in this Article does not depend upon his Knowledge, that the Perſons admitted were inſufficient and unable; but that the Earl did not require and take full Satisfaction and Evidence in a proper Manner, to make it manifeſt that they were able and ſufficient, as had been done by his Predeceſſors; particularly when Mr. Holford was admitted a Maſter, his Father was obliged to ſettle a real Eſtate upon him of good Value.

The Earl ought either to have advanc'd Perſons equal to the great Truſt and Charge, or to have reduced the Truſt and Depoſit to the Condition and Circumſtances of the Perſon, as his Predeceſſors had done.

So that it is evident the Earl had only in view the Price and Profit of the Sale of the Office, which would riſe higheſt, upon the Inability and Unfitneſs of the Officer.

And it was therefore very properly ſaid by one of the Earl's Council, that he weigh'd the Maſters before he admitted them.

But he weigh'd them only for the Sake of the Price they were to pay to himſelf; and when he had done with them, he left them of very little Weight for the Security of the Suitors.

His falſe, tho' memorable Declaration in open Court, upon the 21ſt of Jan. 1723. explains his whole Scheme, when he publiſh'd from the Bench, That the preſent Maſters were Men of as great Fortunes as any Set of Maſters had ever been.

The Words were prov'd by Mr. Waller, and have not been contradicted by any Witneſs.

At that time Maſter Dormer's Deficiency had taken Air; and Mr. Waller upon his Examination ſaid, The Suſpicion of ſeveral of the Maſters was then ſo ſtrong, that this Publication rais'd Aſtoniſhment in the Hearers. But there was then a Vacancy, and an Office to be ſold. Maſter Fellowes died 19 Jan. 1723. and it became neceſſary to give the Office a Reputation.

And altho' the Inſufficiency of ſome of the Maſters had been decently intimated to the Earl by Mr. Lightboun, upon his ſeveral Propoſals, and the Earl may be preſum'd to know the general Apprehenſion of the World. Yet in this ſolemn Manner the Earl became an Officer to himſelf, to proclaim his own Market.

ART. XII. The Practice and Injury to the Suitors can hardly be more aggravated than is expreſs'd in the Article it ſelf.

And it has been prov'd in every Particular neceſſary to ſupport the Article; and no Proof has been offer'd offer'd on the Part of the Earl to contradict or extenuate the Charge, by making appear his Vigilance, or any Care or Regard to prevent the fatal Conſequences of the Practice.

The particular Methods of preventing this Fraud ſpecified in the Article, are only to ſhew the Practicability of ſome ſort of Meaſures proper to have been put in Execution, in order at leaſt to render the corrupt Practice and Abuſe difficult, altho' they had not prov'd compleat in all reſpects to redreſs and prevent them.

And by the Witneſſes call'd on the Part of the Earl himſelf, it was expreſsly prov'd, that ſome of theſe Methods had been practiſed with Effect in the time of his Predeceſſors, and that no Loſs had happen'd to the Suitors during that Regulation.

An Account of the Suitors Caſh and Effects was brought to the then Lord Chancellor Harcourt by Mr. Holford, as the Account of his Predeceſſor, before he was admitted; and he was thereupon ask'd if he would be bound by that Account, and ſtand charged accordingly? to which he agreed, and his Subſtance was ſufficient to anſwer it.

The Caſh Money was for ſome Years lock'd up in the Hands of the two junior Maſters in Lord Chancellor Cowper's time.

And it has been prov'd, that the total Accounts of all the Maſters have been taken three ſeveral times within a few Years; that is, twice by Lord Cowper, and once by Lord Harcourt.

And altho' the Earl ſeems either to doubt of his Authority, or of the Poſſibility of doing this in his own time; it can be prov'd, that he requeſted to ſee the Accounts, and to be inform'd of this Method, and accordingly had a Sight of the Books, and made an Appearance of putting it in Execution.

Beſides, the late Accounts deliver'd in by the ſeveral Maſters before the Commiſſioners named for that Purpoſe, ſhew, that ſuch an Attempt was practicable, and might have been compleated in a reaſonable Time.

But the Earl of Macclesfield, by his own Confeſſion, is guilty of a total Neglect of all Meaſures; and never proſecuted one honeſt and real Step towards the ſuppreſſing this Abuſe.

He might have given Directions, and made Orders for the ſecuring the Suitors Effects, in the ſame manner before the late Inquiry, as he has done ſince.

His Secretaries and Agents might have ſuperviſed the Obſervation of theſe Orders; and have attended to inſpect the compleat Transfer of the Suitors Effects, as well as to receive his Lordſhip's extorted Præmium.

And if after the Earl had taken theſe, or any other probable Meaſures, and the Maſters had broken their Truſt, the Fault would have lain upon the Diſhoneſty of the Maſters, and not upon the Connivance or Negligence of the Lord Chancellor.

But upon this Article the Anſwer of the Earl impeach'd is directly falſified. For he declares upon his Honour, upon that Honour which is communicated to him from the Privilege of the whole Order of Peers (but of which he himſelf has only made a Shew or Appearance) that he was totally ignorant of this Practice; although it appears in Proof to have been a matter publickly known during his Adminiſtration. It was one Inducement to Mr. Kinaſton, and the ſingle Temptation to Mr. Thomas Bennet.

This Notoriety is a reaſonable Evidence to charge the Earl with the Knowledge of a fraudulent Tranſaction propagated under himſelf; eſpecially when the Pretence of his Ignorance muſt ariſe from the wilful Neglect of his Duty.

But expreſs Notice is prov'd out of his own Mouth by Mr. Thomas Bennet; and farther, that the Earl had been uſed to proſtitute his Honour by a Courſe of Denial of this Fact upon former Occaſions.

For Mr. Bennet in his Account, which he had deliver'd in to the Judges, had inſerted this remarkable Item, viz. Item 9075 l. in the Hands of Perſons of Ability; which included the 7500 l. paid to Mr. Hiccocks, and the 1575 l. paid the Chancellor for his Admiſſion.

Mr. Kinaſton alſo in his Account had inſerted an Item to the ſame Effect for a like Sum.

Mr. Thomas Bennet went ſoon afterwards to the Chancellor, who enter'd into Diſcourſe with him thereupon, and ſaid: I am ſorry you have given in your Account in this manner; it was the worſt way in the World: For all the World will now judge, that you paid for your Office out of the Suitors Money; and what hath been ſo much ſuſpected will now be diſcover'd, which I have always taken ſo much Pains to deny, whenever I was ask'd the Queſtion. And wiſh'd he had been acquainted with Mr. Bennet's Neceſſities before Mr. Bennet had given in that Item; or to this very Effect.

The Probability of the Truth of this Evidence ſtands confirm'd from the Nature of the Thing, and the State of the Account itſelf, which has not been contradicted by the Earl; and ſeems farther ſtrengthened by an Opinion which the Earl had entertain'd, and which he drop't in his Defence on Wedneſday, viz. That the Suitor was not the worſe by this Method; for by this Detention the former Maſter remain'd ſtill reſponſible, and (as he obſerv'd) by Mr. Meller's retaining ſome Part of the Suitors Effects, the Deficiency in Mr. Borret's Office was not ſo large.

This ſeems a ſtrong Symptom of the Earl's Knowledge of the Practice, when it had obtained his Approbation.

But the Money retain'd by Mr. Meller was no part of the Price of the Office, but were other Sums and Effects which he retained in his Hands, and never paid over to Mr. Borret, upon the repeated Application and Requeſt of the Suitors, who doubted Mr. Borret's Sufficiency.

But ſuppoſe the former Maſter had died, or fail'd with theſe Effects in his Hands; how ſhould the Suitor have come to a full and legal Proof of this Tranſaction? and how many Perſons was he to proſecute, to diſcover and receive his own Money?

The Importance of this Part of Mr. Thomas Bennet's Teſtimony has given Occaſion to the Earl and his Council to object to his Credit; and an Endeavour has been uſed to make out, that Mr. Bennet has contradicted himſelf, and has deny'd here at your Lordſhips Bar upon his Oath, what he had formerly declared to other Perſons.

For that Mr. Bennet being ask'd (with an Intent to prove his Ability to pay the reſt of his Deficiency) Whether he had not ſaid, that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay him back two thouſand Pounds, he would pay the reſt himſelf, Mr. Bennet denied he had ſo declared; and yet, as they urge, the contrary is ſworn by Mr. Holford, Mr. Thurſton, and Mr. Elde.

In Anſwer to this Mr. Holford gave in Evidence, that Mr. Bennet ſaid, that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay him back two thouſand Pounds, he would take Care that the reſt of the Money ſhould be raiſed. But Mr. Bennet did not ſay, he had the Money, tho' Mr. Holford believed he had by his Manner of ſpeaking.

Mr. Thurſton depoſed, that Mr. Bennet declared he would make up the reſt himſelf: but afterwards told him, that all he had in the World would not pay it.

And Mr. Elde ſwears to the ſame Effect.

And

And this Teſtimony does not contradict, but rather confirms Mr. Bennet's Evidence. For he made no direct Declaration of his Ability to pay the reſt, but, being liable to the Suitors, he ſeem'd to be willing to get what he could from Mr. Hiccocks.

Beſides, his Diſcourſe at theſe times cannot ſtand in Competition with his Oath, according to the common Rules of Evidence; and a Witneſs's Credit is not to be taken away upon an uncertain Expreſſion, proved by each of the Earl's own Witneſſes in different Words, when from the Ambiguity of it there cannot poſſibly be any voluntary Contradiction.

But the Commons will confirm the Truth and Fairneſs of this Teſtimony of Mr. Bennet, by proving that the Earl had expreſs'd the ſame Concern and Diſlike of the Manner of theſe Accounts in reſpect of theſe Items to others, before any Parliamentary Inquiry.

There is likewiſe another Matter of Fact, which aſſiſts the Proof of this Article, which is, That the Price of the Office, and of the Admiſſion, are comprehended in the Accounts of the Maſters Deficiencies, and make the greateſt Part of Mr. Bennet's Deficiency, and near a Moiety of Mr. Kinaſton's.

Which manifeſts the Danger and Injury of this unjuſt Practice to the Suitor, whoſe Eſtate is thereby put upon the Hazard of the Maſter's good or bad Succeſs, and his Property loſt with a deficient Maſter.

And here the Corruption and Misbehaviour of the Earl appear with the higheſt Aggravations.

The extorted Profit made by the Earl is raiſed out of thoſe Effects, which are depoſited in the Court upon the Faith and Honour of the King's Adminiſtration under the Care of the Chancellor, as chief Truſtee, by whoſe Connivance (if not Conſent) they are thus imbezzled; and the miſerable Suitor muſt either ſit down with the Loſs, or be forced to expend his little remaining Subſtance in a tedious Proceſs to recover back his own Eſtate thus waſted and converted by the Maſters.

Unneceſſary Delays and Protractions of Cauſes are the unavoidable Conſequences of this Practice; and in this manner the Buſineſs of the Court, and the Profits of the Maſters Offices have been encreaſed by the Purſuit of the Parties after their own Effects, which in the Concluſion terminates in ſo heavy a Loſs.

The late Orders made upon the Petitions of Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers ſince the Impeachment, and ſome ſince the Tryal commenced, tho' not proved to have been as yet comply'd with, and at beſt are but Depoſits to attend the Event of the Conteſt between the former and the preſent Maſters, have been made uſe of by the Earl in his Defence; which is a new Attempt in him to make a falſe Shew and Appearance of Reſtitution and Satisfaction.

Altho' if it was a real and a compleat Return of the Principal Money, it would be a very ſmall Excuſe and Extenuation for the vaſt Prejudice done to all the Suitors of the Court, by the locking up their Money, Effects and Securities, and ſtopping the Payments thereon for ſo many Months, beſides the Loſs of Intereſt on the Caſh, and their being hinder'd from the Employment of their Money.

The Earl has not adventured to enter into a particular Diſcharge of the total Deficiency aſſigned by the Commons, upon the Evidence of Mr. Thompſon, and collected from the Accounts ſtated upon the late Inquiry, amounting to more than one hundred thouſand Pounds. Nor has he given any Anſwer to the great Loſs which the innocent Suitors ſuſtain by the Inſolvency of the two deceaſed Maſters, Dormer and Borret.

This great Confuſion and Damage brought upon a Court, where the Eſtates of the moſt wealthy Subjects, as well as of leſſer People, do ſooner or later come, became a National Concern, not merely from the Extenſiveneſs of the Loſs to the particular Suitors, but likewiſe from the apparent Danger thereby ariſing to the Publick.

This general Ruin awaken'd the Care and Zeal of the Commons in Parliament for Juſtice to their Fellow-Subjects.

This introduced the Charge againſt the Earl in the Twelfth Article, which has been proved as it is alledged, viz. That by this unjuſt and fraudulent Practice, the corrupt Profit made by the Earl upon the Sale of the Offices of Maſters in Chancery, has in Conſequence been raiſed and received by him out of the Effects of the Suitors of the Court, for whom he was intruſted; in Breach of the Truſt repoſed in him for the Preſervation of the Eſtates and Effects of the Suitors, to the Diſhonour and Diſcredit of the Court, and to the great Injury and Defrauding of the Suitors, in a Court of Equity eſtabliſh'd for their Relief and Protection.

My LORDS,

If the Miſdemeanours of which the Earl impeach'd ſtands accuſed were not Crimes by the ordinary Rules of Law in Inferior Courts, as they have been made out to be; yet they would be Offences of a publick Nature, againſt the Welfare of the Subject, and the Common Good of the Kingdom, committed by the Higheſt Officer of Juſtice, and attended with ſo great and immediate Loſs to a Multitude of Sufferers; and as ſuch, they would demand the Exerciſe of the Extraordinary Juriſdiction veſted in your Judicature for the Publick Safety, by virtue whereof your Lordſhips can inflict that Degree and Kind of Puniſhment which no other Court can impoſe.

When theſe Offences have been proved upon the Earl impeach'd, of what Conſideration in Judgment can the Earl's miſtaken and miſplaced Charities be? Can they alter the Facts charged upon him? or turn Extortion and Fraud into Liberality and Piety? Can the Merit of a few private Good Works attone for the Plunder of the whole Body of the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, upon whom this Earl, by his Miſbehaviour, has brought a Deficiency of one hundred and eight thouſand Pounds?

He depends upon the Prayers and Wiſhes of thoſe few, who have been the Partakers of his Bounty, without being Sufferers by his Crimes. But the Voice of the Commons for Juſtice againſt this Great Offender, not only includes the Complaints of the particular Sufferers, but the Accuſation of an injured Nation, whom the Earl had endeavour'd to cut off from the Protection, which ought to be deriv'd to them from the Father of his People.

The Commons having now maintain'd the Truth and Juſtice of their Charge againſt the Earl impeach'd upon theſe Articles, leave him to your Lordſhips juſt Determination.

Mr. Lutwyche.

My LORDS,

I am commanded to aſſiſt in the Reply; and ſince I was obliged to bear my Share in this Proſecution, I was willing it ſhould be ſuch as would give me an Opportunity of hearing what would be ſaid and proved in the impeach'd Lord's Defence, before I ſpoke freely upon the Matters in Judgment before your Lordſhips.

And

And I may now venture to ſay, as he was unfortunate to bring ſo heavy a Charge upon himſelf, he has ſtill been more unfortunate in his Defence; I ſubmit it to Your Lordſhips Obſervation, whether any Part of the Evidence offered by the Managers has not been confirmed, nay enforced upon him, by his own Evidence; and ſome of the Charges upon him he has endeavoured to evade by ſuch Excuſes and Arguments, as have made even his Defence criminal.

My Lords, Upon the Examination of the firſt Witneſs produced on the Part of the Commons, his Lordſhip was pleaſed to make it a Queſtion whether he took the Oath directed by the Statute of 12 Richard II. The Objection ſeemed to be, that tho' the Statute was read, and his Lordſhip kiſſed the Bible, yet he was ſworn to nothing. This was ſo ſurprizing to all that heard it, and the Report of it raiſed ſuch Indignation, that it might have been expected his Lordſhip would have drawn a Veil over this Part of the Caſe, and have taken Care that it ſhould not be mentioned again; but inſtead of that, his Counſel, nay he himſelf, have thought fit to bring this Point into Diſpute in his Defence, and his Lordſhip does not even yet fully own that he took the Oath.

The Statute has been repreſented as obſolete, read in Old French, and not regarded, and the Oath not duly adminiſtred; that the Officer ſaid nothing to his Lordſhip, nor he to the Officer.

The Witneſs told Your Lordſhips, that at a Meeting of the Great Officers every Year in the Exchequer, this Statute was read, and they immediately kiſſed the Book; and that this was the uſual Method of taking the Oath preſcribed by that Statute.

My Lords, I would obſerve, that if there had been any thing in the taking of the Oath that his Lordſhip thought not regular, it was his Duty, who was the Chief of that Aſſembly, to put them in a right Method agreeable to the Statute: And therefore this Objection is very extraordinary to come from him.

It is a dangerous Practice for any one to make a Shew of taking an Oath, and yet by ſome nice Diſtinctions endeavour to perſuade himſelf or others that he is not ſworn.

I do not know but moſt of the Old Oaths that are taken, may by the like Arguments be evaded, as well as this; the very Oath of Office ſet forth in this Lord's Anſwer is, You ſhall ſwear, &c. and in that Caſe a nice Diſtinguiſher may as well ſay, that he repeated nothing, and that there are not Words de præſenti, whereby he is ſworn. But where is the Defect in adminiſtring this Oath? The Officer reads out of the Statute, That the Chancellor, Treaſurer, &c. ſhall be ſworn, and then they kiſs the Book.

I do not ſee there is much Difference between ſaying, The Chancellor, Treaſurer, &c. ſhall be ſworn (they being at the ſame Time preſent) and ſaying, You the Chancellor, Treaſurer, &c. ſhall ſwear.

I ſhall therefore have the Charity for the Noble Lord to think and take it for granted, that he was ſworn as the Statute required, and that he underſtood the Statute, tho' it was read in Old French, and that he did not prevaricate, when he did this ſolemn Act.

Suppoſing therefore that the Statute 12 R. II. is in Force, and that the Oath was really taken; the next Conſideration is, what the Law is upon the ſeveral Facts and Circumſtances proved againſt the impeached Lord in Relation to his ſelling the Offices of Maſters in Chancery.

The Anſwer put in to the Charge of the Commons ſays, The Maſters freely and voluntarily ſent a Preſent without admitting any particular Sum; we ſay that particular Sums (and thoſe very exorbitant) were inſiſted on, and a Bargain driven for the Offices, as much as could be in any Caſe by way of Brokage; nay the very Benefit of having the Suitors Money comes into the Conſideration of the Price.

The Words of the Statute of R. II. are general, and in Point of Reaſon it ſhould extend to this Caſe above others; becauſe the Offices of Maſters in Chancery do not only concern the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, but are in ſome Meaſure judicial; they tranſact a great Part of the Buſineſs of the Court, and have uſually been in Commiſſion together with the Maſter of the Rolls, and the Judges, for hearing of Cauſes.

Lord Chief Juſtice Coke in his Third Inſtitutes, p. 145. places this Offence of ſelling Offices under his Chapter of Bribery, where he ſtates the Definition of Bribery to be, When any Man in a judicial Place takes any Fee or Penſion, Robe or Livery, Gift, Reward, or Brokage of any Perſon that hath to do before him any way, for doing his Office, &c. He comments upon the Words of this Definition and more particularly upon thoſe Words, of any Perſon that hath to do before him any way, and he takes Notice that it is not confined to taking Money, where a Suit is depending; but alſo where any in a judicial Place doth any thing for Gift or Reward by Virtue or Colour of his Office, tho' there be no Suit at all depending.

For Example, (ſays he) If the Lord Treaſurer for any Gift or Brokage ſhall make any Cuſtomer, Controller, or any Officer or Miniſter of the King; this is Bribery: For he ought to take nothing in that Caſe by the Statute of 12 R. II. This Example alſo proves, that the Statute is not confined to the Conſtruction that has been endeavoured to be put upon it, that it relates only to Caſes, where the Chancellor, Treaſurer, &c. meet together, as they do, when they nominate Perſons for Sheriffs; for the Example is of the Lord Treaſurer alone.

But, My Lords, we inſiſt upon it that this as well as other Statutes (that have been mentioned) are but Declarations, and further Remedies for what was the Common Law. The Caſe that was cited out of Moor's Reports, 781. takes it to be ſo, of a Sheriff ſelling the Office of Gaoler, and his Bailiwick; but there was an Objection made to the Report of that Caſe, that it ſays the Statute, 4 H. IV. c. 5. gives a Penalty certain and pecuniary; whereas that Statute gives no certain Penalty, and therefore it might be a right Reſolution upon that Statute. But the Declaration of the Court, upon which the Party was fined, was becauſe the Offence was malum in ſe; and tho' that Statute of 4 H. IV. gives no Penalty, yet I think the Statute 23 H. VI. c. 10. does give a Penalty of 40 l. in the ſame Caſe of a Sheriff, and yet the Party was fined at the Diſcretion of the Court. That ſame Caſe is alſo reported in Noy, 102. where he takes no Notice of any Penalty, and the Report is in theſe Words: "N. was Sheriff of Nottingham,

" 43 Eliz. and took Money for the Offices of " Gaoler and Bailiwick, and he first gave them " to his Servants, who sold them, but he himself " had the Money." And he was fined for that, for it is contrary to 4 H. IV. cap. 5. And also by the Court, That that is a Corruption, and a great Cause of Oppression in the Officers, and such Sale of Offices is malum in se, and fineable.

My Lords, I think the impeached Lord has advanced a very dangerous Position upon this Point. He is pleased to say, The Publick has nothing to do to enquire about any thing, but whether the Officer be a good Officer; that if he be so, the Publick is not hurt, though he gives the Chancellor Money for his Place. Here I presume he was sensible that it might be objected, that the same Argument would hold for taking Money in a Cause before him, provided it was a good Judgment: And therefore was pleased to say, that the Difference between this Case and taking a Bribe for Judgment in a Cause is, That in the one Case the Party has a Right to have Judgment, but in the other Case no Man has a Right to his Favour or Recommendation, unless upon Terms. This is very extraordinary, and the same Argument would prove, that it is lawful for him to take Money from every Judge that comes into Westminster-Hall. It is well known, that the Chancellor generally recommends in that Case, and yet it might there be said, What is the Publick the worse, provided he is a good Judge? Surely this is such a Doctrine, as is not fit to be proclaimed to the World, and would tend to Universal Corruption.

My Lords, There was a very extraordinary Precedent cited out of Madox's History of the Exchequer, p. 43. where he says, in the Reign of King Stephen, Geoffery the Chancellor fined in 3006 l. 13 s. 4 d. for the King's Seal. This the Author understands to be a Fine then lately made with the King for the Office of Chancellor, or to have the keeping of the King's Seal. The Author himself observes, that this Precedent may justly seem strange to us at this Day. And truly so it may, for in the Instance before Your Lordships, instead of paying Money to the Crown for the Office, here are very great Sums of Money paid by the Crown for an Acceptance of it.

But what does this Precedent tend to? Is it to prove the Office of Chancellor likewise saleable? This is so entirely new, that it wants a better Authority than this Precedent. It is a great while ago, if it were as the Author takes it to be. But the same Author, p. 42. says, That the Ancient Historians say little concerning the Duty of Chancellor, or the Nature of his Office; and it does not appear what the Business of his Office was at that Time, and nothing pertinent to the Matter before Your Lordships is to be collected from it. It is very strange to suppose the Common Law, that is founded upon Reason, should admit the highest Place of Judicature to be filled by those that come in by such corrupt Methods. And therefore we must beg leave to insist, that it was an Offence at Common Law, as well as by the Statutes.

But suppose this Matter rested only upon the Statute of Edward VI. I do not see but it is an Offence and Misdemeanour in his Office of Chancellor to sell these Places of Masters in Chancery, and that he is answerable for it before Your Lordships as a Crime.

This Statute is made against buying and selling of Offices (for that is the Title of the Statute) And shall it not be an Offence cognizable before Your Lordships, for a Chancellor to put in Officers in a Manner that is condemned by Act of Parliament? When he by Virtue of the Office is to appoint, it is a Breach of his Oath of Office to appoint contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Kingdom; but more especially when he does it for corrupt Gain.

As to this Point, there is a great deal of Difference between one Officer selling to another, and a Judge that presides in the Court, whose Duty it is to see that proper Persons be appointed according to Law; instead of that, by this Method he shews them a bad Example on their very Admission into the Office, and introduces them by Corruption in the first Instance, even by the very Act of Administring the Oath to them.

If this Great Officer should be liable to no other Punishment, than an Incapacity of Nominating again to the same Office, the Act would have little Effect, and that Penalty would signify very little; since his own Office is during Pleasure.

My Lords, I shall now proceed to reply to the Defence that has been made on the Thirteenth and all the subsequent Articles, which is the Province more particularly assigned to me.

The Charge in the Thirteenth Article is, That upon the Failure of Dormer, instead of taking proper Steps for obtaining a Satisfaction by regular and justifiable Methods, the Earl of Macclesfield neglected and declined those Methods, and by many indirect Practices endeavoured to conceal the true State and Condition of the Office; lest a publick Discovery of the Deficiency should lessen the unjust Gains he proposed to make by the Sale of the Offices of Masters in Chancery.

Upon this Article the impeached Lord has said, he thinks it hard that these Miscarriages should be charged upon him, that this Affair about Dormer was a Misfortune that might have happened in any other Chancellor's Time, and not his Fault.

My Lords, If this Unfortunate Lord had done what became him in his high Station upon the Failure of this Master, God forbid that the Misfortune upon the Office should any ways have been laid to his Charge; if he had been desirous to have proceeded in a regular Method, he might very easily have done it; the Paths of Virtue and Justice would have been easy, he need not have found himself at the End of Four Years surrounded with such insuperable Difficulties.

If a fair, plain, and open Method had been taken for enquiring into and stating the Debt due to the Suitors, and the Account of Dormer's Effects to satisfy it, there could have been no Danger to the Chancellor, whatever the Deficiency had been; but the Truth was, he could not part with those vast and exorbitant Prices, to which he had at that Time raised the Places of Masters; he found the sweet of that Gain, and was willing to run some Hazard for it.

Tho' it was known that Dormer was gone, yet the quantum of the Deficiency was not known; and if it had been publick, the Money might might probably have been taken out of the Master's Hands; a Parliamentary Enquiry might have ensued, and he might have lost those exorbitant Profits, which he afterwards actually made of those Places; and these were the true Reasons of the Concealment, and of the clandestine Proceedings that followed; nothing else hindered him from proceeding with Safety to himself by regular Orders of the Court. When Orders of Court are regularly made, there is a quick Way of putting them in Execution: It has been observed by the Councel in this Case, that it is more expeditious against an Officer of the Court, than another; and it is certainly so. There might have been a Sequestration against Dormer in a very little Time, and that would have intituled the Court to the Possession of his Effects for the Benefit of the Suitors; which in a great Measure answers what was objected of the Necessity of Dormer's coming over, and having his Liberty in Order to transfer his Stock. It was likewise said, that it was necessary for the Discovery of his Effects; and yet when he did come over, he was never examined on Interrogatories. Surely if a Chancellor will take upon him to grant a Man his Liberty, when he is to make Satisfaction to the Suitors, he ought to take care that the Consideration for the granting him his Liberty should be performed.

But it is said, What Harm has happened by not taking those Methods?

My Lords, Here are two remarkable Instances of the Consequences of this Neglect, by which it appears neither the Debt to the Suitors was known, nor the quantum of the Effects that there were to pay it.

Mr. Edwards told your Lordships, That the Deficiency of Dormer was at first about 25000 l. but that about a Month ago he discovered a farther Debt of about 1500 l. here there is a very great Deficiency concealed: On the other side the Effects of Mr. Dormer, that should have gone towards paying this Debt, have been concealed and lessened by the want of such an Examination. Your Lordships heard the Evidence about the Parcels of Hops belonging to Dormer, that were worth Seven or Eight Hundred Pounds, that lay concealed Four Years, and were not discovered till lately. The Councel, indeed, said, They were only a Parcel of musty Hops that have been found. But if he had been examined on Interrogatories, in all Probability, he would have discovered them at first, and they had been worth 5 or 600 l. more than now, and the Suitors would have had the Benefit of them; 5, or 600 l. is a considerable Sum in Mr. Dormer's Effects; and no one can tell but there might be other Instances of the like Kind.

What is the Answer his Lordship gives to this gross and wilful Neglect? He tells Your Lordships, That he gave Directions to the two Senior Masters to make Enquiry into Dormer's Affairs and Accounts; He left it to them, and that they did not think it requisite to examine him upon Interrogatories, or to use him with Hardship.

It is very extraordinary, that in a Matter of that great Concern, he should content himself with a parol Direction; Orders from a Lord Chancellor, that are in Earnest, are always in Writing; nor can they be enforced unless they are so; and therefore there must be some private Reasons for these extraordinary Proceedings.

Another Thing that was insisted on, was, That the Earl (as he expresses it in his Answer) was made to believe that the Masters would make good the Deficiency. What Reason had he to believe it? They never told him so; in a Matter of that Moment he had no reason to depend on an hear-say Evidence. He knew this was to be an Undertaking for the Debt of another; which could not by Law be Obligatory, unless reduced into Writing.

My Lords, I cannot account for these Things either in the Chancellor, or those Masters that had the Management of this Affair, unless it be (as the Article charges) to conceal the Deficiency of the Office, I mean, the quantum of that Deficiency; and that both the Chancellor and the two Senior Masters thought it their Interest to do so, that all of them might share in the Sale of the Places; the Two Senior Masters were desirous (as was mentioned by the Evidence) to sell out, and the Chancellor was ready to receive his Share of the Money.

The Fourteenth Article is the Article about the Composition with Wilson; and I must beg Leave to say, notwithstanding what has been insisted upon, That it is a clandestine, unusual, and unwarrantable Proceeding. We did take the Liberty on our Evidence to this Article to observe to Your Lordships, That the Petition of Mr. Edwards (on which this Composition is founded) takes notice that Dormer was indebted to the Suitors of the Court in several considerable Sums of Money; which should have been a Caution to the Chancellor to have taken a more than ordinary Care in this Matter; but instead of that, there is not any one Order, Affidavit, Report, or any one Proceeding, that appears upon Record throughout this whole Affair.

The Report produced appeared to be the Original under Mr. Hiccocks's Hand, which was a Demonstration that it was not filed at the Time when the Order was made for establishing this Composition, nor has been since.

My Lords, If there be but an Affidavit annexed to a Petition, care is usually taken to order that it shall be filed; but it was not thought convenient in this Case to have any thing publick.

My Lords, The Earl of Macclesfield in his Defence to this Article begun with a Copy of a Judgment obtained by Wilson against Poulter, that was signed 22 December 1721, and is for 18,774 l. whereas the Debt pretended to be assigned by Wilson, is 22,060 l. So that tho' the Judgment was for all that Wilson could pretend to (for ought appears) yet the Debt pretended to be assigned, is mentioned to be above 3000 l. more than what the Judgment is for; which is a farther Objection to this Composition, that did not appear before.

The next Point the Earl examined to, was the Sufficiency of Poulter, in order to prove the Assignment of Poulter's Debt to be valuable; and there were two or three Brokers produced on this Account.

They were very unlucky Witnesses to prove the Man's Ability, for they happened to be the very Persons to whom he had declared his Insolvency; one of them (Scott) was employed to go to Mr. Wilson to Compound with him.

But then a very notable Distinction was taken by the Earl himself, That tho' Poulter discloſed to theſe Witneſſes that he was Inſolvent, and that they were let into the Secret; yet all other People took him to be a good Man. The Evidence produced to prove this, were only thoſe that knew he was Inſolvent, and not One of all thoſe others that it is ſaid took him to be Solvent.

But we hope we have made it plain (and if it were neceſſary, we could make it clear beyond Diſpute) that Poulter was a broken Man at that time.

Another Objection was, How does it appear that a better Compoſition could have been made?

My Lords, Thoſe that preſume to take upon them, without a lawful Authority, to make a Compoſition to bind the Parties concerned, ought to make it appear to be a very good one; but on the contrary it appeared in this Caſe on the Examination of Mr. Edwards, that Wilſon (when he was afterwards charged with it) owned he had paid ſeveral others their full Debts; and 'tis notorious that he kept his Shop open till lately.

My Lords, The Anſwer to our Objection, That no notice was given to the Suitors, of this Reference about the Compoſition, carried in it (I thought) ſomething extraordinary. It was ſaid both by the Earl of Macclesfield and his Councel, That whatever the Lord Chancellor did, could not bind the Suitors, they not having notice, and therefore the Suitors might recover the whole from Wilſon, and no body was hurt.

My Lords, There is ſomething very ſhocking in this Excuſe, it ſtrikes ſome Horror to think, that this poor ignorant Man (Wilſon) ſhould be made to believe upon the Faith of a Court of Juſtice, that his Compoſition was in full Diſcharge of his Debt, if there was at the ſame time a Reſerve, that it might be ſet aſide for want of notice to the Suitors; the Excuſe ſeems to carry in it a greater Guilt than the Crime charged. This unfortunate Man (Wilſon) was living at the Beginning of this Tryal, but has ſince laid violent Hands on himſelf, and he is dead: I make no Reflection what might be the Occaſion of it.

My Lords, I did mention that upon the Abſolute Order made for Mr. Edwards accepting this Compoſition, it was ordered to be accepted with this Addition to the Order, viz. Of which give Notice forthwith. I mentioned it, that the Earl might have explained what he meant by directing Notice after the Compoſition was ordered to be accepted, or to whom Notice was intended to be given; I have heard no Anſwer to that, but what the Earl was pleaſed to ſay about the Articles, that on reading them he thought he had been charged with compelling Mr. Edwards to accept of a Compoſition without Notice to him; whereas it was done on the Petition of Edwards. My Lords, the Notice ſhould have been given to the Suitors, and that before the Compoſition was ordered to be accepted; that is what the Article charges, and what the Managers inſiſt on, and no Anſwer is given to that Objection.

It was ſaid, That if it had been ſet down to be heard in the ordinary Courſe (it being the Third of Auguſt) in Vacation-Time, it could not have come on till the next Term.

I believe that Lord knows it has very often happened, that particular Petitions have been heard in Vacation-Time, if Neceſſity required it; and I don't underſtand why there needed to be ſuch a Fondneſs for having this done ſo much in haſt, unleſs it were for the Purpoſes charged in the Articles. There was likewiſe ſomething ſaid by the Earl of the ſtriking out of the Prayer of Indemnification, that if it were juſtifiable, it needed no Order to indemnify, and if it were not juſtifiable, it ought not to be in; but what we ſay is, that it looks like a Diffidence whether it was juſtifiable or not, and ſince it was put into the Prayer of the Petition that Mr. Edwards might be indemnified, if the Chancellor thought it not juſtifiable, he ought to have let Mr. Edwards know it, as much as he ought to have let Mr. Wilſon have known that the Compoſition would not be good without the Suitors being Parties. As there is no tolerable Account given for ſuch an extraordinary Proceeding, we ſubmit to Your Lordſhips, whether it is not rightly charged to be for the unlawful Purpoſes mentioned in the Articles. If a Commiſſion of Bankrupcy had been taken out againſt Wilſon, the quantum of the Debt to Dormer, and conſequently of the Loſs of the Suitors muſt have been known, and other Suitors might have been alarmed, and a thorough Reformation might have happened; which might have ended in the taking away the Money from the Maſters, and the Price of the Places would have been lowered, which was always moſt carefully avoided.

My Lords, I now proceed to reply to the Defence made on the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Seventeenth Articles.

The Fifteenth Article is, That after the Failure of Dormer, the Earl of Macclesfield, in order to carry on his corrupt and unjuſt Purpoſes, and to conceal the Deficiency, did call for the Accounts of the Maſters, not with any Intent of Examining them, or to ſecure their Effects, but to terrify the Maſters and oblige them to contribute 500 l. apiece; and after that Purpoſe was ſerved, did not oblige them to bring in their Accounts.

The Sixteenth is, That he perſuaded the Maſters to pay the 1000 l. ordered to Mrs. Chitty for the like Purpoſes.

And the Sevententh is, For letting all the Money belonging to Dormer be paid away to ſome of the Suitors, without obſerving a Proportion, to which all were equally intitled.

To the Fifteenth the Earl of Macclesfield ſays in his Anſwer, That he did really call for the Accompts with an Intent to examine them, and that he might regulate Matters, and that after the 500 l. was paid, ſtill he called for the Accompts; for that there was a Letter ſent in November 1721, to the Maſters inſiſting upon having them; but as to this ſecond Letter, as Mr. Cottingham did not ſpeak at all poſitively to it, but that he believed, but could not be poſitive, that it was ſent, and that he had taken no Memorandum of it, &c. we muſt beg leave to acquaint Your Lordſhips, that this ſecond Letter was never ſent; and every One of the Maſters will give Your Lordſhips that Account: But ſuppoſing it had been ſent, can any one imagine that the Chancellor would not have purſued that Direction, and have had thoſe Accompts, if he had really intended it? What is the Excuſe at laſt? He had required ſo many Particulars in the Accompts, that it was almoſt impracticable to do it. My Lords, if the Charge in the Articles be true, it anſwered the Deſign the better, that it ſhould be difficult; we ſay it was done to get from the Maſters 500 l. apiece to quiet Matters for the preſent, ſent, and when that was done, there was no more Uſe made of that Order. But what is moſt wonderful of all is, that tho' in Four Years Time it was ſo difficult a Work that it could not be done; yet when the Committee of Council had called for the Accompts, the Earl of Macclesfield uſed ſuch Diligence, that he procured them to be ready in a Week's Time; and tho' all the Directions and Particulars which he had required, were not obſerved, yet it ſeems they were all that were neceſſary and ſufficient, and it was hoped ſuch as would prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry.

The Earl in his Anſwer values himſelf much upon this Expedition, not conſidering how inconſiſtent it was with the Difficulties which were made an Excuſe for not having it done Four Years before.

It was inſiſted on upon this Head, that Mr. Lightboun did not pay, and yet he brought in no Account; but however Nine of the Maſters did pay, and the Chancellor well knew it would have looked very partial to have proceeded againſt one ſingle Maſter, and not the reſt; that would have been too barefaced, and ſo Mr. Lightboun eſcaped too; beſides there was not a Total Deſpair even of him, for he was ſeveral Times afterwards ſpoke to about making good his 500 l.

It was ſaid likewiſe, the Buſineſs of the Court muſt have been at a Stand, if theſe Accompts had been purſued.

My Lords, If it had been ſo, it had been more for the Reputation of the Court, and for the Benefit of the Suitors in general, to have had ſome Time employed about this neceſſary Work; and if there had been a willing Mind, one long Vacation would have been ſufficient without any Interruption to the Buſineſs of the Court.

After all theſe Excuſes the Earl is pleaſed to ſay, if he had taken the Accompts, it would have ſignified nothing unleſs he went farther.

My Lords, If he never begun, he could never bring any Thing to Perfection; and in his Anſwer he confeſſes, it was neceſſary to have the Accompts in Order to make Regulations. But after all he is forced to come to this Concluſion (as he ſays in his Anſwer) to go on in the ſame Road his Predeceſſors had done; tho', by the way, it has appeared to Your Lordſhips that it is not the ſame Road; for his two immediate Predeceſſors did call for the Accompts, and had them.

The Sixteenth Article is grounded on the Perſuaſions to pay 1000 l. (ordered to Mrs. Chitty) to prevent a Parliamentary or publick Enquiry, and that the Earl afterwards paid the ſame himſelf to Mr. Lockman, &c.

My Lords, We called Six or Seven Witneſſes to this Article, and did obſerve at that Time the Earl in his Anſwer ſaid, He believed he did not perſuade the Maſters to pay this 1000 l. And his Lordſhip was pleaſed to ſay, when he ſpoke in his Defence, That he ſtill believed, that he did not perſuade them to pay it.

My Lords, It is very ſtrange that there ſhould be any Doubt made of it; the Occaſion of the Meeting, and the Nature of the Thing plainly ſhews it. Firſt Mr. Cottingham went to Mr. Lightboun, and told him, that there was a preſent Occaſion for this 1000 l. that it was propoſed he ſhould pay the 500 l. (which he ſhould have paid before) and the other Maſters 50 l. apiece, which would make up the 1000 l. When the Maſters were going to the Lord Chancellor's, they diſcourſed among themſelves, that their going was upon Occaſion of another Call for Money.

When the Chancellor came to them, he mentioned the preſſing Neceſſity there was for paying this 1000 l.

Mr. Edwards particularly ſays, that he repreſented to them this Matter of 1000 l. as a Thing of Conſequence, a very preſſing Occaſion of a Sum of Money immediately to be paid; he ſaid, I do not know what the Conſequence may be; Clamours begin to grow ſtrong. I do not know but it may come to a Parliamentary Enquiry. Mr. Lovibond ſays, that my Lord told them, This was a Matter that required great Expedition, for one that belonged to the Prince's Court, and all of them underſtood there was a Propoſal to pay the 1000 l. and that was the Occaſion of the Meeting. All the Maſters that have been examined on this Head confirm it.

What is it that is to evade all this Evidence? It is only this poor Shift, I did not (ſays the Noble Lord) perſuade them to pay the 1000 l. but I perſuaded them to pay all Dormer's Deficiency.

My Lords, There is no Evidence to ſupport this Diſtinction, but on the contrary, there were Arguments uſed for the advancing of this Money. And if he was not able to perſuade them to pay this 1000 l. there was no Likelyhood of prevailing on them to pay the whole.

My Lords, Another Matter inſiſted on in Relation to this Article was, that the Money, which was paid to Lockman, was paid out of Compaſſion; Lockman ſays he took it as his Due, and I think he was in the right; he gave an Aſſignment of the Order, when it was paid; and certainly this can in no Sort be added to the Liſt of this Noble Lord's Charities that he has been pleaſed to publiſh; but the Diſcourſe with the Maſters before ſhews plainly what were his Inducements for paying it; he feared the Conſequence if it were not paid, and choſe rather to do it, than venture thoſe Enquiries that the not paying it might occaſion.

I think the Earl ſeems to agree in Subſtance to the Declaration at the End of the Articles, That was made the Fifth of December laſt, viz. that he had heard of Dormer's Deficiency, but knew nothing of it but as Publick News, &c. A ſtrange Declaration to come from the Bench at the End of Four Years, during which Time were all theſe Tranſactions about Dormer's Deficiency! Then it was that he was pleaſed to refer it to Mr. Edwards, to enquire whether there was likely to be a Loſs of any Money, when at that Time he knew very well that all Dormer's Money was gone, and Mr. Edwards had none in his Hands.

The Seventeenth Article is for ordering and permitting Dormer's Money to be paid out without Regard to Proportion; this was a manifeſt Injuſtice, and ſo diſcourſed of between this Lord himſelf and Mr. Edwards; and the Anſwer that is given to it is, That we have produced but Four Orders made by the impeached Lord for ſuch Payments.

My Lords, I think it not material whether the Orders were made by himſelf, or the Court; he was warned ſeveral Times of the Conſequence; he took the Management of theſe Matters to himſelf, and let Things run on, hoping the Money would laſt his Time; and now all is gone, and paid away, and many diſtreſſed People are left without any thing. In the Cauſe of Jett and Jones, the Orders that were read, appeared to be made by this Lord himſelf; and the Parties have been ſo lucky as to have got their whole Money, whilſt others are in the utmoſt Neceſſity without any Subſiſtance.

The Conſequence is, that the reſt of the Suitors, who were intitled to an equal Proportion, have no Remedy for it. What may be done for them in Charity and Compaſſion is of another Conſideration; but their legal Right is taken away by him that ſhould have protected them.

An Objection was made by the Councel, That there was no fixed Fund of Dormer's Effects, from which to have ſettled a Rule of Proportion. This is excuſing one Fault by another: Firſt, Care is taken not to have an Accompt ſettled; and then that is made an Excuſe for not ſettling a Proportion.

The Eighteenth Article relates to the Maſters trafficking with the Money; which was as notorious, as that there was ſuch a Place as Exchange-alley.

The Year 1720 has been mentioned both by the Earl and his Councel, and it was ſo fatal a Year, that ſurely, if a Reformation were ever to be made, it ſhould have been upon that Occaſion. I think there is but little Difference, whether they traded with the Money themſelves, or put it into another's Hands at high Intereſt, and permitted them to trade with it. Could any one imagine that Dormer let 24,000 l. lie in Wilſon's Hands for nothing? Mr. Cottingham upon the Examination of my Lord's own Councel gave Evidence, that Wilſon inſiſted he allowed high Intereſt for it. And it was well known it was in the Power of all the Maſters to traffick with the Money, and this after expreſs Warning by one of the Maſters to the Chancellor not only by Word of Mouth, but by Letter written (as I take it) in 1722. But every Thing of a Regulation of that Kind was liable to Objection; one Thing that was propoſed was ſo eaſy to be done, that there is no Excuſe it was not complied with, which is in Relation to the Securities, by placing them in two or three Names, which would have prevented the Maſters from diſpoſing of the Securities.

This might very eaſily have been done. The only Anſwer that was given, was, that it would not anſwer all the Securities.

This was made a Reaſon for doing of nothing, and there was ſuch a Backwardneſs to do any Thing of this Kind, that the meaneſt and moſt trifling Excuſe was ſufficient to ſatisfy his Lordſhip, not to take any Step towards it.

My Lords, Upon this Article the impeached Lord was pleaſed to mention ſome of his Predeceſſors, and alſo his Succeſſors; as to his two immediate Predeceſſors, he doubts the taking the Accompts by him in the manner they did, would have been thought of no Uſe.

My Lords, I am apt to believe a good Uſe might have been made of it; it would have put a Check and Reſtraint upon the Maſters, they would have acted with more Caution, when they knew the Ballance was a Charge upon them, and that it might be called for at any Time; and if his Lordſhip had thoſe Accompts, I dare ſay he would have ſeen that there was ten Times as much Caſh in the Maſters Diſpoſal, as there was in one of thoſe Predeceſſor's Time. And it might have been of Uſe to him to have ſeen what prodigious Sums of Money were in their Hands, and how great the Danger was.

As to the preſent Commiſſioners, the Noble Lord was pleaſed to ſay, the Difficulties of making the Maſters Accompt have appeared by their Proceedings.

My Lords, They have been ſufficiently taken up with endeavouring to compel the Maſters to give Security for the Deficiencies incurred in this Lord's Time. The Difficulty was not ſo much in taking an Accompt, as in making good the Deficiency.

They have been forced to take what Security they could get from the Maſters from Time to Time, and I wiſh the Deficiency do not ſtill come out worſe than is expected; no one can yet ſay what it will be.

My Lords, The Nineteenth Article was founded on the Endeavours of the Lord impeached, to deceive His Majeſty in Council, by perſuading the Maſters to make falſe Repreſentations of their Circumſtances to His Majeſty, by a Subſcription to their Accompts, and by aſſiſting one another to make an Appearance of Ability.

This, My Lords, was the ſad Concluſion of this long Scene of Iniquity; when it was become neceſſary, and it was no longer to be avoided; that there ſhould be Accompts delivered in. There is an Attendance on the Chancellor; and one of the Maſters having concluded his Accompt with a Repreſentation of his Ability and Readineſs to pay the Money, the reſt are perſuaded to do it in the like manner, without ſo much as asking them concerning the Truth of it; and there is one Inſtance that was very remarkable, which was in the Caſe of Mr. Lovibond, that where he of his own Accord could go no farther, than to ſay he was able to pay or give Security to pay; that was not thought ſufficient by this Lord, becauſe it would imply a Diffidence that the Money was not then forth coming; and therefore thoſe Words about Security were not to be mentioned. Others of them that were no ways capable of producing the Money, were induced to make the like Subſcription.

When it was expected the Money ſhould be produced, then Mr. Dixon and Mr. Cottingham have a Meeting with the Maſters to conſult what was to be done; then it was that Propoſals were made for the Maſters to aſſiſt each other, and to get Goldſmiths Notes and other Effects to ſhew to the Judges.

It has been objected, that the Managers did not think fit to call Mr. Cottingham and Mr. Dixon.

My Lords, We called the Maſters that were preſent at that Meeting, who gave Your Lordſhips an Account of that Tranſaction, and it turns the Objection upon the impeached Lord, that he did not think fit to call Mr. Cottingham and Mr. Dixon (that were his Servants and Agents) to contradict that Evidence; if this Lord had no Concern in that Matter, he would certainly have called them to that Purpoſe, and his not

not examining them to it greatly confirms our Evidence.

Your Lordships may remember the many Inconsistencies, Evasions, Equivocations, and Insufficiencies in his Lordship's Answer to the Articles of Impeachment, which have been observed and plainly made out by the Managers for the Commons.

My Lords, He was pleased to make a Distinction between an Answer to Articles of Impeachment, and an Answer to a Bill in Chancery; that the Plaintiff in a Cause had a Right to a full and plain Discovery, but that the Case before Your Lordships differs. My Lords, I would beg leave to mention, that there was an Instance of an Impeachment before Your Lordships, in which the Lord now impeached had a great Share in the Reply, wherein he laid very great Stress upon the Insufficiency and Evasions in the Answer. The Person then impeached had very hard Names given to him on that Account, and even his Silence was insisted on as a Confession of his Crimes.

As to the Noble Lord's Charities I beg leave to say, that as it is a great Addition to the Merit of Charity, to have it kept private, it was the more extraordinary these Charities should be now published; because I do not see they are any ways material to the Matters before Your Lordships. Here are plain Facts charged and proved, and if in a Case of this Kind these Charities are to wipe off the Charge, it is a Kind of Commutation that has not been before heard of. My Lords, he that would be the most meritoriously charitable, should first be just. The Lord should have first considered those Suitors that he had injured, he should first have made Satisfaction to them, and then have offered his Gifts.

Thus we have endeavoured to lay before Your Lordships the whole Circumstances of this Case; there needs no Eloquence to aggravate the Crimes; I pretend to none; but the Cries of Widows and Orphans will have the most persuasive Eloquence, and when they have Justice on their Side, they will have Weight with Your Lordships.

My Lords, The Case before Your Lordships is founded on Corruption, and a Series of Fraud to support that Corruption. The People had long murmured at it, but the Grievance increased at last to such an intolerable Degree, that it became a National Concern, and there was an unavoidable Necessity of a Parliamentary Prosecution.

My Lords, The Commons hope they have done their Duty in bringing it here, and we hope Your Lordships will give such Judgment, as will be consistent with Your Lordships Honour and Justice.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We shall beg Leave to call a Witness or two, the first to the Imputation endeavoured to be thrown upon Mr. Thomas Bennet's Character, in Relation to the Discourse that passed between him and the Earl. We shall shew that he declared it at that very Time, or soon after, the Lord had spoke it to him. We desire also to examine Mr. Lucas, who applied for the Master's Place. It was insisted, That the Earl was offered 6000 l. and actually refused to take it; but took 5000 l. from Mr. Elde and Mr. Thurston for the Master's Office: We shall shew how that happen'd.

Mr. Richard Lucas Sworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We desire that you would inform my Lords, whether you made any Application to the Earl of Macclesfield, or to Mr. Cottingham, about coming into the Master's Office at the Time when Mr. Elde or Mr. Thurston were admitted, and what passed.

Mr. Richard Lucas. My Lords, Upon the Death of Mr. Fellowes, being persuaded by some Friends to make an Application for the Office vacant by his Death, I did go immediately to Mr. Cottingham; my Lord Macclesfield being then out of Town, I thought it proper to go to his Secretary.

Lord Ch. Justice King. Please to speak up.

Mr. Richard Lucas. I say, upon the Death of Mr. Fellowes, I was persuaded by some Friends to make Application for the Master's Place; and upon that, I went to Mr. Cottingham, and told him the Affair I came about. He told me, Mr. Lucas, you know you have formerly had some talk with me about an Affair of this Nature; it is to no Purpose for me to recommend you to my Lord, unless you bid more than formerly you have done. Upon that I immediately told him, I was ready to give 6000 l. There was some Talk passed between us besides, but it being so long ago, and not expecting to be called to give an account of it, I cannot now recollect it. One Thing I can recollect, that he intimated to me, That my Lord Macclesfield had some Intentions of making some Orders, or doing somewhat that should be for the Ease or Advantage of the Masters; but his Lordship would not do it at that Time, because it would look as if he had an Intention of making Advantage of that Vacancy. A Day or two afterwards I met Mr. Cottingham in the Hall, and asked him, If he had spoke to my Lord about me? He told me, he had; but that my Lord was pleased to enquire into my Circumstances, and did think it proper that some Security should be given by the Masters; and I being immediately to be put in by his Lordship, it was the more incumbent upon him, to see what Security I was able to give. Upon that I waited upon him to know what Security was expected: He mentioned to me 10,000 l. Security. I told him, That after such time as I had parted with 6000 l. I could not take upon me to say, I could myself make up a Security to the Value of 10,000 l. but what with the Assistance of Friends, and mine own Estate, I might possibly do it. Upon talking of the Matter with my Mother, she was very willing to joyn in the Security. Upon that I wrote a Letter, I cannot remember whether it was directed to my Lord Macclesfield, or to his Secretary; but to one or the other it was. I sent it by my Servant, and I was informed by Mr. Cottingham, That his Lordship had a Sight of it. But afterwards being uneasy at giving so large a Sum of Money, and considering, from the Talk that then was, that these Masters might come into Parliament, I was advised, and I thought it proper, to have some better Hold upon his Lordship, to make some Return, in Case any thing should happen to lessen the Value of the Place: Upon that, I did

did write a Letter, I cannot remember the whole Contents; but I pretty well remember the Subſtance, which was, That I would undertake to give the Security required to the amount of 10,000 l. I believe, I did alſo mention my real Eſtate, which was near 300 l. a Year, to be a Part of the Security, and I did add, That notwithſtanding the preſent Diſputes between the Maſter of the Rolls and the other Maſters, and the Talk there was of bringing it into Parliament, I was not at all uneaſy; becauſe I could ſecurely depend upon his Lordſhip's Generoſity, that he would take it into his Conſideration, in Caſe any thing happened amiſs in the next Seſſion of Parliament; I can't remember exactly the Words, but my Lord Macclesfield has the Letter, if I am miſtaken, his Lordſhip will ſet me right.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Upon this Letter of your Expectation of being repaired, if any thing happened, had you any Anſwer?

Mr. R. Lucas. The next thing I heard, was, That Mr. Elde was in the Place, and Mr. Cottingham was pleaſed to ſay, he was a particular Acquaintance of my Lords, and therefore had it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When Mr. Cottingham told you this, what Anſwer did he return as to my Lord's Approbation of the Propoſal?

Mr. R. Lucas. He ſaid, to the beſt of my Remembrance, That my Lord was pleaſed that I offered 6000 l. at once, provided I would give Security, if that ſhould be thought proper.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Since you was diſappointed when Mr. Elde came in, what paſſed when Mr. Thurſton came in? whether did you renew your Application then?

Mr. R. Lucas. I was, with abundance of Regret and Fear, prevailed upon to renew my Application.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What were your Fears?

Mr. R. Lucas. My Fear was about the bringing this Matter into Parliament, and that I did not know what Effect that might have upon the Profits of the Place. Upon that, my Brother told me, he was acquainted with Mr. Ellis, his Lordſhip's Chaplain, and if I pleaſed, he would go to him, and get him to ſpeak to my Lord about it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Directions did you give to your Brother as to offering any thing, and upon what Terms?

Mr. Ric. Lucas. I cannot ſay whether my Brother had a direct Commiſſion from me to mention that I was then ready to give 6000 l. but it was my Apprehenſion, and the Apprehenſion of all thoſe that knew this Affair, that I ſhould not come in under ſo much; I am not very poſitive that ſuch a Direction was given. I did mention another thing to my Brother, to acquaint Mr. Ellis, that I had heard more of the Deficiencies in the ſeveral Offices of the Maſters, and that I was not without Apprehenſion, that if I ſhould give 6000 l. to come into this Place, I might from time to time be called upon for ſeveral Sums of Money in order to make good paſt Deficiencies; and I thought that it would be unreaſonable for me to be brought into any Contribution for making good thoſe Deficiencies, when I had no Concern in them. I then deſired it might be mentioned. As for the Anſwer, I never ſaw Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Orders did you give to your Brother? Did you give him any Order to pay the Money without Conſideration of being liable to the Deficiencies?

Mr. R. Lucas. I gave him no Order at all, I thought it was not come to bear yet.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was there any Thing paſſed after that?

Mr. R. Lucas. I conceive, my Lords, you won't think it proper for me to give an Account of what paſſed between Mr. Ellis and my Brother.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire to know, whether your Brother had any Orders or Directions from you to go on?

Mr. R. Lucas. I have told you every Thing I can recollect; I only told him, I deſired him to ſpeak to Mr. Ellis to recommend me to his Lordſhip upon the Foot, I have mentioned, viz. on the Foot of the former Propoſals.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Had your Brother any Authority from you to give 6000 l. without being ſecured from the Deficiencies?

Mr. R. Lucas. Six thouſand Pounds was the Sum to be given, and I deſired my Brother to mention the Deficiencies, and that I ſhould not be underſtood to be ſubject to any of them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was it to be given abſolutely without Reſerve, or with Regard to be ſecured from the Deficiencies?

Mr. R. Lucas. I did deſire that the Buſineſs of the Deficiency might be explained, and that it might be underſtood that I would not be anſwerable for any of them.

Mr. Edward Lucas ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire you would inform my Lords, whether you received any, and what Directions from your Brother, upon the laſt Vacancy, when Mr. Thurſton came in, of the making Propoſals for your Brother's coming into that Office?

Mr. E. Lucas. Soon after Mr. Borret's Death, my Brother expreſſed an Inclination to me of ſucceeding in that Office: I told him, I had an Acquaintance with Mr. Ellis, my Lord Macclesfield Chaplain. And if he would give me any Commiſſion I would communicate it to Mr. Ellis, I believing that a proper Way of Communicating it to my Lord. My Brother did deſire me to go to Mr. Ellis, and to inform him myſelf, that he had ſo juſt a Senſe of my Lord's Honour and Generoſity, that he believed he might leave the Terms to be fixed by my Lord himſelf. I went to Mr. Ellis, and did tell him as my Brother had deſired me. Mr. Ellis ſaid, He did not much care to concern himſelf in the Affair; if it had been to recommend to a Living, it might be proper for him; but this was out of his Province. I acquainted him with what Steps my Brother had formerly taken, in order to obtain one of theſe Offices, and explained to him the Nature of the Thing, and perſuaded him to lay this Matter before his Lordſhip. Upon which he was then pleaſed to ſay, He would go to my Lord (who was at Kenſington) the next Day, and bring me an Anſwer.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Had he any Directions either as to the Price, or the Terms?

Mr. E. Lucas. I don't know of any Directions the had, either as to the Price, or the Terms.

Mr.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What did you ſay about the Security, and the Deficiencies in the ſeveral Offices?

Mr. E. Lucas. This was another Converſation, about a Week, or Ten Days after; after Mr. Ellis had brought me an Anſwer, then I remember my Brother gave me Directions to conſult with Mr. Ellis, whether it was not proper to make my Lord a direct Offer of 6000 l. but then it would be reaſonable, that he ſhould be indemnified or ſecured from any Damage, or Deficiency by any of the Precedent Maſters; and that he ſhould not be called upon to make good any ſuch Deficiency. I told Mr. Ellis this, and he ſaid, there was no Room for this, there might be Deficiencies in ſome other of the Offices, but he had heard, there was no Deficiency in Mr. Borret's Office. I had likewiſe heard ſo, but whether there was a Deficiency or not, I could not tell; my Brother was willing to enter into a Treaty with my Lord upon theſe Terms.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did you hear any Thing more about it?

Mr. E. Lucas. About a Week after Mr. Ellis writ to me, That my Lord Macclesfield had approved of Mr. Thurſton.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Pleaſe to recollect, whether your Direction was about Borret's Deficiency only, or about all the Deficiencies in general?

Mr. E. Lucas. My Directions from my Brother were about all the Deficiencies; Dormer's Deficiency ran in his Head, and he thought it unreaſonable, that he ſhould be obliged to contribute to any Deficiency precedent to his coming in Maſter.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did you communicate this to Mr. Ellis?

Mr. E. Lucas. I did communicate it to Mr. Ellis; if not in ſuch expreſs Terms, yet to that Effect, that it was unreaſonable, that my Brother ſhould be obliged to contribute to make up thoſe Deficiencies that were preceding to his being Maſter; I am ſure, I added thoſe Words, That he ſhould not be obliged to contribute to make up thoſe Deficiencies that were precedent to his being Maſter.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I ſubmit, whether it be not proper, that Mr. Ellis be called before this Mr. Lucas goes away.

Mr. Ellis called, but not examined again immediately.

Earl of Macclesfield. Mr. Lucas, I deſire that you would declare to my Lords over again, what you have given in Evidence.

Mr. E. Lucas. The firſt Time I ſaw Mr. Ellis was at my Mother's Houſe, immediately after Mr. Borret's Death, I then told him of my Brother's Intention to purchaſe a Maſter's Place, and that my Brother had ſo thorough a Senſe of my Lord's Honour and Generoſity, that he would leave the Terms to my Lord himſelf. Mr. Ellis was not at firſt inclinable to concern himſelf in it, but upon telling him what Steps my Brother had taken in Regard to it; he ſaid out of Friendſhip to me he would engage in it, and go to my Lord, and bring me an Anſwer. This was the firſt Converſation. Mr. Ellis did the next Day bring me an Anſwer from my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was the Anſwer my Lord ſent?

Mr. E. Lucas. The Anſwer that Mr. Ellis brought was, That my Lord had no Objection to my Brother, he did remember that he had been formerly recommended to him, but that there was ſome other Perſon propoſed by ſome of the Maſters, of whom he expected a farther Recommendation, and could not now give any other Anſwer to it: He alſo told me, That he apprehended, if that Perſon did not ſucceed, my Brother might have the Refuſal. I ſaid it was indifferent whether my Brother then ſucceeded, or not; becauſe my Lord told him, That one or two Maſters were inclinable to ſell, and if they did, he might have an Opportunity of buying of thoſe Maſters. This paſſed on the Second Converſation.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Go on.

Mr. E. Lucas. The Third Converſation was ſometime afterwards at my Lord Macclesfield's own Houſe in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields. I went by my Brother's Directions meaning to conſult with Mr. Ellis in a friendly Manner, whether he did think it adviſeable to make his Lordſhip a direct Offer of 6000 l. I ſaid if he gave it, it was reaſonable, that he ſhould be indemnified from any Damage that ſhould happen by Reaſon of the Deficiency in any of the Offices, and not be obliged to contribute towards making them up; he ſaid my Lord had not ſpoken to him about that, that he could not have every Opportunity he deſired to ſpeak with him; that as to the Deficiencies, he had heard there was none. I ſaid, I had likewiſe heard ſo; but whether there was or no, my Brother was willing to enter into a Treaty with my Lord upon thoſe Terms. This to the beſt of my Remembrance is the whole I know of the Matter.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I only would beg leave to ask this Queſtion, When the firſt Propoſal was made to Mr. Ellis, whether he did propoſe a certain Sum?

Mr. E. Lucas. I don't remember I did; but I think I told Mr. Ellis my Brother had formerly offered 6000 l. and I told Mr. Ellis this, and did lay before him all the Circumſtances of that Affair, to make him the more inclinable to engage in it.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. I deſire he may be asked, whether any Terms beſides were mentioned than what Mr. Lucas has mentioned before?

Mr. E. Lucas. I don't remember there were any other Directions then given, I can't be poſitive, but that he was willing to leave it to my Lord's Honour and Generoſity. And my Lords I can ſwear poſitively, that till the firſt Day of theſe Proceedings, when I met Mr. Ellis in the Court of Requeſts, I never knew that he had offered my Lord Macclesfield 6000 l.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, we beg leave that Mr. Ellis may give an Account of what Propoſal he made to me from Mr. Lucas.

Mr. Ellis. My Lords, the Account Mr. Lucas has given Your Lordſhips is true in all the Particulars, as far as I can remember at this Diſtance of Time, though there are a good many that I could not have recollected of myſelf, only as to this one, his not impowering me to offer this 6000 l. I ſhould not have gone to my Lord, unleſs I had had ſome particular Offer to mention. I particularly remember I made him that Offer, and I am as certain, that Mr. Lucas did ſpeak to me to make the Offer of 6000 l. for this Reaſon, that I never knew that Mr. Lucas had offered 6000 l. before by Mr. Cottingham, till this Impeachment begun, when Mr. Lucas being here, acquainted me that he had made that Offer to my Lord.

Mr. E. Lucas. I deſire Mr. Ellis may be asked, whether ever he told me, that he offered Lord Macclesfield 6000 l.?

Mr. Ellis. I believe I only did tell him in general, that I had made his Lordſhip the Offer which he had deſired me to make, and in general likewiſe, that my Lord was well ſatisfied with it.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. I deſire he may inform Your Lordſhips, whether, when he told Mr. Lucas, that he had made that Offer which he had deſired him, he did enquire what that Offer was?

Mr. Ellis. No, my Lords, he did not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, they have called Mr. Ellis to confront Mr. Lucas; but they agree together in all the material Circumſtances. Mr. Ellis ſays, what Mr. Lucas ſwears is true in every Particular, unleſs in Relation to the Offer of 6000 l. In all the reſt Mr. Ellis confirms Mr. Lucas's Evidence.

Mr. E. Lucas. I don't poſitively ſwear that I did not give him that Commiſſion, but to the beſt of my Remembrance, I did not give him that Commiſſion.

Earl of Macclesfield. I deſire Mr. Ellis may be asked, when he made the Propoſal to me, whether he mentioned any Condition whatſoever?

Mr. Ellis. No, my Lords, I did not mention any Condition.

Mr. E. Lucas. Till after the firſt Converſation with Mr. Ellis, I had no Direction from my Brother to mention any Price or Condition; I gave an Account to Your Lordſhips of two different Converſations.

Earl of Macclesfield. When the Anſwer was brought, that I was ſatisfied with the Propoſal, what did he do farther upon it?

Mr. E. Lucas. My Lords, Mr. Ellis did not tell me, that my Lord Macclesfield was ſatisfied with the Propoſal, but that my Lord Macclesfield had no Objection to my Brother, and he had formerly received a Recommendation of him; but at preſent another Perſon was recommended by ſome of the Maſters, whom he expected to be farther recommended.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Ellis may be asked, how long, before Mr. Thurſton was admitted, was the Converſation about giving Security, that Mr. Lucas might be indemnified from the Deficiencies?

Mr. Ellis. My Lords, in one of the laſt Converſations, which was after I had ſpoken to my Lord Macclesfield, Mr. Lucas might ſay ſomething about having Security. But I don't recollect it with any Certainty; if he did, it was ſome Days before Mr. Thurſton was admitted.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may inform Your Lordſhips, Whether he ever told my Lord Macclesfield any thing of this Diſcourſe about Security?

Mr. Ellis. No.

Sir Geo. Ovenden. He ſays, He never told my Lord Macclesfield of that Converſation: I deſire to know, if he told my Lord Parker?

Mr. Ellis. No, my Lords, I told no body at all.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I beg Leave to make one Obſervation; a Learned Manager was pleaſed to obſerve upon the Appearance of theſe Two Witneſſes together, That now the Evidence of Mr. Lucas is confirmed by Mr. Ellis: Your Lordſhips are pleaſed to remember, that Mr. Ellis was our Witneſs, and was firſt examined; and therefore I ſhould apprehend the Obſervation may be turned much properer the other way: That the Evidence of Mr. Ellis, who was our Witneſs, and was firſt examined, is now confirmed by Mr. Lucas.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire he may inform Your Lordſhips with relation to the Diſcourſe that paſſed betwixt them about the Deficiencies; Whether the Objection did not relate ſingly to them?

Mr. Ellis. I don't well remember what paſſed upon the Subject of the Deficiencies; what I have ſaid to Your Lordſhips before, I remember full well, becauſe a particular Circumſtance made me recollect, that Mr. Lucas did ſay, he had heard there was no Deficiency in Mr. Borret's Office; which I had heard too; but at what time that Diſcourſe was, I can't recollect; it might be as he repreſented it.

Earl of Macclesfield. Mr. Lucas ſaid to you, That he was willing to treat upon thoſe Terms?

Mr. Edw. Lucas. Upon thoſe Terms, or to that Effect, I did ſay.

Mr. Plummer. I only would make this Obſervation; Both theſe Evidences confirm this, that Mr. Lucas was an Inquiſitive Man, and would not part with his 6000 l. ſo eaſily as to ask no Queſtions.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg Leave now to call a Witneſs as to the Second Letter or Order, ſuppoſed to be ſent in November 1721. to all the Maſters. Mr. Cottingham could not take upon himſelf to ſay, that it was delivered; he had kept a Memorandum of the firſt, but none of that, and he believed he might ſay, it was delivered; we deny any ſuch Letter was delivered, and beg Leave to ask as to that particular Point.

Mr. John Bennet called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether in November 1721. any Second Letter, or Order, of the Purport of the firſt Order, was ſent, or delivered, in Relation to the Maſters bringing in their Accompts?

Mr. J. Bennet. My Lords, I never ſaw any ſuch Letter.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did you ever hear of it?

Mr. J. Bennet. I never heard of it before, till I heard Mr. Cottingham read it at the Bar.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did you receive any Account from the other Maſters, that they had received any ſuch Letter?

Mr. J. Bennet. No, my Lords, never.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Do you recollect any Diſcourſe between my Lord Macclesfield and your Brother, relating to your Brother's Account?

Mr.

Mr. J. Bennet. I don't recollect the whole.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What do you recollect?

Mr. J. Bennet. My Lord hath declared to me, That he wondered Mr. Kinaſton and my Brother ſhould put ſuch an Item in their Accompts, which would make a Diſcovery, that the Maſters had bought their Places with the Money of the Court, which might be of miſchievous Conſequence; that whenever it was objected to him, he had always taken great Pains to deny it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was this? About what Time?

Mr. J. Bennet. About Chriſtmas laſt.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We beg leave to take Notice of the Nature of this Evidence, that it is very improper now, being new Evidence; not to the ſame Purpoſe to ſupport what was given before, but new Matter, and therefore not proper.

Mr. Lutwyche. We apprehend it is very proper, becauſe Mr. Thomas Bennet's was objected to, and this confirms his Evidence.

Mr. Holford called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked, whether this Letter, or Order, of November 1721. was ever communicated to him by Mr. Cottingham?

Mr. Holford. No, my Lords, I never heard of it till now lately.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. I deſire Mr. Holford would inform Your Lordſhips, whether there were not then ſeveral Maſters ſenior to him? and whether it is not uſual to leave thoſe Letters, or Orders, with the Senior Maſters?

Mr. Holford. I don't know that ſuch Order, or Letter, was left at that Time. Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Fellowes were Seniors to me.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. I deſire he may be asked the other Part of the Queſtion, Whether it is not uſual to leave Orders, wherein the Maſters are generally concerned, with the Senior Maſters?

Mr. Holford. It is not; but the Uſage generally is to be left at the Publick Office. It might be left with the Senior Maſter, for ought I know.

Mr. Lovibond called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did you ever hear or know of this Letter or Order of Nov. 1721?

Mr. Lovibond. I never heard of any ſuch Letter or Order, till I heard it read at this Bar.

Mr. Kinaſton called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Mr. Kinaſton, will you give my Lords an Account, whether you heard of this Letter or Order of Nov. 1721?

Mr. Kinaſton. I ſuppoſe you mean the Letter which Mr. Cottingham read.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The ſame.

Mr. Kinaſton. I never heard of it, till I heard it read at this Bar.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I hope this will explain Mr. Cottingham's Want of Memory, when he ſaid that he could not remember it.

Mr. Lightboun called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire to ask you, whether you know any Thing of this Letter of Nov. 1721?

Mr. Lightboun. I never heard of it, till I heard it at Your Lordſhips Bar from Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Edwards called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether he ever heard of this Letter of Nov. 1721?

Mr. Edwards. I never heard of ſuch a Letter, till I heard it mentioned at this Bar.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. So that, my Lords, we apprehend this Letter, when written by Mr. Cottingham, was a Pocket-Letter to be made uſe of on any proper Occaſion. The Managers have done with their Evidence and the Witneſſes, they ſhall call no more. We humbly apprehend, that we have cleared up the Reaſon, why the Lord took 5000 l. rather than 6000 l. it was from Hopes of greater Gain in having 5000 l. abſolutely, without being liable to refund, than 6000 l. liable to ſuch a Contingency. Upon the Evidence we ſubmit the whole Matter to Your Lordſhips Determination.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we will be ſhort in our Reflections upon this new Evidence. We apprehend their Evidence proves, what was inſiſted upon by us, that there was Care taken in diſpoſing of theſe Offices, and that my Lord Macclesfield having perſonal Knowledge of one Gentleman did prefer him before another, whom he did not know, tho' he had leſs Money from him, than he could have had of the other. It is agreed by Mr. Lucas and his Brother, that there was a propoſal of 6000 l. made upon this Occaſion: Mr. Ellis tells you, Mr. Lucas gave him Orders to propoſe it to my Lord Macclesfield without any Terms whatſoever: He never mentioned any Terms, or intimated any Condition or Reſtriction to my Lord Macclesfield. Upon that his Lordſhip was pleaſed to direct a proper Enquiry to be made, what Security he was able to give for the Diſcharge of his Offices; here there was 6000 l. propoſed without any Terms by one whom he did not know; but he preferred another whom he did know to be well qualified, for 5000 l. This doth not ſhew any Neglect in the noble Earl; but all the Care and Caution that ever could be taken; and this ſhews that the Earl could not do this out of an immoderate Deſire of Gain, when 6000 l. was propoſed to be given; but he preferred another whom he knew to be well qualified for leſs Money; ſo that we apprehend this is an Evidence which is much in favour of the Earl. As to the other Matter, the Maſters not knowing of this Letter, your Lordſhips obſerve what Evidence, was given by Mr. Cottingham. This is a Tranſaction ſometime ago, he ſays that he writ this Letter by the noble Lord's Order, that he cannot now ſay to which of the Maſters he delivered it, or whether it was perſonally delivered by him, or by one of his Clerks. Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that there were two Maſters Senior to Mr. Holford, viz. Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Fellowes; and it might probably be delivered to one of them; one of them is ſince dead, the other is yet living; but we were not aware of the Objection, and ſo have not him here. This doth not impeach Mr. Cottingham's Credit or his Evidence, ſo far as it concerns the Earl.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I will not enter into a ſtrict Comparing of the Evidence, we apprehend that what Mr. Ellis ſwore ſtands confirmed in every thing by Mr. Lucas, and we have

Reaſon

Reaſon to thank the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons for this Evidence. There was one material Part of our Evidence, that the Earl had a thorough Intention of entring into the Regulation of thoſe Matters; but by Diſputes ariſing in relation to the Juriſdiction of the Maſter of the Rolls, he was hindred.

Now the Evidence of Mr. Lucas Corroborates our Proof on this Head, he ſaith that Mr. Cottingham told him, tho' Security had not been taken, yet at preſent the noble Lord had a Reformation in View, and Security would be expected; and therefore he enquired what Security he could give, there was not only an Enquiry into his preſent Circumſtances, but likewiſe an Intimation that Security would be expected. This ſhews the Earl's Intention; and if the Thirſt of Gain had ſwayed him, Mr. Lucas would never have had thoſe Bugbears to affright him from giving ſo much Money. Upon the whole it appears that no part of our Evidence is any way impeached by the new Evidence they have given.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I beg leave to ſay a very few Words upon what hath been newly offered, as to the Evidence to take off my having preferred 5000 Guineas with a Perſon I thought a better Man, to 6000 l. with another, whom I thought a good Man. I apprehend it is not taken off at all by any Thing that has yet been offered. Mr. Lucas owns that at the firſt Time there was an Expectation of Security, and he has given your Lordſhips an Account that he asked what Security was expected; and was anſwered I think to the Value of 10,000 l. and that what he ſpoke of the Deficiency, was only that he ſhould not be liable to farther Orders to be made upon him for Contribution to the former Deficiencies of other Maſters; and in the latter Time, when the Clamour was greater, Mr. Ellis offered me 6000 l. abſolutely without any Condition, and I ſaid I approved of the Perſon and of the Offer, but I had another Gentleman then under Conſideration. Their Evidence indeed varies as to the Particulars of the Converſations they had upon this Subject: But whatever Diſcourſe paſſed between them, unleſs it came to my Knowledge, it ought not to affect me. I never head, nor is it ſo much as pretended, that I ever did hear, there were any manner of Terms or Conditions whatſoever annexed to the Propoſal made by Mr. Lucas.

Mr. Ellis has been asked this Queſtion, and has ſworn poſitively he mentioned none at all to me; ſo that there is not the leaſt Pretence that the Reſtriction, ſuppoſing Mr. Lucas annexed any to the Propoſal (which I muſt obſerve is flatly contradicted by Mr. Ellis's Evidence) ever came to my Knowledge.

As to what Evidence is given in relation to the Letter of November 1721. your Lordſhips will remember, that when I ſpoke of that, I entred upon it as a Thing not at all neceſſary for me; becauſe they had not proved the Article, that the Letter writ in February was with an Intention to terrify the Maſters into a Contribution; but all the Proof they produced was, that the Maſters had paid a voluntary Contribution, and upon that they made ſome Obſervation; but not one of the Maſters ever gave your Lordſhips an Account that they did it by Reaſon of, or under the Terror of this Letter, they have called every one of them, and not one hath ſaid ſo, but agreed that they had paid it as a voluntary Contribution; ſo that there is no manner of Occaſion for what hath been ſaid about this Letter. Mr. Cottingham did ſay before your Lordſhips, that he thought the Letter was ſent, and he had no Reaſon to believe the contrary; but indeed he had no Memorandum of its being ſent. It is very extraordinary to ſuggeſt, that this ſhould be a pocket Letter. Can any Perſon imagine that that Letter was calculated for an Occaſion like this? Was there any Apprehenſion of this Proſecution in 1721? My Lords, it is not worth while to trouble your Lordſhips with any more Remarks about ſo groundleſs a Pretence. In the Reply there hath been ſomething new offered to your Lordſhips to make out my receiving Money from the Maſters to be an Offence at common Law; and there have likewiſe been mentioned ſeveral Acts of Parliament, to neither of which I have had any Opportunity of giving an Anſwer before; I therefore apprehend I have a Right to take Notice of them now. And firſt I beg Leave to obſerve to your Lordſhips, that every one of theſe Acts of Parliament relate plainly to Judges who take Bribes, or take Money for doing their Duty, or for doing thoſe Things they were bound to do; they lie upon your Lordſhips Table, and if your Lordſhips will but look upon them you will find all to be ſo.

That of Magna Charta is plainly ſo, that Juſtice ſhall be adminiſtred to the Party, without paying for it.

So the Statute of 12. R. II. that they ſhall. —

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lord can not be regular to reply to us on that Statute.

Earl of Macclesfield. The Statute is, that they ſhall not make any Officer for Brokage.

Sir G. Oxenden. We muſt ſubmit it to your Lordſhips whether this can be regular; the noble Earl hath had his Defence, we have replyed; it is not regular for him to enter into a Debate now.

The Statute is upon your Lordſhips Table; and your Lordſhips will conſider it.

Earl of Macclesfield. I will not take up your Lordſhips Time any farther in inſiſting upon it; but I hope at leaſt thoſe Gentlemen will not oppoſe my taking Notice of one Thing that is new; though not any part of the Articles, which is what the Gentlemen have ſaid with relation to Wilſon's Compoſition not being binding upon the Suitors of the Court; that it is matter of Horror that Wilſon ſhould truſt to the Faith of a Court of Juſtice, and upon that enter into a Compoſition, which at laſt ſhould not be effectual and binding. To that give me Leave to anſwer, that if Wilſon had acted honeſtly, and given a fair Account of his Eſtate and Effects in this Caſe, and it appeared upon the whole, that he could not pay more than according to this Compoſition; and at the ſame time that it muſt be a real advantage to the Suitors to have received their Proportion of what he was able to pay, without the Expences of a Statute of Bankrupcy; in that Caſe he would have the Benefit of it: But in Caſe he could have paid more, and this appeared only to be a fraudulent or unfair Compoſition, it would be no ways concluſive upon the Suitors; and as he ought not to reap any Benefit Benefit, ſo neither would they ſuffer any Prejudice by it upon that Suppoſition.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly, The Managers are entitled to the Reply and Concluſion.

As to our Evidence newly given, it proves in the ſtrongeſt manner, that if there was a Reaſon for diſtinguiſhing between 5000 l. and 6000 l. it was becauſe the 6000 l. was attended with an Incumbrance; and if it be ſaid that the Earl had no Notice of it, it is prov'd that his Agent, or the Perſon whom he employ'd, had this Account deliver'd to him, and knew it; and we appeal to the Letter which is in their Hands. And therefore this is ſo far a Confirmation of the other part of the Charge of Neglect when Security was offered. Why was not the Perſon accepted? Why Mr. Elde preferr'd?

Mr. Lucas's Directions to his Brother, and his Tranſactions are confirmed by Mr. Ellis, my Lord's own Chaplain; and the only Reaſon why the Bargain was not concluded, was, becauſe of the Privilege inſiſted upon by the Perſon to be indemnified from all Contributions and Charges.

E. of Mac. I beg your Pardon, if I trouble Your Lordſhips once more, in Relation to a Piece of new Evidence, which I did not before reflect upon; I am under a very great Diſadvantage from theſe Gentlemen, who are for tying me down to very great Hardſhips, ſo that if any thing ſlips my Memory, at what they call the proper Time, it muſt at this rate be loſt for ever. I would take Notice of one Thing, with relation to what Mr. Thomas Bennet ſaid of what I ſpoke, of denying that the Maſters paid for their Offices out of the Suitors Money; they are attemping to prove that I knew of their doing ſo, and they prove it by ſhewing, that I ſaid I had always denyed it. But, my Lords, is there any of the Maſters that came in in my Time, that ſays I knew any ſuch thing? No, my Lords, not one of all thoſe Maſters that came in in my Time, and appear to have tranſacted in this manner; there are only two, Mr. Kinaſton, and Mr. Thomas Bennet; but is there any of them, or any other, that pretend that I knew they did ſo? Here are two Perſons that paid for their Offices out of the Suitors Money; and becauſe I told one of them afterwards, admitting what he ſaid to be true, that I had heard it ſaid it was ſo, and deny'd it; Is it from thence to be concluded that I knew it was really ſo? My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve as to the Matter of the difference of the Prices; I gave Evidence of the difference of Prices in other Offices, and their Riſe from 50 l. to 500 l. in one Inſtance, and from 200 l. to 800 l. in another.

Mr. Serj. Peng. We are unwilling to interrupt the Lord; but now for him to go back again into the whole, is a greater Right than his Lordſhip is entitled to; therefore from the Duty we owe to your Lordſhips, we hope every Thing that is regular ſhall be obſerv'd.

E. of Mac. I ſubmit if your Lordſhips think I am irregular, in the Confuſion my Papers were in when I made my Defence from them. The Notes relating to this and ſome other Matters were overlook'd: But as to the Reply, I muſt beg leave to make one general Obſervation, That the Gentlemen have thought the Arguments uſed by me in that Defence, either ſuch as they could not anſwer, or ſuch as needed no Anſwer, ſince they have not attempted to anſwer any of them; and which of the two, I muſt leave to Your Lordſhips Determination.

Mr. Onſlow, My Lords, in the Courſe of our Reply, we made uſe of the Statute of Henry the 4th. We have it not Printed, but we have an atteſted Copy in Writing, and the Original Roll; if your Lordſhips pleaſe, this atteſted Copy may be brought up to your Lordſhips Table.

Mr. Nicholas Paxton Sworn.

Mr. N. Paxton. My Lords, I examined this Copy with the Deputy-keeper of the Rolls in the Tower, and it is a true Copy.

E. of Mac. Whether that Parliament Roll be in the Nature of a Journal or a Statute Roll, wherein the Act of Parliament is enter'd?

Mr. Paxton, My Lords, the Officer is here; he will give Your Lordſhips an Account.

Mr. Lutwyche, It is quoted by my Lord Coke to be of the ſame Nature as a Parliament Roll.

Mr. Holmes called.

Mr. Serj. Peng. Mr. Holmes, Where is this Roll kept?

Mr. Holmes. My Lords, I am Deputy-keeper of the Records.

Mr. Serj. Peng. Where?

Mr. Holmes. In the Tower.

Mr. Serj. Peng. What Roll is that?

Mr. Holmes. It is the Parliament Roll of the 11th of Henry the 4th.

E. of Mac. I deſire he may inform Your Lordſhips whether there be any difference or diſtinction between the Parliament Roll and the Statute Roll?

Mr. Holmes, There are a great many private Acts enter'd upon the Parliament Rolls; that are not in the Statute Rolls; what is in the Statute Roll was ſent down by Writ into the ſeveral Counties to be proclaim'd in the ſeveral County Courts.

Mr. Serj. Peng. Whether that is not the Original Roll?

Mr. Holmes. This is the Original Roll.

E. of Mac. I apprehend the Parliament Roll contains the Petitions, and the King's Anſwer.

Mr. Holmes, It doth.

E. of Mac. Before it comes to be publiſhed as a Law, is it not drawn up in Form, and enter'd upon the Statute Roll?

Mr. Holmes. The Petition is a piece of Parchment; after it hath paſſed King, Lords and Commons, then it is entred on this Roll.

Mr. Onſlow, Whether the King's Aſſent is not entred upon this Roll?

Mr. Holmes. There is le Roy le Veut.

Lord Lechmere, I deſire for Your Lordſhips Satisfaction, that he may read what is upon the Parchment Roll.

Mr. Holmes, Reads it, &c.

E. of Mac. What is there in the Margin?

Mr. Holmes, Reſpectuatur per Dominum Principem & Concilium.

E. of Mac. That I may not be miſunderſtood in this Matter, and accuſed of going to quibble away an Act of Parliament; Your Lordſhips will give me leave to obſerve in the firſt Place, That ſuppoſing this to be an Act of Parliament, it relates to Caſes where Judgments are given, or where the Parties have a Right, and not any way to me or to my Caſe; and having premiſ'd this, Your Lordſhips will ſee how this Matter ſtands. There are two Rolls, the one is in the Nature of a Journal, wherein an Entry is made of the ſeveral Proceedings, and there are in it great Numbers of Petitions to the King by the Commons; whereby they pray, That Acts may be made, and the King's Anſwers upon them: The Anſwer it may be is agreeing to ſome part of what they pray, or ſometimes to no part, but a Proviſion made quite different from what they pray. At that Time the Judges drew up the Acts afterwards in Form, and thence then thoſe Acts were entred upon the Statute Roll; and they were promulgated at that Time by Proclamation on Writs iſſued to the Sheriffs of the ſeveral Counties. Now this hath in the Margin of the Parliament Roll, Reſpectuatur per Dominum Principem & Concilium. When the Judges came afterwards to draw up the Statutes of this Parliament, in order to publiſh them, there being a Reſpectuatur ſet upon this in the Parliament Roll; they forbore to draw it up amongſt the reſt, and it is not entred upon the Statute Roll at all, nor ever printed in any Statute Book ſince, nor was it ever publiſh'd by the Sheriffs, nor conſequently ſent to the ſeveral Courts of Juſtice, nor ever taken Notice of by them as a Law; for the Reaſon of that Maxim, That the Courts of Juſtice are bound to take Notice, ex officio, of publick Laws, and not of private Laws, was becauſe the publick Laws were tranſmitted to them under the Great Seal. The Fact then in this Caſe doth appear to be, that when the Acts of this Parliament of 11 Hen. 4. came to be drawn up and promulgated, this having a Reſpectuatur enter'd upon it, was not entred upon the Statute Roll, and ſo not publiſhed; this is the Fact. However it doth not concern me, nor doth it relate to the preſent Caſe at all, as I obſerved to Your Lordſhips before: If I had made a Decree for Money; if I had refuſed a Writ or Subpæna, unleſs the Party had paid me Money, then I had been within the Statute, but not in this Caſe.

Mr. Lutwyche, We ſay this Statute doth concern him: But as to what he ſaith, that there is an Entry in the Margin, Reſpectuatur per Dominum Principem; this is taken Notice of in the 3d Inſtitutes, where my Lord Coke particularly affirms, that this is an Act of Parliament in force, and is upon the Parliament Roll, and takes notice of Reſpectuatur, &c. that it was in Fact done by the Prince, the Son of King Henry the 4th, but without Authority; and that notwithſtanding ſuch Reſpite, this Act of Parliament is in full force.

Mr. Weſt, Suppoſing it to be an Act of Parliament it extends to the Earl's Caſe; but whether it be an Act of Parliament or no, is a Queſtion that the Noble Earl now makes. I thought it had been the common Learning, that all the old Laws were Petitions from the Commons, and the King's Anſwer to them; and that they were entred upon the Parliament Roll; and that the Parliament Roll was only a Voucher to the Statute Roll. I could give many Inſtances where that Voucher was not purſued, and the Statute Roll drawn up differs from the Parliament Roll; and that was the very Reaſon of altering the manner of paſſing Laws into the Method that is now uſed. This is my Lord Chief Juſtice Hale's Account in one of the Modern Reports.

Mr. Plummer. The Earl Impeach'd hath principally inſiſted on two Things, the one is the taking a leſs Sum of Money for a Maſter's Place when Vacant, when he had a greater Sum offer'd him; and that therefore it follows that he hath not made corrupt Advantages in order to raiſe his own Fortune, and that he is Innocent. He hath called the Negotiator in this Affair to prove, that when he was offer'd 6000 l. he took 5000 l. The Commons have by their Witneſs explain'd it; and this Matter is now full clear'd, and Your Lordſhips have the whole before you, and I will make no further Obſervation upon it.

The ſecond Thing that he lays great Weight upon is, that he called for the Accounts of the Maſters, notwithſtanding the 500 l. apiece was paid in. Upon examining the Witneſſes, it doth not appear that any of the now Maſters knew any thing of it. I leave it to Your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether, if the Earl of Macclesfield had been in earneſt, he would not have had a Return of that Order. It doth not appear there was ever any Account given in; therefore when theſe two Points are made plainer againſt him now than they were on our firſt making good the Charge, tho' he ſeems to ſay the Sting of the Impeachment is taken out, yet it is plain the Sting is not taken out of it, but it ſtill remains; and Your Lordſhips will give ſuch Judgment as is juſt and legal.

Then the Managers for the Houſe of Commons and the Council withdrew, and then the Houſe adjourned.

L. Ch. Juſt. King, My Lords, your Lordſhips have unanimouſly found Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors charged upon him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons.

Then the Managers for the Houſe of Commons and the Council withdrew; and then the Houſe adjourned.

Wedneſday, 26 May, 1725. The 12th Day.

The Lords being ſat, and the Managers being come, the uſual Proclamation was made for Silence.

THEN the Gentleman Uſher was commanded to call in the Earl of Macclesfield, who being come to the Bar, the Speaker acquainted him, that the Lords had fully conſidered of his Caſe, and had unanimouſly found him Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors charged upon him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons.

E. of Mac. I attend Your Lordſhips in Obedience to Your Lordſhips Command; but I am perſuaded, that if Your Lordſhips knew what I ſuffer, Your Lordſhips would not have required this of me, the rather as I did not intend to make any Exceptions in relation to the Proceedings, or give Your Lordſhips any further Trouble. I am now to expect Your Lordſhips Judgment; and I hope that you will be pleas'd to conſider, that I have ſuffered no ſmall matter already in the Tryal, in the Expence I have been at, the Fatigue, and what I have ſuffered other ways; beſides the cruel Diſtemper which this hath brought upon me. I have paid back 10,800 l. of the Money already, I have loſt my Office, I have undergone the Cenſure of both Houſes of Parliament, which is in it ſelf a very ſevere Puniſhment. My Lords, the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer doth ſound large, 25,000 l. but my Lords, it was not through my Fault that the Deficiency happened, nor was that Maſter put in by me; on the contrary, with great Difficulty, it is reduced by my means to 10,000 l. leſs than otherwiſe it would have been. My Lords, all the Loſs that can be ſuſtain'd by any thing charged againſt me, is only what ſome of the Suitors might have had more for their Proportion, than they can do now out of Mr. Dormer's Effects; his Debt came to about 47,000 l. his Effects to about 13,000 l. which is about a fourth Part: I don't find there is one Suitor hath made his Complaint, that he hath not received his five Shillings in the Pound. Mrs. Chitty hath received her Share.

Mr. Onslow. My Lords, We must submit it to Your Lordships. This was proper when the Noble Lord was making his Defence; but it is not so in Arrest of Judgment. Your Lordships have found him Guilty of the Fact, and he is now arguing in Defence of it: If he hath any thing in Arrest of Judgment, he may say it, and the Commons are here ready to answer it.

I was very unwilling, my Lords, to interrupt the Earl, and do it now with great Reluctancy, but it is for the sake of Regularity in Your Lordships Proceedings; and we must appeal to Your Lordships whether the Noble Lord is not now going into the Repetition of what he said in his Defence?

E of Mac. My Lords, I submit whether this be not proper in mitigation of Your Lordships Sentence; but whether it be or be not, I leave my self to Your Lordships Justice and Mercy; I am sure neither of them will be wanting, and I entirely submit. I don't know whether Your Lordships will be pleased to dismiss my Attendance at this Time, or whether Your Lordships will require me to come again under this very great Uneasiness; I submit it to Your Lordships.

Then the said Earl, as also the Managers, were directed to withdraw; and the House ordered Thomas Earl of Macclesfield to be committed to the Custody of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod; and then proceeded to the Consideration of what Judgment to give upon the Impeachment against the said Earl, and afterwards adjourned to Thursday Eleven of the Clock, the 27th of May.

Thursday, 27 May, 1725. The 13th Day.

A Message was sent to the House of Commons by Mr. Baron Page, and Mr. Justice Denton, to acquaint them, That the Lords are ready to give Judgment against Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, if they with their Speaker will come and demand the same.

A Message was brought from the House of Commons, by Sir William Gage and others, to acquaint the House of Lords, That the Commons, with their Speaker, do intend immediately to come to demand Judgment against Thomas Earl of Macclesfield; and do desire that the Painted Chamber, and other Passages to the Lords House, may be cleared forthwith.

The Messengers were called in, and told, That the Lords had given Order as desired,

Which was done accordingly.

Then the Commons, with their Speaker, being present at the Bar of the House, the Lord Chief Justice King, Speaker of the House of Lords, directed the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, to bring Thomas Earl of Macclesfield to the Bar; who, after low Obeisances made, kneeled until the said Lord Chief Justice acquainted him he might rise.

Then the Speaker of the House of Commons said as follows,

My Lords,

'THE Knights Citizens, and Burgesses in 'Parliament assembled, in the Name of themselves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, 'did at this Bar impeach Thomas Earl of Macclesfield of High Crimes and Misdemeanors; and 'did exhibit Articles of Impeachment against him; 'and have made good their Charge.

'I do therefore, in the Name of the Knights, 'Citizens, and Burgesses in Parliament assembled, 'and of all the Commons of Great Britain, demand 'Judgment of Your Lordships against Thomas 'Earl of Macclesfield, for the said High Crimes 'and Misdemeanors.

Then the Lord Chief Justice King, Speaker of the House of Lords, said,

'Mr. Speaker, The Lords are now ready to proceed to Judgment in the Case by you mentioned.

'Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, The Lords have 'unanimously found you Guilty of High Crimes 'and Misdemeanors, charged on you by the Impeachment of the House of Commons, and do 'now according to Law proceed to Judgment 'against you, which I am ordered to pronounce.

'Their Lordships Judgment is, and this High 'Court doth adjudge,

That you Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, be fined in the Sum of Thirty Thousand Pounds unto our Sovereign Lord the King; and that you shall be Imprisoned in the Tower of London, and there kept in safe Custody, until you shall pay the said Fine.

Then the Speaker with the Commons withdrew, and the Earl of Macclesfield was taken from the Bar.

Ordered, That the Speaker of this House do give Order for the Printing and Publishing the Tryal of Thomas Earl of Macclesfield; and that no other Person but such as he shall appoint, do presume to Print the same.

Ordered, That the said Earl of Macclesfield be committed to the Tower of London, there to be kept in safe Custody until he shall pay the abovementioned Fine of Thirty Thousand Pounds to the King; and that the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, in whose Custody the said Earl at present is; do him safely convey to the said Tower, and deliver him to the Constable thereof, or in his Absence to the Lieutenant, or Deputy Lieutenant of the same; and that the said Constable, Lieutenant or Deputy Lieutenant do receive the Body of the said Earl, and him keep in safe Custody there, until he shall have paid the said Fine.

Then the House adjourned to Monday, 31 May, 1725.

And the Earl of Macclesfield was conveyed to the Tower, where he continued Prisoner for some Time till he paid his Fine.

The Trial of Sir ROBERT SPOTISWOOD, Preſident of the College of Juſtice in Scotland, and Secretary there to King Charles I. for High-Treaſon, in the Parliament held at St. Andrews, November, December and January, 21 Car. I. 1645.

SIR Robert Spotiſwood having been ſent by the King into Scotland to negotiate Matters with the Marquiſs of Montroſe, and to carry him, among other things, a Commiſſion to be Generaliſſimo of all his Forces there, took the Opportunity of the Army's marching ſouthward for his more ſafe Return to his Maſter, to whom he was to give an Account of his Negotiation; but being unfortunately taken Priſoner at the Battle of Philiphaugh, where Montroſe's Army was defeated by General Leſlie, he was carry'd firſt to Glaſgow, and afterwards to St. Andrews, where the following Proceſs was proſecuted againſt him.

DITTAY againſt Sir Robert Spotiſwood.

SIR Robert Spotiſwood, you are indicted and accuſed before the Committee of Eſtates of Parliament; that for ſuameikleas, by the common Law, Law of Nations, Laws and Acts of Parliament, and Practick of this Kingdom; and by all Juſtice, Reaſon, Equity and Conſcience, all that riſe in Arms, and concurr with the Adverſaries of this Kingdom, for ſubduing of their native Country; all Invaders, Aſſaulters, or Subduers of this Kingdom, or any part thereof, by Force of Arms; all who contribute their Help, Countenance and Aſſiſtance, to the Adverſaries, Aſſaulters, or Invaders thereof in an hoſtile way: All who are either Authors, Abettors, Maintainers, Suppliers, or concurr with the Adverſaries of this Kingdom, in the aſſaulting, or ſubduing thereof, or any part thereof: And all who are Art and Part of the ſaids Crimes, Miſdeeds and Malverſations above ſpecified, or any of them, incurr the Pain of High-Treaſon againſt his Majeſty, his Crown, and againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom, and the pain of Forfaulture of Life, Lands, Eſtate, and Goods to be execute againſt them, by the Eſtates of this Kingdom, and the Benefit thereof to be apply'd to the uſe of the Publick for relief of their Burdens: And the Committers of the ſaids Crimes above-ſpecify'd, or any of them, are otherwiſe cenſurable and puniſhable in their Perſons, Names and Fame, and in their Lands, Goods, Means and Eſtate, by Fining, Confining, or otherwiſe, as the Eſtates of this Kingdom ſhall think expedient. And albeit, That by the Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, eſpecially by the 130th Act of the 8th Parliament of King James VI. in May 1584. It is ſtatute and ordain'd, that none of the King's Liedges and Subjects preſume, or take upon hand, to impugn the Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, or to ſeek or procure the Innovation or Diminution of the Power and Authority of the Samen, or of any of the Eſtates thereof in any time coming, under the pain of Treaſon. Likeas, albeit by the fourth Act of the third Parliament of King Charles, dated 29th of June 1644. all takers up of Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates of the Country, are guilty of Treaſon, and puniſhable by Forfaulture of Life, Lands, and Goods, or any other Cenſure the Parliament ſhall pleaſe to inflict. Yet nevertheleſs, the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood having ſhaken off all Fear of God, and due Reſpect to the Laws of the Kingdom, and all Duty that as a Subject thereof you ought to have carry'd to this Kingdom, and to the Defence thereof, eſpecially in theſe troubleſome Times, when this Kingdom has been threaten'd to be ruin'd and deſtroy'd, with the hoſtile Invaſion of ſome of her unnatural Brood, and ſome Iriſh Rebels, and forgetting and contemning that gracious Favour mentioned in the 33d Act of King Charles's ſecond Parliament, of Date 16 of November 1641. whereby the Eſtates of Parliament therein conveen'd did then declare, that for the good and grave Conſiderations mentioned, they would not proceed to a final Sentence againſt you, for ſuch Crimes and Miſdemeanors as at that time you were cited before them, and accuſed as guilty of, nor would inſiſt upon the Puniſhment thereof. You have preſum'd and taken upon hand, to abuſe the King's Majeſty, in purchaſing from his Majeſty by your pretended ways, the Office of Secretary to yourſelf, and have receiv'd the Signet thereof, which was formerly keeped by the Earl of Lauerk, who was appointed by his Majeſty and the Eſtates of Parliament in Anno 1641, to be Secretary to his Majeſty for this Kingdom of Scotland, and that contrary to his Majeſty's Declaration emitted by his Majeſty in the ſaid Parliament; whereby his Majeſty did declare, that he would not imploy you in any Office or Place of Court or State without Conſent of Parliament, nor grant you acceſs to his Perſon, whereby you might interrupt or diſturb the firm Peace was then ſo happily concluded. Likeas, ſince your purchaſing of the ſaid Office of Secretary, at leaſt taking the ſamen Office upon you, and of the keeping of the Signet thereof, you have docqueted with your Hand, ſigneted with the Signet of the ſaid Office, ſeveral Commiſſions granted to James Grahame ſometime Earl of Montroſe, a declared and forfaulted Traitor, and an excommunicated Perſon: and eſpecially, a Commiſſion dated the 5th of June 1645, given by the King's Majeſty to the ſaid James Graham, making and conſtituting the ſaid James Graham Lieutenant Governor, and Captain General of all Forces rais'd or to be rais'd within this Kingdom; and giving Power and Authority to the ſaid James Graham, to raiſe and levy Forces within this Kingdom, and to lead and conduct them againſt the King's Majeſty's good Subjects, and againſt the Forces rais'd and levy'd in Arms by Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom, for the Maintainence, Defence, and Proſecution of the mutual League and Covenant. By which Commiſſion ſo docqueted and ſigneted by you, as ſaid is, the King's Majeſty's good Subjects who have riſen in Arms for the Defence of the ſaid League and Covenant, and whoſe riſing in Arms is allow'd and authoriz'd by the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom, are deſign'd as traiterous and ſeditious Perſons. And als, you have docqueted and ſigned with your Hand, a Proclamation alledged emitted by the King's Majeſty for holding of Parliaments within this Kingdom; which Proclamation is totally deſtructive of, and derogatory to the Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament preſently conveen'd by vertue of the laſt Act of the laſt Parliament 1641, and which Proclamation annuls and condemns the Procedure thereof. And als, you have docqueted and ſign'd with your Hand, a Commiſſion granted by the King's Majeſty to James Graham ſometime Earl of Montroſe, to be Commiſſioner for his Majeſty for holding of the ſaid pretended Parliament: in docqueting and ſigning of which Proclamation, Commiſſions and Warrants, you have abuſed the aforeſaid Office of Secretary, and that to the derogation and diminution of the Honour, Dignity, and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom. Likeas, you not being contented with your abuſing of his Majeſty, in purchaſing of the foreſaid Office of Secretary from his Majeſty, contrary to his Majeſty's Declaration in Parliament, in manner and at the time as ſaid is, at leaſt with the taking the ſame upon you, and with the docqueting the foreſaid Commiſſions to the ſaid James Graham, and of the foreſaid Proclamation for the Parliament; which is not only derogatory to the Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, but alſo deſtructive of the whole Power thereof, and which declares the Procedure of the Eſtates of Parliament to be Treaſon: You have actually and really joined your ſelf in an unnatural and traiterous way againſt this Kingdom, with the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, wherewith he infeſted and troubled the Peace of this Kingdom, and cruelly and unnaturally deſtroy'd and murder'd the King's Majeſty's loyal Subjects; and have been with the ſaid James Graham at all the Acts of Hoſtility committed by him and his rebellious Army within this Kingdom, within the Months of Auguſt and September laſt 1645, or one or other of them. And in ſpecial, you was with him and his rebellious Army after the Conflict at Kilſyth, which was upon the 15th of Auguſt laſt 1645, betwixt the Army and Forces of this Kingdom, and the ſaid rebellious Army conducted by the ſaid James Graham, where you did join your ſelf with the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, and was actually with him thereafter, in his Progreſs going thro' the Country in ſubduing the ſame, viz. From Kilſyth to Bothwel, and from Bothwel to Calder, and from thence to Limphoy, and from thence to Cramſton-riddel, and from thence to Torwoodley, and from thence to Kelſo, and from thence to Jedburgh, and from thence to Selkirk, and to the Fields betwixt Selkirk and Philiphaugh, where the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, were upon the 13th of September laſt, by the Mercy of God upon his diſtreſſed People, and by the Strength of his Right-hand againſt his Enemies, defeat and confounded, and where you were actually with the ſaid James Graham and his ſaid rebellious Army; at leaſt you the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood did join with the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, at one or other of the ſaids Places particularly above-ſpecify'd; and during your being with the ſaids James Graham and the ſaids Rebels the time foreſaid, you did ſubſcrive a Letter written by your ſelf to ſome Nobleman about the King's Perſon in England, of the Date, from about Kelſo the 10th of September laſt 1645, which was after the foreſaid Conflict at Kilſyth; wherein you boaſt, that you had diſperſed the King's Majeſty's Enemies within this Kingdom, ſome of them to Ireland, and ſome to Berwick; whereby you do expoſtulate, that no Party was ſent after Lieutenant-General David Leſley, who at that time came in with, and conducted Forces within this Kingdom for repreſſing and ſubduing that rebellious Army, wherein you were for the time: And in which Letter, you profeſs'd a Reſolution to follow that rebellious War whereunto you had aſſociate your ſelf, and to clear the Kingdom of the Rebels that had fled to Berwick. By which Name of Rebels you did mean and expreſs his Majeſty's beſt and moſt loyal Subjects, within this ſaid Letter of yours, containing many Expreſſions of your joining the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, and of your unnatural and traiterous Reſolution to aſſiſt the Proſecution of the ruin and deſtruction of this Kingdom as the ſaid Letter bears. Which Crimes above-ſpecify'd, or one or other of them, you cannot deny; and therefore you as a Traitor to this Kingdom have incurr'd the pain of High-Treaſon, and the pain of Forefaulture of Life, Lands, Eſtate, and Goods to be execute againſt you by the Eſtates of this Kingdom, and the benefit thereof to be apply'd to the uſe of the Publick, for the relief of their Burdens, or otherwiſe, in the option of the ſaids Eſtates of this Kingdom, you are cenſurable and puniſhable in your Perſon, Name, and Fame, and in your Lands, Goods, Means and Eſtate, by fining, confining, or otherwiſe, as the ſaids Eſtates of this Kingdom ſhall think expedient.

Glaſgow, 5th November 1645.

The Committee ordains the Dittay to be tranſmitted, ſent and deliver'd to the above-written Sir Robert Spotiſwood, where he is preſently in the Caſtle of Glaſgow; and ordains the ſaid Sir Robert to be ready to anſwer to the ſaid Dittay. At St. Andrews, upon the 13th of November Inſtant 1645.

Sic Subſcribitur,

JA. PRYMROSE.

ANSWERS

ANSWERS to the Dittay given in againſt Sir Robert Spotiſwood.

IN regard the Defences given in by James Ogilvie, againſt the Relevancy of his Dittay, will militate likewiſe in my behalf, I repeat the ſame for me brevitatis cauſa.

This of mine is founded upon two Acts of Parliament, the one in May 1584, and the other in June 1644. By the firſt, it is declared to be Treaſon, to impugn the Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, or to ſeek and procure the Innovation or Diminution of the Power and Authority of the ſamen, or any of the Eſtates thereof. It is ſubſumed, that I have forefaulted againſt this Act, in ſo far as I, forgetting and contemning the Favour granted to me in the laſt Parliament 1641. have abuſed his Majeſty, in purchaſing from him the Office of Secretary, contrary to the Declaration emitted by his Majeſty in the ſaid Parliament. Likeas, ſince the Purchaſing thereof I have docqueted and ſigneted with the Signet of the ſaid Office, the two Commiſſions and Proclamation mentioned in the Dittay: In doing whereof I am alledged to have abuſed the foreſaid Office of Secretary, and that to the Derogation and Diminution of the Honour, Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom.

Firſt, To this Act of Parliament I anſwer; It cannot militate againſt me, in regard of the Scope and Intention thereof, which was only to reſtrain the Liberty which ſome in thoſe Times took to themſelves, to call in Queſtion the Power that one of the three Eſtates then had to ſit and vote in Parliament. Which is clear, both by the Preface of the ſaid Act (viz. finding the Power, Dignity and Authority of the Court of Parliament of late Years called in ſome doubt; at leaſt ſome curiouſly travelling to have introduced ſome Innovation thereanent) and by other Records of that time; eſpecially a Declaration of the King's, yet extant in print, publiſh'd in Anno 1585. In which he who knew beſt what was meant thereby, declareth this to have been only the Parliament's Intention in making of this Act. So that it cannot be extended to other Caſes, namely this in hand.

Secundo, Giving, that this Act of Parliament could be extended beyond the true Intent and Meaning thereof; yet the particular Deeds libelled, whereby I am alledged to have tranſgreſſed the ſame, and conſequently to be guilty of Treaſon, are not relevant to import ſo much. And firſt, whereas to aggravate the Matter, I am charged to have been unmindful and unthankful for the Favour I received at the laſt Parliament: Let me ſay this much without Offence, That as I eſteem highly of their Favour, ſo I was not obnoxious to their Cenſure at that time: Whereanent I refer myſelf to that Proceſs, wherein nothing was proven of all that was alledged againſt me.

As to the Purchaſing of the Secretary's Office, what paſt about that, and how far I had Intereſt therein, I remit to the Declaration given in by me to the Committee at Glaſgow, which I uſe as a part of my Defence againſt this Point. The Truth is, That the Lord Secretary being from Court at the time, and there being ſundry Sollicitors to his Majeſty for Grants of diverſe Natures, having relation to this Kingdom, he was pleaſed (there being none then about him fit for the Imployment) to intruſt me with the ſighting and preſenting of the ſame unto him, by ſending me a Warrant under his Sacred Hand to that effect, and the Signet withal, to be kept by me during the abſence of the Secretary, or while his Majeſty ſhould take further Order thereanent. In accepting whereof, I cannot imagine that I did commit any thing worthy of blame; or that his Majeſty did any thing contrary to the Declaration emitted by him in Parliament, he having conferred no ordinary Place or Office upon me, but only a temporary Imployment in caſu neceſſitatis, having none elſe for the time to lay it upon. Likeas I ſee not how I can be charged with Preſumption (as the Dittay bears) in doing thereof; in reſpect that by natural Allegiance (from which no Power under Heaven can looſe me) I am bound to ſerve and obey his Majeſty whenſoever he calls upon me for that effect. And as to that part of his Majeſty's Declaration, not to grant me acceſs to his Perſon; it was never his Intention otherwiſe but in the Caſe annexed, viz. whereby I might interrupt or diſturb the firm Peace then ſo happily concluded; which (I thank God) never ſo much as once enter'd into my Thought, as my own Conſcience, and my Behaviour about his Majeſty this while paſt doth bear me Witneſs. Beſides his Majeſty's Declaration, That he ſhould not give any acceſs to thoſe therein mentioned, is not a penal Statute, or Act of the Eſtates, diſabling or reſtraining them to repair to his Majeſty, under any Pain or Certification in caſe they ſhould contraveen, but only a Declaration emitted by his Majeſty himſelf, that he would not admit them to the end expreſſed in the Act. And therefore the ſame is inept to be the Ground or Aggravation of a Criminal Dittay.

As for docqueting and ſigneting Commiſſions, and other Warrants preſented by me, I hope in itſelf it is no Crime, altho I was not actual Secretary, I having done it by his Majeſty's ſpecial and expreſs Command. For the three Particulars chopt at in the Dittay, I can anſwer: Firſt, To the Commiſſion of Lieutenantry docqueted by me, it is but a Double, as the Docquet, I believe, bears, the Principal having been ſent long before by the Engliſh Secretary, who was the ſole mover and procurer of it.

Next, To the Proclamation for holding a Parliament, it was drawn in terminis by his Majeſty's ſpecial Direction, and docqueted by me, as it is, blank in Day and Place, and other Circumſtances; his Majeſty's Intention in it being only this, to have it come to his hand, to whom it was intruſted, who by ſpecial Order was to diſpoſe of it, as ſhould be found beſt for the Peace of the Kingdom, without Derogation to the ſtanding Laws thereof: neither hath there any Uſe at all been made of it, he having indicted a Parliament before it came to his Hands, by virtue of a preceeding Warrant. Wherein it may ſeem to annul and condemn the Procedure of the Eſtates of Parliament preſently conveen'd, or be otherwiſe deſtructive and derogatory to the Dignity and Authority thereof, it is not my part to meddle with, his Majeſty being moſt concerned therein, whoſe Buſineſs it is, I having no further hand in it, but in ſo far as I was obedient to my Maſter's Directions; which by no Law nor Act of Parliament can bring me within the Compaſs of the leaſt Cenſure, let be the Guilt of Treaſon. For I am not here (neither can be) called in Queſtion for that which uſually the Miniſters of Princes have been charged with (viz. giving of bad Counſel) but only for docqueting and ſigneting theſe three Warrants, which I could not in Duty refuſe, being commanded by his Majeſty to do the ſame.

To the third and laſt Commiſſion I make the ſame Anſwer.

The ſecond Act of Parliament, whereupon this Dittay is founded, is in June 1644, bearing, That they who take up Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates of the Country, are guilty of Treaſon. For Anſwer to this part of the Dittay, I ſay, it is not relevantly ſubſumed, that I took up Arms againſt the Kingdom: Only it is alledged, That I was in Company with James Graham in his Progreſs thro' the Country, after the Conflict at Kilſyth, which by no Interpretation, can be thought to be a taking up of Arms againſt the Kingdom; eſpecially ſince I was directed to him from his Majeſty, and by that Occaſion, and none other, was with him in Company.

Secundo, In the Act itſelf, it being propond in the Quere, Whether aſſiſting, or taking Arms with thoſe who have invaded the Country, ſhall be relevant to make up a Dittay againſt the Doers thereof, no Anſwer is given thereunto by the Parliament; which imports as much, that they thought it not reaſonable to make the Aſſiſters of ſuch as are in Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates, guilty of Treaſon: If not their Aſſiſters, far leſs ſuch as were only in Company with them occaſionally, as I was.

As to the Letter written by me about Kelſo, whatever be in it, it cannot be charged upon me; becauſe it went no further than Intention, I having upon better Thoughts called it back, in regard of ſome Expreſſions in it, which might ſeem injurious to thoſe engaged on the other ſide. For whatever I think of the Courſe, I thank God, I hate no Man's Perſon that is imbarked therein, nor could wittingly irritate the meaneſt of them by any opprobrious Compellation. Always the moſt can be in it, is Inadvertancy.

To cloſe all, in all this Dittay (laying aſide the ſecond Act, which I hope is ſufficiently anſwered) I am not charg'd with any thing that is declared by any Law or Act of Parliament to be Treaſon, which by the 28 Act, 1641, is required, before any Perſon can be declared a Traitor.

Theſe Anſwers for your Lordſhips Satisfaction, I have given in preſently, under Proteſtation, That (in reſpect I have been ſtraitned with Time, and could not gather my Thoughts ſo well as was requiſite) I ſhall be heard to alledge what further I can bethink myſelf of, before the cloſing of the Proceſs, either by Writ or Word, as your Lordſhips ſhall be pleaſed to allow.

REPLIES to Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Anſwers to his Dittay, 12 December 1645.

WHere the Defender repeats the Defences given in by James Ogilvie, againſt the Relevancy of his Dittay, alledged by the Defender to militate in his behalf. It is replied, That there are no Defences given in by James Ogilvie, but only the Defence of Quarters, which is anſwered in the Reply given in againſt the Defence of Quarters.

To the firſt Defence, bearing, That the Act of Parliament in May 1584, does not militate againſt the Defender, alledging that the Scope and Intention thereof, was only to reſtrain the Liberty of ſome who called in Queſtion the Power of one of the three Eſtates. It is anſwered, The Defence ought to be repell'd, in reſpect of the diſpoſitive Words of the ſaid Act, militating againſt all thoſe who ſhould procure the Innovation or Diminution of the Power and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, or any of them; and the Parliament are the beſt Judges and Interpreters of the Acts of Parliament, and of the extent of the Senſe and Meaning thereof.

Where the Defender in his ſecond Defence ſeems to inſinuate, that nothing was proven againſt him in his Proceſs in Anno 1642, wherein he received the Parliament's Favour. It is anſwered, That the time preſcribed by the Parliament for the Trial of that whole Proceſs being but two Months, the Committee for the Incendiaries could not proceed at that time to further Trial, and if they had hade time, ſufficient Probation would have been gotten in theſe Proceſſes, for proving of all, or the moſt part of the Points contain'd therein.

Where in the ſaid ſecond Defence, the Defender affirms that he committed nothing worthy of blame, and that he cannot be charg'd with Preſumption, in taking upon him the Secretary's Office; becauſe by his natural Allegiance, he was bound to obey the King's Majeſty. It is replied, That ſeeing in the Parliament 1641, the Secretary's Office, and all the Officers of Eſtate are to be provided and filled by Advice and Approbation of the Eſtates of Parliament, during their ſitting, and of the Council, during the Interval betwixt the Parliaments: It was a high Preſumption in the Defender, to accept of the ſaid Office, without Advice and Approbation foreſaid; and his accepting thereof is a preſumptive Deed in prejudice of the Liberty of Parliament, by whoſe Advice he ſhould have been choſen and provided to the ſaid Office; his Preſumption being the greater, by the embracing of the ſaid Office, the ſame not being vacand, but was fill'd by Advice of Parliament: And therefore he ought modeſtly to have refuſed the ſaid Office, which he did not, but embraced the ſamen, and uſed it in manner libelled in his Dittay, to the Diſhonour of the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom, by expeding and docqueting Commiſſions and Proclamations, declaring their Procedures to be ſeditious and treaſonable, chiefly the ſaid Commiſſions being in favour of James Graham a declared Traitor.

Where in the ſaid ſecond Defence, it is alledged, That his Majeſty's Intention was never to grant the Defender Acceſs to his Perſon, only in the Caſe annexed to his Majeſty's Declaration in Anno 1641, viz. whereby the Defender might diſturb the firm Peace then ſo happily concluded. It is replied, That theſe words of the King's Majeſty's Declaration, are not of the nature of a reſtricting Quality of the denied Acceſs mentioned in the King's Declaration, as if Acceſs to his Majeſty's Perſon had been granted to the Defender, upon Condition that the Defender ſhould not diſturb the the firm Peace: But the Words are declaratory, That in reſpect the Eſtates of the Kingdom had upon juſt Grounds conceived, that the Defender's Acceſs to his Majeſty's Perſon heretofore, had diſturbed the Peace, and his Acceſs to his Majeſty's Perſon thereafter would diſturb the Peace; therefore his Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to make the foreſaid Declaration, That he ſhould not have Acceſs to his Perſon, and ſo the Eſtates would be in Security, that he ſhould not diſturb the Peace by his Acceſs. Likeas de facto the Defender's Actions, ſince his attending his Majeſty's Perſon, do teſtify, that he has had no ſmall hand in diſturbing the Peace, which are preſently laid to his Charge in his Dittay.

Where in the ſaid ſecond Defence, it is alledged, That the King's Majeſty's Declaration is no Penal Statute, reſtraining the Defender from having Acceſs to his Majeſty's Perſon, and therefore is ineptly libelled to be a Ground, or Aggravation of a criminal Dittay. It is replied, That albeit it were granted, That his Majeſty's Declaration were no Penal Statute reſtraining the Defender; yet the ſame is pertinently libelled, to aggravate the Defender's Carriage againſt the Honourable Eſtates of Parliament, by his expeding under his hand, as Secretary to his Majeſty, the Commiſſions and Proclamations mentioned in his Dittay; which Office of Secretary he did accept, whilſt he did accede to his Majeſty's Perſon, contrary to his Majeſty's Declaration made in Parliament.

Where the ſaid ſecond Defence bears, That the Defender cannot be quarrelled nor challenged for docqueting of the three particular Papers mentioned in his Dittay, he having done the ſame by his Majeſty's ſpecial Command, and he not being quarrelled for giving Counſel to the ſamen. It is reply'd, That the Defender's docqueting thereof, not only clears his Acceſſion to the evil Counſel, given to his Majeſty for granting the ſaid Commiſſions and Proclamations, but alſo is a part of the proſecuting of that evil Counſel, and of its deſired Effect. And it was the Defender's Part, as the part of a true and loyal Subject to his Majeſty, to have diverted his Majeſty from giving Ear to ſuch evil Counſels: But on the contrary, it is acknowledged by the Defender in his firſt Section of his third Defence, That he was ſent by his Majeſty to James Graham, whereby it is more than evident, that the Defender has had a great hand, not only in the framing or adviſing of the ſaid Commiſſions and Proclamations, but alſo in the conveying of the ſamen to the ſaid James Graham, he being a declared Traitor, and being in Arms againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom both with Fire and Sword.

Laſtly, the whole ſecond Defence ought to be repell'd, in reſpect of the Dittay, bearing the Defender his acceding to his Majeſty's Perſon contrary to his Majeſty's Declaration in Parliament; his accepting of the ſaid Office of being Secretary, contrary to the Act of Parliament, anent the providing of the Places of Officers of Eſtate; and his abuſing of the ſame Office by docqueting and ſigneting Commiſſions and Proclamations, deſtructive of, and derogatory to the Dignity and Authority of the Parliament.

To the firſt Part of the third Defence, bearing that the Defender's being in Company with James Graham in his Progreſs thro' the Country after the Field at Kilſyth, cannot be interpreted the taking up of Arms againſt the Country, he being ſent to James Graham by his Majeſty. It is replied, that the Dittay is relevantly ſubſumed from the Act of Parliament, viz. That the Defender did join himſelf with James Graham and his rebellious Army, and was with him and his Army at the Places libelled in his Dittay, at leaſt at one or other of them; which joining of the Defender with the Rebels, who were in Arms againſt the Country, is a taking up of Arms againſt the Country. Likeas, the Defender in his Defence founded upon Quarters, grants that he was taken Priſoner by an Officer of our Army, and ſo grants that he was in the Rebels Army againſt ours.

To that part of the third Defence, bearing that the Act of Parliament 1644, makes no Anſwer to that part of the Query therein mentioned, anent Aſſiſters. It is replied, That the Dittay is founded upon the diſpoſitive Words of the Act of Parliament againſt taking up of Arms, and not upon what the Act of Parliament has not anſwered. And where the Defender affirms, that he was only occaſionally in Company with James Graham: It is replied, That it is contrary to the preceding Article of his third Defence, bearing that he was ſent to James Graham by the King's Majeſty, and ſo cannot alledge that he was there occaſionally.

To that part of the ſaid third Defence, bearing that the Letter mentioned in the Defender's Dittay, went no further than Intention, and was called back again. It is replied, That the Letter, albeit found upon the Defender himſelf, is a Declaration of the Defender's Reſolutions therein, and is mentioned in his Dittay, as an aggravation of his Carriage, whereof if he had repented, he would ſurely have deſtroyed the Letter, and retired himſelf from the Rebels. And where the Defender affirms, that he is not charged with any thing that is declared to be Treaſon by any Law or Act of Parliament, except upon the Act of Parliament 1644. ought to be repell'd in reſpect of the Dittay, which is alſo founded upon the Act of Parliament 1584.

Item, to the firſt part of the Eik anent the Defence of Quarters, the Procurators for the Eſtates refer the ſamen to the Commiſſioners for the Proceſs.

To that part of the Eik given in by the Defender upon the 15th of December 1645. bearing, that the Propoſition of his Dittay is not relevant, in ſo far as it is founded upon the Common Law, Equity, Reaſon and Conſcience, becauſe it is provided by diverſe Acts of Parliament, That the King's Leiges ſhould be governed by the King's Laws, and the Laws of the Realm. It is replied, That the Propoſition of the Dittay is relevant, as being founded upon the Common Law, Equity and Reaſon, becauſe by the 69th Act of the 6th Parliament of King James 5th, it is found by the Eſtates of Parliament, That the King's Majeſty has juſt Action to purſue all Summonds of Treaſon done and committed againſt his Perſon and Commonwealth, conform to the Common Law, good Equity and Reaſon, notwithſtanding there is no ſpecial Law, Act nor Proviſion of the Realm made thereupon before, and the Defender's Dittay is a Dittay of Treaſon.

Item, To that part of the Eik given in by the Defender upon the 15th of December, bearing that the Defender cannot be challenged upon the Act of Parliament 1644; becauſe the ſamen was not made by the King's Majeſty and Eſtates join'd together, making communem reipub. ſponſionem, which is the ordinary Definition of Law. It is replyed, That the Defence clears the Defender's Carriage, and all the Paſſages libelled in his Dittay, to have been clearly againſt the Eſtates of Parliament, he now averring, that it were hard to challenge him upon the Act of Parliament 1644, becauſe the King's Majeſty was not preſent thereat. The Defence itſelf inſinuates tacitly, That this preſent Parliament is no Parliament: For if this be a Parliament, and was a Parliament in Anno 1644, then the Act is Obligatory, and does oblige all the Liegea, ſo that the Defence is rather a Declinator of the Honourable Eſtates of Parliament, than a Defence, and in effect merits no Anſwer, but Cenſure.

22d. December, 1645.

Produced by the Procurators of the Eſtates, and given up to Sir Robert Spotiſwood this day, with the Papers formerly given in by him, and orders him to give his Duply to this, againſt Thurſday next at Ten a Clock in the Forenoon peremptorie.

DUPLIES given in by Sir Robert Spotiſwood, to the Replies made by the Procurators of Eſtate againſt his Anſwers to his Dittay.

Firſt, WHereas it is Replied, That the diſpoſitive words of the Act of Parliament May 1584. militates againſt thoſe who procure the Innovation or Diminution of the Eſtates of Parliament. It is Duplied, That neither the diſpoſitive words of the Act, nor the Reply militates againſt me; becauſe neither is it, nor can be ſubſumed that I have impugned the Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, or have procured the Diminution of their Power, by calling in doubt or in queſtion, or denying their Power anent the providing the Secretary's Office, and all other Places of the State by their Advice, and by procuring the Power and Liberty granted unto them by the Act of Parliament 1641. to be retreated and innovated, and taken from them; which is the only Crime forbidden by the diſpoſitive words of that Act, as is clear by the ſamen, and by the Narrative of the ſaid Act anent the occaſion of it, which declares the Diſpoſitive. And albeit I had accepted the Office of Secretary without the Advice and Approbation foreſaid, which is denied, my accepting thereof could not import a Contravening of the ſaid Act 1584, and a downright treaſonable Impugning of the Authority of the Eſtates, becauſe the contravening of an Act of Parliament, or the accepting of an Office not conform to an Act of Parliament, is not a direct Impugning of the Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, but a null Act; & quod eſt nullum de jure, nullum ſortitur effectum: Otherwiſe if the conſequential Impugning of the Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament by contravening of Acts of Parliament, ſhould fall under the compaſs of the ſaid Act 1584, Treaſon ſhould be too frequent, in regard the Contraveners of any Act of Parliament does in conſequence impugn the Authority of the Eſtates.

Secondly, Whereas it is Replied, That if there had been ſufficiency of time, there ſhould have been ſufficient Probation gotten againſt me in my former Proceſs. It is anſwered, De his quæ non ſunt, & non apparent, idem eſt judicium; and notwithſtanding the pretended ſhortneſs of time, there was Proceſs gotten againſt others, but none againſt me.

Thirdly, Where it is further Reply'd, That it was a Preſumption in me to accept the ſaid Office, being already filled by the Advice of Parliament. It is anſwered, That all Preſumption is not Treaſon, and the Act of Parliament anent the providing of theſe Places by Advice of the Eſtates, does not bear, That if they ſhould be provided otherwiſe, the Accepters ſhould be puniſhed as Traitors.

2*d*, Repeats the Declaration given in by me and my Defence, and denys, that I imbraced or accepted the ſaid Office; and the doing of Acts otherwiſe incumbent to the Secretary, cannot import the accepting of the Office, ſeeing it cannot be denied, but either the neceſſary abſence of a Secretary, or in time of Sickneſs, or in the Vacancy, before his Majeſty could acquaint the Parliament or Council, or have the Advice and Approbation anent the filling theſe Places, his Majeſty may command any of his Subjects to ſupply the Place, without any hazard of Treaſon.

Fourthly, Whereas to the Defence, bearing, That his Majeſty's Declaration, that he ſhould not grant me acceſs to his Royal Perſon, whereby I might diſturb the Peace, It is no penal Statute, and conſequently it can be no ground of a Dittay: It is Reply'd, That the Declaration is not of a reſtricting Quality; and that tho his Majeſty's Declaration be not a penal Statute, yet the ſamen may be enough to aggravate my Carriage. I Duply, That I repeat the Defence, and oppones the Declaration itſelf: And if the Declaration be not a penal Statute, as it is acknowledged, it cannot be libelled pertinently to be a relevant Ground of a Dittay, and conſequently it cannot aggravate the Defender's Carriage; & quod non relevat, non aggravat.

Fifthly, Whereas it is Reply'd, That my docquetting the Papers mentioned in the Dittay, clears, that I gave ill Counſel in granting the ſaids Commiſſions and Declarations, and is a part of the proſecuting of that Counſel, and that as a good Subject I ſhould have diverted His Majeſty. It is Duply'd, That all theſe who are imployed to docquet or ſign Papers, are not admitted to be of his Council, and cannot in good manners intrude themſelves to divert His Majeſty from his Reſolutions, and refuſe to ſign or docquet ſuch Papers as His Majeſty is pleaſed to cauſe preſent to them, upon pretext, that they in their Judgment diſprove them; and I repeat my Anſwer, whereunto no Reply is made, That what I did in theſe Particulars, was in obedience to His Majeſty's expreſs Commands, and in Law qui juſſu Judicis aliquid facit (multo magis of the Supreme Judge and Magiſtrate*) non videtur dolo malo facere, qui parere neceſſe habet. ff.* de Regul. Juris L. 167. § 1.

Sixthly, Whereas it is Reply'd, That the Dittay is relevantly ſubſum'd; That I did join myſelf with James Graham, and was with him in his Army, and that in opponing my Defence for Quarters, grants that I was in the Rebels Army againſt our Army: The Defence is repeated, and that Subſumption is no wiſe relevant, becauſe it is not conform to the Act of Parliament, that he took Arms: And an occaſional being in an Army cannot import a joining with it, and taking of Arms. And altho I have granted that I was taken Priſoner, being occaſionally in the Army, I have not granted that I was in the Army as an actual taker of Arms againſt the Country.

Seventhly, And where the Reply bears, That I cannot alledge, that I was occaſionally in the Army, becauſe I have granted in my Defence, that I was ſent by the King: It is anſwered, That in affirming that I was occaſionally in Company with James Graham, I am not contrary to myſelf, and my meaning being, that I was there being ſent, but not there of purpoſe to join actually with him in taking of Arms.

Eighthly, Whereas it is further Reply'd, That my Letter, albeit found upon me, is a Declaration of my Reſolution, and is mentioned as an Aggravation of my Dittay. The Defence is repeated, and the keeping and not ſending of that Letter, argues my Reſolution to the contrary.

Ninthly, Whereas to that part of the Defence, bearing, That the Propoſition of the Dittay is not relevant, in ſo far as it is founded upon the common Law, and other Grounds not authorized by Acts of Parliament: It is Replyed, That by the 69 Act of the 6th Parliament of King James 5th, it is found, That the King's Majeſty has juſt occaſion to purſue all Summonds of Treaſon conform to the common Law, Equity and Reaſon, notwithſtanding that there is no ſpecial Law nor Act of Parliament made thereupon. I Duply, That by the ſaid Act of Parliament in Anno 1540. it is provided, That tho there be not a ſpecial Law or Act of Parliament anent the raiſing of Summonds, and regulating of Proceſſes againſt Parties accuſed of Treaſon, the ſamen may be done conform to the common Law, Equity and Reaſon; but it is not meant, that Dittays of Treaſon may ſubſiſt on theſe pretended Grounds, without an Act of Parliament prohibiting the Lieges, and putting them in mala fide anent the committing of unlawful Acts under the pain of Treaſon; which is clear from the Act it ſelf, being made upon the occaſion of raiſing of Summonds againſt the Heirs of umquhil Robert Leſly, and to ſee his Memory delete and extinct, for certain Points of Leſe Majeſty. The Queſtion was then, and it was murmured, as the Act bears, not that he was accuſed of certain Points which were not Treaſon by any Act of Parliament or Law of the Country; but only that it was a Novelty to raiſe Summonds and move Action againſt a dead Perſon: And therefore the ſaid Act being only ordinatory quoad the Regulation of Proceſs, does not derogate from ſo many fundamental Laws, providing, that the King's Lieges ſhould be governed by the Laws of this Kingdom, and of no other; eſpecially ſeeing it is declared likewiſe by the 28 Act of His Majeſty's 2d Parliament, That no Perſon can be declared Traitor but for contravening a Law or Act of Parliament made, under pain of Treaſon. And it were abſurd, that the Subjects of this Kingdom, who cannot in reaſon be obliged to obey Laws, but in quantum ſunt notificatæ, ſhould be judged by Laws, which they neither know, nor can know.

Tenthly, Whereas the Replyer repeats as a Defence, that which is only humbly repreſented by me, and not proponed by way of Defence, in regrating how hard my Condition is to be judged, upon the late Act of Parliament made in the time of theſe unhappy Combuſtions, and draws odious Conſequences to irritate the Eſtates. I repeat my Paper, and conceive, that without giving occaſion of ſuch cruel Inferences, and without offence, I might regrate my hard Fortune, having adhered to His Majeſty bona fide, and following the light of my Judgment, out of confidence that I was not contravening any known Law. And now being brought to anſwer a Dittay founded upon a late Act of Parliament, made before the end of theſe unhappy Diſtractions re non integra, when I was out of the Kingdom, I would have expected, That ſince theſe Revolutions have brought the Replyer and me to appear in other Stations than we have been in formerly, that he ſhould have forborn to have uſed ſuch Expreſſions, as in the end of his Reply he hath done.

ANSWERS for Sir Robert Spotiſwood, founded upon Quarters.

ALTHO the Anſwers to theſe things, wherewith I am charg'd in my Dittay, be both eaſy and obvious; yet I do adhere mainly to that Defence, founded upon the Law of Nations and Humanity itſelf: That I cannot be put to my Anſwer, in regard when I was taken Priſoner, I had Quarters granted me by an honourable Perſon, an Officer of the Army, unto whoſe Promiſe and Word of Honour I do appeal. As to that which may be ſaid for the equity and neceſſity of maintaining this univerſal Practice of Nations, becauſe it is ſufficiently touched in the Defences given in by ſome others at this time, to avoid unneceſſary Repetition, I refer myſelf thereunto; whereunto I add this much only.

That hitherto, ſince the beginning of this unhappy War, Quarters and Exchange of Priſoners too, have been allowed on both ſides; which never having been diſcharged, to deny now to theſe are in your Power, after that by the Fortune of War you have got the Advantage in the Matter of Priſoners, I leave it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, if it be fair, and how it may be conſtrued in the Opinion of the World. Beſides, I hope your Lordſhips will uſe your Priſoners no worſe than your Friends and Aſſociates in England (who are in Arms for the ſelf-ſame Cauſe) are accuſtomed to do; between whom and the King's Party, there have always fair Quarters been granted. Which makes me wonder the more of the Report that is going, of ſome that come from thence, with Inſtructions to preſs the Execution of Juſtice upon the Priſoners. The which Advice, if it come from them, being ſo unſuitable to their own Practice, ought to be ſuſpected, as tending to the diſcredit and weakning of this Nation.

Now becauſe upon the Deciſion of this Point dependeth much of the welfare of this Kingdom, both Parties preſently in Arms, being to take it for a Rule hereafter, in the Matter of Quarters; I hope your Lordſhips will amongſt other reſpects, have before your Eyes the Safety of many innocent cent Souls, who will be intereſted in the reſult thereof; and will not liſten to any Motions, which inſtead of curing the Sore, will inflame it, and be the ready Means to perpetuate our unnatural Diviſions, and make them irreconcileable.

Eiked Defences given in for Sir Robert Spotiſwood.

THAT he adhereth to the Defence already given in by him, founded upon Quarters, and craveth that it may be firſt diſcuſt, being a peremptory Defence impediens Proceſſum, and eliding both the Propoſition and Concluſion, in ſo far as Capital Puniſhment and Forfaulture of Life is inferr'd againſt him. And as in a criminal Purſuit before the Juſtice, if a Defence were propon'd upon a Remiſſion, remitting the Crime of Treaſon in ſo far as may infer Forfaulture of Life only, and not of Lands and Goods: The ſaid Exception, albeit partial, and not eluſory of the whole Propoſition and Concluſion, being propon'd primo loco, will be firſt diſcuſt. And therefore the Defender being in the ſame Caſe, and the Exception upon Quarters being in effect equivalent to a Remiſſion, ſo far as it ſecures his Life, and elides the concluſion of capital Puniſhment, he ought to have the like Benefit.

It is further anſwer'd for the Defender, that the Propoſition of the Dittay is nowiſe relevant, in ſo far as it is founded upon the common Law of Nations, Equity, Reaſon and Conſcience; becauſe the foreſaid Grounds before they be determined and authorized by poſitive Laws and Statutes, are not relevant to be Grounds of criminal Dittays, whereupon capital or arbitrary Puniſhments are inferr'd, in regard it is a fundamental Law in all well govern'd Kingdoms, pœnam alicui non eſſe indicendam, niſi expreſſo jure cautum ſit. ff. de Verb. ſignif. l. 131. Likeas it is expreſly provided by diverſe Acts of Parliament, that the King's Lieges ſhould be govern'd by the King's Laws, and Laws of this Realm allenarly, namely by an Act of the 5th Parliament of King James I. cap. 48. and another of the ſixth Parliament, King James IV. cap. 79.

Whereas the Dittay is founded upon the 4th Act in June 1644. The Defender repreſents, that as he had no hand in the beginning, and hath never been a Fomenter ſince of this unhappy Combuſtion and Diviſion between His Majeſty and his People, ſo he will carefully avoid all tickliſh Diſpute anent theſe Queſtions between them. Nevertheleſs he is confident, that without Offence he may remonſtrate how hard his Condition is, being put to anſwer a Dittay, having no other Warrant in Law but a late Act of Parliament, not made as all other former Acts and Laws, by his Majeſty and the Eſtates joined together, and making communem Reipublicæ ſponſionem; which is the ordinary Definition of Laws: but during, and in the time of an unhappy Diviſion between his Majeſty and his Subjects, being in Arms, as they both profeſs, for maintaining of their Rights and Privileges, without intention to prejudge or diminiſh the known Right one of another. When ſuch fatal Queſtions do fall out between ſuch Parties, and when Neceſſity involves all Men to ſide with one of them, and Men are left to their own Judgments and the Light of their Conſciences, without the clear direction of poſitive Laws, determining expreſly what the Carriage of private Men and Subjects ſhould be in ſo unhappy a Caſe: It hath ever been thought excuſable, that they ſhould follow the Light of their own Conſciences and Judgment, albeit miſtaken and erroneous; and therefore ſhould enjoy the Benefit and Privileges of the Law of War and Nations, whereof one of the main and principal is, that they ſhould not be judged by the Rules and Laws of theſe againſt whom they have ſided; eſpecially ſuch as are made during the Diſpute, and while the War is not ended, but either by the preceding Laws made in time of Peace, or by ſuch as are agreed upon by both Parties after a happy Pacification. The reaſon of this Law and Practice of Nations is, becauſe in omnibus ſtatibus controverſiarum, fieri poteſt ut neutra litigantium pars ſit improba: & ſicut ex probabili cauſa litigantes in diſceptationibus fori, victi lite atque ſententia non condemnantur calumnia, utrinque tamen juratur de calumnia; ita cenſetur in diſceptatione & lite armorum.

REPLIES, to the Defence given in by Sir Robert Spotiſwood, founded upon Quarters.

WHereas his Defence given in upon the 8th of December 1645, bears, that he cannot be put to anſwer his Dittay; in regard, when he was taken Priſoner, he had Quarters granted to him by an honourable Perſon, an Officer of the Army; and referring himſelf to the Defences given in by others, anent the Equity and Neceſſity of maintaining the univerſal Practice of Nations, anent Quarters.

It is reply'd, The Defence founded upon Quarters, alledged granted to him, is not relevant as it is ſet down; the Defence not condeſcending upon the Perſon Giver and Granter of the Quarters, and Time and Place, when and where. 2. Albeit it were condeſcended who gave him Quarters; yet the Defence bears not what the Granter of the Quarters promiſed to the Defender the time of the granting thereof: for at the taking of Captives, ſeveral Takers give ſeveral Promiſes to their Captives of ſeveral and diſtinct Natures. 3. The Defence founded upon Quarters, as being proponed to liberate the Defender from the Crimes libelled in his Dittay, and of the condign Puniſhment thereof, ought to be repell'd; becauſe, whatſoever hath been heretofore, or is preſently the Cuſtom of other Nations in their Wars, when one Nation is in Arms againſt another, the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom are not to take notice thereof, but in caſu de quo nunc agitur, anent the bringing to due Trial and condign Puniſhment, theſe who have riſen in Arms, and taken Arms againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom. The Alledgance founded upon any Promiſe, Pardon, Impunity, or Quarters given by ſome particular Men, cannot free the Defender from juſt Trial, and condign Puniſhment, ſeeing the Queſtion is not here of any Man taken in bello: But the Queſtion is anent the puniſhing of theſe who have taken Arms in a treacherous and unnatural way againſt their own native Kingdom, and joined themſelves with a declared Traitor, riſen in Inſurrection within the Kingdom; who not only has taken Arms againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom, and the Liberties of the Nation, but alſo againſt the Religion preſently profeſſed within this Kingdom, and againſt the mutual League and Covenant eſtabliſh'd by the Parliament and Aſſembly of this Kingdom: In defence whereof, many Thouſands of His Majeſty's good Subjects within this Kingdom have been cruelly cut off by that declared Traitor James Graham, to whom the Defender did join himſelf at the times libelled in his Dittay. The Caſe being thus ſtated, that the Defender is challenged and accuſed for riſing in Arms, and joining with James Graham, a declared Traitor and Enemy to this Kingdom, who had taken Arms againſt the Eſtates of the Kingdom, for oppoſing of the mutual League and Covenant: There is none who will think, that if any of his Adherents, Counſellors, or thoſe who are joined with him in Arms, being by the Lord's Mercy towards his diſtreſſed People in this Kingdom, deliver'd into the Hands of the Eſtates of this Kingdom, ſhould alledge for their Defence and Impunity, upon this Ground, that when they were taken, their Takers promiſed to ſave their Lives, or their Fortunes: It cannot be thought that this ſhould free the Delinquent, unleſs it be thought in the Power of any private Man in the Army whatſoever, in his private way, to pardon the greateſt Offenders againſt the Eſtates, and Oppoſers of our ſolemn League and Covenant; quod eſt abſurdum. If this Evaſion be ſuſtain'd, then (without any great hazard) there is a Door opened to all cloſe Malignants (who in their cautelous way, dare not appear what truly they are) to join in Arms with the publick Traitors, and to have ſome of their own Temper in our Army, ready to give them Quarters, when an adverſe Wind blows. Likeas, if this Defence of Quarters be ſuſtain'd, then the whole Nation, eſpecially the Eſtates of Parliament, do violate the Oath of the Covenant, and the Oath of the Parliament, anent the proſecuting and cenſuring of Malignants, oppoſers of the Covenant. And therefore there cannot be any Impunity promiſed in the Fields to a Delinquent, by any private Man whatſoever, in prejudice of the ſolemn League and Covenant, and Defence and Maintenance thereof: But theſe who have riſen in Arms againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom, as they are puniſhable by the Laws of the Kingdom, ſo theſe Laws cannot be evacuate, and made of no effect by any Man's Protection or Promiſe.

Where in the Defence founded upon Quarters, an Example is cited of the Wars of England. It is anſwer'd, That the Eſtates of Parliament are not to be ruled by the Example of the Army of the Parliament of England, but are to proceed and to judge before God, that all Means may be eſſayed to divert his Wrath from this Nation; and are to proceed conform to the Laws of the Kingdom, in Proſecution of the ſolemn League and Covenant.

Where in the ſaid Defence it is inſinuate, that the Safety of many innocent Souls will be intereſted in the reſult of the Queſtion of Quarters. It is anſwer'd, that the ſamen needs no Anſwer in Law; but it may juſtly receive the Anſwer, That if Juſtice be done upon God's Enemies, the Lord will let us ſee Judgment upon the Enemies of this Kingdom, whoſe Terror is now caſten up, and upbraided.

And where in the Defence upon Quarters, it is alledged, that Scripture confirms the Law and Practice thereof, the 22d Verſe of the 6th Chapter of the 2d of the Kings, anent the Anſwer made by the Prophet Eliſha to the King of Iſrael's Queſtion, If he ſhould ſmite the Syrians whom the Prophet miraculouſly led blind into Samaria. It is anſwer'd, that that Paſſage of Scripture does not confirm the Law and Practice of Quarters, becauſe the Prophet thereby does not confirm and allow the Law and Practice of Quarters, but cites a Cuſtom of the Kings of Iſrael, which of itſelf is not allowable; being reproved by the Spirit of God, both in Saul for Agag, and in Ahab for Benhadad, in the 15th of the 1ſt of Samuel, and in the 20th of the 1ſt of the Kings. And the Prophet Eliſha was alledging the Kings of Iſrael their unlawful Cuſtom, not to confirm the Cuſtom, but to ſhew the Kings of Iſrael what Miracle the Prophet had wrought. And where it may be anſwer'd That there was an expreſs Command of the Lord for the not ſparing of Agag; yet it is to be remember'd, that there is no ſuch expreſs Command for Benhadad. 2. The Tye of the Covenant is no ſmall Tye, for puniſhing the Enemies of Religion, and theſe who have riſen in Arms againſt the Eſtates of this Kingdom; and is a Bond tying the Eſtates of Parliament to the Proſecution of Delinquents to their condign Puniſhment.

Item, Albeit Quarters were to be ſuſtain'd within this Kingdom, (as they are not to be ſuſtain'd as aforeſaid) yet no Quarters could be granted to this Defender, he being by the Propoſitions of Peace ratified in both Parliaments of Scotland and England, put amongſt the Number of theſe who ſhould expect no Pardon. In prejudice of which Declaration of the Eſtates of Parliament, none but the Eſtates of Parliament, or others having their Power, could promiſe Impunity.

22 December 1645.

Produced by the Procurators of the Eſtates, and given up to Sir Robert Spotiſwood this Day, with the Papers formerly given in by him, and orders him to give in his Duply to this againſt Thurſday next, at Ten a-Clock in the Forenoon, peremptorie.

DUPLIES by Sir Robert Spotiſwood, to the Replies made againſt his Defences upon Quarters.

WHereas it is reply'd, that the Defence upon Quarters is not relevantly ſet down, becauſe it is not condeſcended upon the Giver of Quarters, and the Time and Place. It is duply'd, that Time and Place, when and where I was taken, is ſo nottour, that there needs not any further condeſcending; it being known that I was taken in the Field about Philipbaugh, immediately after the Conflict there. And the ſaid Defence is relevant, without condeſcending upon the Giver of Quarters, becauſe by the Law of War and Nations, theſe who are taken in the Field, eo ipſo that they are taken, by whomſoever, have the Right and Benefit of Quarters; neither are they obliged to take preciſe notice of the Name and Quality of theſe who take them: Neither is it ſometimes poſſible in theſe Occaſions, when ſo many together are promiſcuouſly in Action. And yet I condeſcend that it was my good Fortune to be taken by an Officer belonging to a Man of Honour and Eminence, both in the State and the Army, the Earl Lanerk, to whom I was brought immediately thereafter, and had from him that courteous and favourable Reception that could be expected from ſuch a Man, in being ſecured from all Violence and Wrong. And as Honour and Nobility did weigh down in him theſe Prejudices, which he might have had, upon Miſinformation, againſt me; ſo I am confident that the unqueſtionable Law of Arms will not be violated in me, who am Priſoner of ſuch a Nobleman.

Where it is reply'd, that the Defence bears not what the Granter of Quarters promiſed to me in time of granting thereof, and that at the taking of Captives, ſeveral Takers make ſeveral Promiſes of diſtinct Natures. It is anſwer'd, that in theſe Occaſions, when Men are ſo much taken up with Action, they have not Leiſure, neither are they in uſe to ſtand upon Promiſes and Capitulations; and the granting of Quarters, without any other Expreſſion or Condition, is as binding by the Law of Arms, and ſecureth as much the Receiver's Life, as if there were a formal Inſtrument upon it: Qui enim hoſtem non interficit, ſed capit, tribuit capto jus ex tacita pollicitatione, tho there were no other Expreſſion. Yet to clear this part too, I refer my Quarters, and the manner thereof, to the Relation of the ſaid noble Earl, and of the Laird of Silvertounhall, one of his Captains, by whom I was firſt taken.

Where it is reply'd, that whatſoever hath been, or is the Cuſtom of other Nations, when one Nation is in War againſt another; in caſu de quo nunc agitur, Quarters cannot free me, becauſe I was not taken in bello, but in a treacherous way againſt my Country, and have joined myſelf with a declared Traitor. It is duply'd, 1. Albeit the Reply bears, that the Eſtates of Parliament are not to take notice of the Law and Cuſtom of Nations: Nevertheleſs, I (without preſcribing or prejudicating what the Eſtates of Parliament will, or are to take notice of) do adhere to the common Law of Nations and War, which hath Force every where; jus enim gentium omni humano generi commune eſt. Neither is the ſaid Law limited to the Caſe of a national and foreign War, when one Nation is in Arms with another; but hath place in omni bello, whether Foreign or Inteſtine, which falls under the Definition of War. For War is defined, Publicorum armorum contentio, upon ſome probable Grounds and Motives, which either Side conceive they have to be in Arms; which agreeth to Civil Wars as well as Foreign. And therefore the Neceſſity and favourable Laws of War have place in theſe Civil Wars and Diſtractions, and that with greater reaſon than in any other; becauſe albeit they be called Wars, thoſe who are engaged on either ſide, are not properly called Hoſtes, but Adverſarii; for this reaſon, quia in civilibus diſſenſionibus, quamvis ſæpe Reſpub. lædatur, non tamen in exitium Reipub. contenditur, as the Law ſaith. So that the Benefit of Quarters cannot be deny'd in Civil Wars, no more than in Foreign. Likeas, it was acknowledged elſewhere by the Replier, that Parties taken in procinctu of this War, may challenge the Benefit of Quarters; as appears by the Replies and Triplies in James Ogilvie's former Proceſs, which are in the Clerk's Hands, and are repeated by me, brevitatis cauſa.

2. Where the ſaid Reply bears, that I was not taken in bello, but in an Inſurrection, and as the Replier ſtates the Queſtion, it is affirm'd, that none can think that the Defence upon Quarters ſhould free me. I humbly crave, that what I am neceſſitate to alledge for my juſt Defence be not miſtaken, ſeeing I have no Intention to diſpute ſo high a Queſtion as the Lawfulneſs or Unlawfulneſs of the War; but only to vindicate my ſelf, and make it appear that the Benefit of the Law of Nations ought not to be deny'd to me. Therefore I anſwer, that I cannot be judged by the Replier's Thought and Aſſertion, either in ſtating the Queſtion, or deciding it; and I cannot conceive, that I can be ſaid to be taken in an Inſurrection, and not in bello, ſeeing Inſurrection in the notion and definition of Law is properly, when in time of a happy Peace and Harmony betwixt a Prince and the collective Body of his People, private and factious Men, for their own Ends and Deſigns, plebem contra Rempub. colligunt; as Sheba the Son of Bichri did againſt David. But when there is a Diviſion betwixt the Prince and his People, it cannot be ſaid that he or his Adherents, who upon probable (tho poſſibly erroneous) Grounds, follow their own Judgment, are in an Inſurrection. And the Queſtion being ſtated, as truly it is, when a Sovereign Prince is in terms of Difference with his People, and both profeſs that they are for the ſame Ends, and that the Prince intends nothing but the Maintenance of his juſt Right, without Prejudice of Religion or Liberty of the Subject eſtabliſh'd by the Laws; and on the other part, theſe who are on the other ſide profeſs, that they intend nothing but the Preſervation of Religion, and their Liberty, without Diminution of the King's Greatneſs, Power and Sovereignty, eſtabliſh'd by ſo many Laws; and none being to interpoſe themſelves to be Judges of ſo high Differences, both Sides conceive they are neceſſitated to take Arms for theſe Ends reſpective. If the Prince give Commiſſion and Command to any of his Subjects who are of the ſame Opinion with himſelf, to make a Diverſion; whether or not are theſe who are taken upon that ſide, to be thought to be taken in bello, or in an Inſurrection? The Queſtion being ſo ſtated, it is evident upon the foreſaid Grounds, and from the Story of all Times, and the Treatiſes of theſe who have written upon War, and the Laws thereof, that ſuch a War by the Law and Practice of all Nations, admitteth and challengeth the Privileges & Jura Belli, whereof that of Quarters is a main one. Neither are the Perſons or Conditions of theſe who are intruſted with the managing of the War to be conſider'd, in prejudice of theſe who adhere to the Prince, and are with theſe whom he imployeth, not out of any perſonal Reſpect to them, but as they repreſent the Prince by Commiſſion. Neither can this War be thought to be of another Nature than that in England, where Quarters are neither deny'd nor violated. And what Moderation hath been uſed in the like civil Diſtractions in this Country, during that Conteſt and War betwixt the Bruce and the Baliol, and in the Times of King James III. and Queen Mary, and in the beginning of King James VI. his Reign, as alſo during the cruel Wars in France, or yet in thoſe of the Low Countries, the Hiſtories of thoſe Times bear Record. It is reported, that King Robert the Bruce having taken many Priſoners, dimiſit omnes humaniter habitos; which are Buchanan's own words. Theſe who ſided with King James III. and were at the Field of Stirling, tho not only the greateſt part of the Nobility and Country were on the other ſide, but alſo the Prince, were not eſteem'd or deſign'd Enemies to the Country, but are ſaid to have been of another and of an ill Opinion, Act. 3. & 5. of the 1ſt Parliament of King James IV. and are ſaid by Buchanan to have follow'd diverſam ſectam; and divers of the Nobility who had adhered to King James III. did vote in the next Parliament held by King James IV. as appears by the 8th Act of his 1ſt Parliament, of the Edition of Likprivik. And likewiſe theſe who adhered to the Queen Regent in the beginning of the Reformation, and thereafter in the Troubles of Queen Mary, divers of them being Noblemen of the higheſt Condition, as the Earls of Argyle, Glencairn and Caſſils, the Lord Home and Boyd, &c. tho they proceeded to the higheſt Acts of Oppoſition, and ſome of them were at the Battle of Langſide, and indicted and held a Parliament at Edinburgh, the ſame Time that another was holden in the Cannongate in the King's Name, yet were ſo favourably conſtrued, that Archibald Earl of Argyle was in the Liſt to be Regent after the death of the Earl of Lennox. And what were the happy Effects of the Moderation uſed towards them, it appear'd by the happy and firm Peace that follow'd, and by the loyal Carriage both of them and their Poſterity ever thereafter. And therefore, for theſe Reaſons, and becauſe Priſoners have been exchanged in this War, it cannot be deny'd, but the Laws and Benefit of Quarters being of the ſame nature, and founded upon the ſame Principles of Law and Nations, ſhould be received and practiſed in this War.

Whereas the Inconvenient is repreſented and aggravated, if it ſhould be in the Power of private Men to pardon the greateſt Offenders, a Door ſhould be opened to cloſe Malignants to uſe the cautelous way mention'd in the Reply, to join in Arms with the publick Traitors, upon hope that ſome of their own Temper on the other ſide will be ready to give them Quarters when an adverſe Wind blows. It is duplied, that the Queſtion is not of granting an abſolute Pardon, which is not craved by the Defence of Quarters, but a ſecuring of the Life of theſe who are taken: And if the Defence of Quarters ſhould not be ſuſtained, the repelling of it will open a greater Door to all ſort of Cruelty, and to far greater Inconvenience than that imaginary one in the Reply; ſeeing it cannot be thought that Men will engage and expoſe themſelves to Hazard, upon Confidence that they might when they pleaſed have recourſe to their cloſe Friends for Quarters, conſidering the Difficulty to find them out in a time of ſuch Confuſion.

Where it is further reply'd, That if Quarters be ſuſtained, the whole Nation, and eſpecially the Eſtates of Parliament, will violate the Oath of the Covenant, and that other of the Parliament anent the Proſecution of Malignants; and that there cannot be any Impunity granted to Delinquents by any private Man. It is duplied, that tho the Oaths of Covenant and Parliament oblige the Takers of theſe Oaths to diſcover Malignants, that they may be brought to Trial, they do not prejudge thoſe who are called in queſtion of their lawful Defences, competent to them by the Law of Nations, as that of Quarters; neither do they oblige the Judges to repel ſuch Defences, ſeeing by the Covenant they are not obliged to proceed againſt thoſe who are queſtioned as Malignants, notwithſtanding of ſuch Defences. 2. The Practice of the Eſtates in ſome particular Caſes evinceth, that they do not think themſelves ſo limitate by the ſaid Oaths, as the Replier would have, becauſe they have before this condeſcended to the exchanging of divers Priſoners, and have diſmiſſed divers others who were in the like Condition with me, being taken in the Field; and have not only ſpared ſome who were on the other ſide, but have employed them thereafter. And it were abſurd and injurious to charge upon the Eſtates Perjury and Violation of their Oaths, becauſe of theſe Practices, being founded upon the Law of Nations and good Conſiderations.

3. The Queſtion is not of Impunity granted by any private Man in the Field, as the Reply bears, but of Quarters granted by the Laws of War and Nations, which is authorized and approven by the Lieutenant General and Commander in Chief the Day of the Conflict at Philiphaugh, in ſo far as he gave no Command diſcharging Quarters to be given in general, but only diſcharged any to be given to the Iriſh: Which Exception of the Iriſh, militates in Favours of all others not excepted, quia exceptio firmat regulam in non exceptis.

Whereas it is further replied, That the Eſtates of Parliament are not to be ruled by the Example of the Parliament of England, but to judge before God, and to divert his Wrath, by proceeding againſt Delinquents conform to the Laws of this Kingdom. It is anſwer'd, That the Practice of England is urged, not as a Rule to the Eſtates of this Kingdom to regulate their Procedure by, but as an Inſtance of the Practice of Nations, conform to the Law of Nations; which being receiv'd in England in this War, which is principally for obtaining the Reformation of Religion and ſettling the Liberties of that Country, ought with far greater Reaſon to be received by us who were involved in that War, out of our Deſire to have theſe Ends eſtabliſh'd there, after we had obtained the ſame our ſelves.

Neither can the Laws of this Kingdom, and the mutual League and Covenant be ſtill obtruded for the repelling of the Defence of Quarters; becauſe there is no Law of this Kingdom diſcharging Quarters to be granted or kept, neither any Clauſe of the mutual League and Covenant againſt the ſame; otherwiſe the whole Nation of England and the Eſtates there, ſhould be involved in Perjury, ſeeing they joined with us in the mutual League and Covenant; and notwithſtanding think not themſelves obliged to refuſe Quarters contrary to all Nations.

Where it is urged by the Replier, to make me odious, That the Terror of the Enemies of this Kingdom is caſten up and upbraided, and therefore if Juſtice be done upon God's Enemies, the Lord will let us ſee Juſtice done upon the Enemies of this Kingdom. I am confident, that if my Defence and Expreſſions be conſidered, it will appear they cannot be wreſted to import any upbraiding, or caſting up of any Terror; and whatever odious Characters be put upon me, I cannot be thought to be an Enemy to God, except it were ſhown that I had intended ſomething againſt the Honour of God, Purity of Religion, or the Liberty of my Country.

Country. For in Civil Combuſtions, the naked difference of Opinion anent Civil Queſtions, and adhering of a Subject to his Prince, was never thought to be Enmity againſt God. This is evident from the 2 Sam. chap. 2. ver. 26, and 27. for in that Civil War between David and the Houſe of Saul, tho David (God's Prophet, and Anointed to be King.) was on the one ſide with God's People, yet they who were upon the other ſide of Iſhboſheth were not called Enemies to God, but their Brethren; and upon that reſpect Joab did not exhort them that were with him to purſue eagerly their Adverſaries, as God's Enemies, but bid them return from following their Brethren. And in chap. 4. ver. 11. David calleth Iſhboſheth, tho the Head of that Faction againſt him, a righteous Perſon. Likewiſe, when it pleaſed God to work Deliverances for his People, it was not conceived that there was a neceſſity to divert God's Wrath, by proceeding in Rigour againſt thoſe who had fallen in their Hands; but by the contrary, David after that great Victory againſt Abſolom, being preſſed to that purpoſe, anſwered, Shall there any Man be put to death in Iſrael? 2 Sam. 19. 22. And Saul after his Victory againſt the Ammonites, when the People urged that they ſhould be put to Death who had been againſt Saul, and had ſaid that he ſhould not be King; he anſwered, There ſhall not a Man be put to death this day, for to day the Lord hath wrought Salvation in Iſrael, 1 Sam. 11. 13.

Where it is further reply'd, That the Paſſage of Scripture cited in the Defence, out of 2 Kings chap. 6. doth not confirm the Law and Practice of Quarters, but that the Prophet citeth a Cuſtom of the Kings of Iſrael, which of itſelf is not allowable, being reproved by the Spirit of God, in the Caſe of Agag and Benhadad; and that that unlawful Cuſtom is alledged not to confirm the ſame, but to ſhew what Miracle the Prophet had wrought. It is anſwered, That the Text itſelf is opponed, whence it is clear, that the Prophet uſeth an Argument a majori; quaſi dicat, ne eos quidem occideres, quos abduceres gladio tuo & arcu tuo; ergo multo minus alieno beneficio comparatos fas eſt occidere. So it is underſtood by Tremellius commenting upon that Place, and Diodati in his Annotations upon the ſame. And therefore the Gloſs of the Reply, bearing that nothing is meant by the Prophet but to ſhew what Miracle he hath wrought, is abſurd, ſeeing there needed no Probation of that which was evident and undeniable; and is contrary to the expreſs words of the Text, which containeth a Queſtion moved by the King of Iſrael unto Eliſha, whether he ſhould ſmite the Syrians or not; and a Negative Anſwer of the Prophet, that he ſhould not, fortified with an Argument by way of Enthymeme: Capti in bello non ſunt occidendi; Ergo multo minus alieno beneficio & miraculo comparati. Which ſhould be an ill Argument, if the Antecedent were only founded upon an evil and reproved Cuſtom: And the Prophet cannot be thought to uſe an ill Cuſtom, to enforce a good Concluſion; it being as much againſt Rules, both of Goodneſs and good Reaſoning, to uſe an Argument from that which is Evil, to prove that which is Good, as to do Ill that Good may come of it. And that it was not only the Cuſtom of the Kings of Iſrael to ſpare Captives, but an Univerſal and Antient Cuſtom of Nations, it is evident, not only from innumerable Paſſages, as well of the Civil Law, as of Hiſtory, but from the 14th of Geneſis, where it is clear, that theſe who were taken by Chedorlaomer, were taken Captives and carried away with Lot.

Where the Reply bears, That the ſaid Cuſtom is reproved in the Caſe of Agag and Benhadad. It is anſwered, That for the firſt, it is acknowledged by the Replier himſelf, that there was a great Diſparity betwixt the Caſe of Agag, and of theſe who have gotten Quarters, becauſe Agag was in that Condition, that he was incapable of Quarters, in regard God commanded Saul expreſly to go and ſmite Amalek, and deſtroy all that they had, and ſpare neither Man, Woman, Infant, Ox, or Sheep; ſo that this was an extraordinary Caſe of a Perſon by God's Command devoted to Deſtruction, 1 Kings 15. As for the Caſe of Benhadad, it is clear from the Text, that he was appointed to Deſtruction by the Lord, for his Arrogancy and Blaſphemy againſt God: And the Word in the 42 ver. chap. 20. of the 1ſt of Kings, uſed by the Prophet when he told Ahab that he had let go a Man whom God had appointed to utter Deſtruction, Anathemati devotum, as it is rendred by Tremellius, evinceth that there was an extraordinary Warrant for deſtroying of Benhadad; becauſe that Word is only uſed in ſuch caſes, as when there was an extraordinary Command to deſtroy and devote Jericho and Agag; nunc abi ut percutias Amalechum & Anathemati devoveas: which is likewiſe more clear from the whole Context of 1 Kings chap. 20. for after Benhadad was foil'd the firſt time by Ahab, a Prophet came to the King of Iſrael, and told him that the King of Syria would come up againſt him at the return of the Year, and adviſed him to mark and ſee what he ſhould do. And when the Prophet came thereafter to Ahab, after he had diſmiſs'd Benhadad, to convince him, did ſuppoſe the Caſe of a Man that had brought to him a Priſoner, and ſaid keep this Man, and that upon Condition, if by any means he ſhould be miſſing, his Life ſhould be for his Life. In which Caſe there was an expreſs Charge given to keep the Priſoner, and not to let him go: which muſt be underſtood likewiſe in the true Caſe of Benhadad, otherwiſe there ſhould not be a Parity between the Caſes; neither could Ahab have been convinced, but might have had an Evaſion and Pretext, that he had not got the like Charge, and that God's Will concerning the Deſtruction of Benhadad had not been intimated to him.

I humbly repreſent how hard it is that ſuch Arguments ſhould be brought from extraordinary Caſes of Blaſphemous Pagans, devoted and anathematized by God, and inforced upon People at ſuch times and places, where they whom it concerns cannot make Anſwer; whereas it may be evinced from diverſe places of Scripture, what Moderation was uſed in Times of Civil Diſtraction, and that theſe who had been active, and leading on the other ſide, were not only ſpared, but advanced: Witneſs the Civil War betwixt the Iſraelites and the Benjamites; in which, tho the Cauſe was moſt unjuſt upon the Benjamite's part, and that they had provoked mightily the reſt of the Tribes, by reaſon of two great Overthrows they had given them; yet after the Iſraelites had got the better of them, their Revenge went no further, than to kill ſuch as they could overtake in the Battel: But as for them that eſcaped to the Rock Rimmon, they called peaceably to them, and notwithſtanding of their Oath, provided

Wives

Wives for them, and made up again the Breach of that Tribe. The fair Quarters Abner and his Men had from Joab (tho in flying he had kill'd Asahel) is toucht before. Tho Adonijah exalted himself against King Solomon, and usurped the Kingdom, yet upon his Submission he was spared and dismissed: so was cursed Shimei. Amasa Captain of Absalom's Host, was received into Favour, and made Captain over Judah. These and many more Places clearly evince, that Scripture is on our side, and that not one Passage thereof can be wrested against us.

Whereas it is reply'd, That Quarters could not be granted to me, because I am excepted in the Propositions of Peace, and declared to be such a Person as could expect no Pardon. It is answered, first, The Question is not of Pardon, which is not craved, but of Quarters already granted for securing my Life: And the said Propositions of Peace, are not a positive Declarator of my Incapacity and Exception in case of a happy Peace, but only contains the Desires and Propositions of the Estates to be made to his Majesty, which may be altered upon a mutual condescending betwixt his Majesty and them, before they be settled by an Act of Pacification; and the said Exception is only to take effect against such as should be Processed and Condemned, and therefore it is to be understood without prejudice of their lawful Defences, and namely that of Quarters; seeing by no Act of Parliament, nor by the foresaid Propositions, it is declared, that these who are excepted should be incapable of Quarters, and of the benefit of the Law of Nations. And that this was not the Intention of the Estates of either Kingdom, is clear by their Practice; for notwithstanding of the said Propositions contained in the said Exception, some of these who are excepted, have been exchanged, as the Laird of Drum Younger with us, and Colonel Goreing and others in England.

DEFENCES for my Lord Ogilvie, 10 February, 1645.

MY LORDS,

I Conceive that my Answer to the Dittay may be very short, and that I need not enter in a subtile Dispute of Law against it; the Subject is so tender and tickliſh, that I shall be loth to be put to the Question, unless I be necessitate.

My Answer then at this time is, That I conceive, That by the Law of Nations and War, I cannot be brought to answer a Dittay of Treason upon hazard of my Life and Estate, as long as I am in this Condition; because I am a Prisoner of War, and was taken by the Lancashire Forces, with my Sword in my hand, and upon Quarters and Assurance that my Life, and such Stuff and other things as I had about me, should be safe and unquestioned. War, albeit with its Noise it seem to cry down all other Laws, wants not its own necessary and inviolable Laws, without which it should be rather a bloody and brutish Butchery, than a lawful War, which God himself is pleased to own, entitling himself the God of Hosts and Battels. That the Law of Quarters, amongst all other Jura Belli, is the most necessary and equitable, it cannot be called in question: the Issues of Life and of Death are in God's Hands, who is pleased to dispense with that which is called the Fortune of War in so variable a way, that it may be justly said, Inter utrumque volat dubiis victoria pennis; to the end, that neither side should refuse to the other that Humanity and Favour which they may have occasion possibly the next day to desire themselves. And it is not to be conceived that Quarters consist in the Favour only and Grant of the Giver, but as founded rather upon the Equity and Obligement of a mutual Paction, whereby the Receivers of Quarters redeem their own Safety, with the Safety of moe who would be in hazard upon the other side; it being always to be presumed, That Men being prodigal of themselves, and despairing of their Life and Quarters, tho in the end they may be overcome by Multitudes, will sell their Lives at a dearer Rate, than those who would live to enjoy the Victory would be content to have it. This Law, as in all other Wars, so more especially is to be kept in Civil Dissensions, in regard the Ties and Interests both Parties have in others, plead both for excusing those who are taken, by reason of Interest they conceive they had to adhere to the Side which they followed, and likewise for Favour of those who have taken their Friends, in respect of the Interest they have in their Prisoners. I may instance many Practicks in these late Troubles in England, but shall only remember one, because it is famous and nottour. One Captain Lilburn was taken by some of his Majesty's Forces; the Gentleman being both a Parliament-Man and a Commander, had been so active in both ways, that he wanted not powerful Enemies, who upon probable Grounds and Motives, moved his Majesty to put him to a Trial for divers high Points of Treason. The Gentleman alledged the inviolable Privilege of a Prisoner of War, and the Law of Nations, and that he could not be put to answer any Charge, tho never so just, until he were dismissed. General Rutbven, and all other Soldiers of Fortune did interpose themselves, and sollicited that the Law of War should not be violated. In end, Justice did prevail with his Majesty's all other Respects, and the Gentleman was upon the said Ground acquit. Upon these Grounds I conclude, that I am in the like Case, and cannot be holden to answer to this Dittay: And yet, lest I should seem to shadow myself only under the said Privilege and Defence, and that my Actions may not appear still to your Lordships so ugly and horrid as they look in my Dittay, being represented naked, and without the Vesture of the favourable Circumstances, and probable Grounds and Motives, and the Sincerity of my Intentions, whereupon they proceeded, without any thought of Treason or Hostility: I have joined with this Defence, a short and true Relation of my Carriage in these late Troubles, for Information to your Lordships.

WHatever the World may conceive of me and my Carriage in the firſt and late Troubles, my Conſcience bears me witneſs, and I may appeal to the knowledge of all thoſe who have had the Occaſion to know me inwardly, how free I have ever been of Diſaffection either to the Purity of Religion eſtabliſh'd here, or to my Native Country; and that I never countenanced nor complied with any thing which was conceived to be a Corruption either in Church or State, but was one of the firſt who petitioned for Redreſs of the ſamen during the firſt Troubles, tho ſome of our Houſes ſuffered the Extremity of War and Hoſtility: It cannot be inſtructed, that I appeared in any hoſtile way, or did any Act againſt my Country. After the Pacification of theſe Troubles, the Rebellion of Ireland having fallen out, I reſolved to take hold of that Occaſion, to expreſs to the World my conſtant Zeal for Religion and my Country. And to that purpoſe there having paſt ſome Diſcourſe betwixt General Leſley and me, concerning the Expedition for Ireland, which I conceived to imply an Invitation to engage in that Service; I ſent therefore a Gentleman of my own Name, to ſhow him, that I ſhould be content to ſerve in that War, upon ſuch Terms as others of my Quality were to have. But having found, that the General had not abſolute Power to diſpoſe of Places, and to prefer Officers; and not preſuming to have the like way and favour with others who had a Vote in the diſpoſing of them, I retired and lived quietly at home, without any meddling, until the Combuſtions in England broke out, and came to ſuch height, that they were like to involve this Kingdom, and to occaſion a Rupture betwixt his Majeſty and us. Then I began to bethink myſelf what my Carriage ſhould be: And in end I thought it beſt to keep myſelf free, and to convoy myſelf out of his Majeſty's Dominions, until it ſhould pleaſe God to put an end to theſe unhappy Differences. Upon this Reſolution I went to England, intending thence to go to France; but having gone to take leave of his Majeſty, I was commanded to ſtay and wait upon him. Being his Majeſty's Subject, and commanded to wait upon his Royal Perſon, at ſuch a time, when he was in diſtreſs and hazard, I neither did, nor can conceive how I could diſobey, without rubbing upon myſelf the Imputation both of Diſloyalty and Baſeneſs. This Country at that time had not entred in Covenant with the Parliament of England: I know not any Law obliging Scots-Men his Majeſty's Native Subjects, truſted by his Majeſty in Places of Reſpect and Eminence about his Perſon, wherein they may be uſeful to their Country, to deſert his Majeſty's Perſon and their Places, upon any occaſion of Rupture betwixt his Majeſty and his Subjects of England. I conceived then, that his Majeſty's Command did oblige me as well as others to wait upon his Perſon. The Article of the Treaty, which I am charg'd to have contraveen'd (tho I profeſs I was altogether ignorant of it, holding it no ſhame for one of my way to be unacquainted with ſome particular Laws) appears to me, having looked upon it upon this occaſion, not to mean or include the Caſe of perſonal Attendance, and Service of private Subjects, who in a private and perſonal way, adhere to his Majeſty in the time of Troubles and Queſtion with his People of England, as I did: For I went to England without Forces, yea without my ordinary Train, and accompanied only with one Servant. During my being in the South, I had no Charge but to wait upon his Majeſty; I neither commanded Forces, nor was inroll'd in any Regiment, or under the Command of any.

This was my Carriage in the South, until my Maſter commanded me with Montroſe and all our Country-Men who were about him, to go homeward. The Marquiſs of New-Caſtle being then in the Fields with an Army for his Majeſty, I could not have paſſed without ſeeing of him; my ſtay with him was ſo ſhort, that I neither had, nor could have had any Charge or Imployment under him. I do not deny but I came to this Country, but I profeſs it was by his Majeſty's expreſs Warrant and Command, and without any ſiniſter Intention againſt my Country and Country-Men. I came to Dumfries without any purpoſe of Hoſtility, but only to accommodate myſelf; and I believe none can complain of any Injury done at that time by me. Finding that the Country was diſpleaſed, I returned immediately, without doing harm to any. After my return I was acceſſary to neither of theſe Exploits libelled in the Dittay, of taking of Morpeth and the Sheills; neither was I preſent at either of theſe Places when they were taken; but I am able to make good, that I was at New-Caſtle at ſix or ſeven a-clock at Night, that day the Caſtle of Morpeth was taken, it being taken at one or two a-clock in the Afternoon: And having heard at New-Caſtle that it was taken, and being ſollicitous for my Country-Men, that they ſhould not have been well treated by the Engliſh, who had been irritate by them, in regard they had loſt ſome Men of Quality at the Place, I went of purpoſe at ſeven a-clock at Night from New-Caſtle, to procure favour to them; and I am confident, that theſe whom I found there will not deny, that they received ſuch tokens of my Favour as they ſtood in need of, and as I at that time was able to give. I neither had nor could have had any Imployment under Colonel Slavering, being a Gentleman beneath my own Quality.

When it was my Fortune to be taken, it was not in any Service or hoſtile Intention, but being upon my way to his Majeſty, with ſuch a ſmall number of People, as appeared afterwards not to be ſufficient for a Convoy, I was ſurprized and forced to beſtir myſelf for my juſt Defence, and ſafety of my Life, wherein it pleaſed God ſo to aſſiſt me, that theſe who were at the taking of me, were content to offer and give me Quarters; whereupon I ſuffered myſelf to be taken, and doubt not but that I may expect, that the Law of Nations and War, which is obſerved as ſacred and inviolable, when all other Laws are ſilent inter arma, ſhall not be broken in my behalf.

This is the true Relation of my Carriage in theſe troubleſome Times; for my Carriage before I ſhould be ſparing to ſpeak of it myſelf, if my after Actions were not painted with ſo foul and ugly Colours. To my knowledge before theſe Times, it cannot be condeſcended that I have offended any by any ſcandalous or injurious Act. And I am confident, that with God's Aſſiſtance I might have regulate regulate ſo the whole courſe of my life to the end, that I ſhould not have ſeemed to have fail'd to any, much leſs in my Duty either to my Prince or Country, if the Times had not fallen out ſo irregular, that I could not witneſs my reſpect to either, without ſeeming to fail to the other. It being then my Misfortune to have fallen in ſuch hard Times, having ſo much Intereſt on both ſides, I have not been ſuffered to have been an idle Spectator; I followed the light of my Conſcience, which bindeth even when it is miſtaken, as Divines hold. I believe none will ſuſpect me to have been a Contriver, Plotter or Fomenter of this unnatural War, and am aſſured, that if from this Relation it may appear, that I have been in any wiſe an Actor, there was never one more harmleſs. None of my Country-Men may charge me with any Act of Inſolency, Wrong or Prejudice to them; and I doubt not but ſome will bear me witneſs, that I have ſhown them favour. Tho I conceived, that my adhering to my Prince in his diſtreſs by his ſpecial Command was incumbent to me by my Oath of Allegiance, and in Duty, Conſcience and Honour; yet if any thing may be thought to have eſcaped me, being a young Man, and not acquainted with Subtilties and Laws, in a Buſineſs of ſo tender a Nature, which hath both in the Diſpute of the Queſtion in the general, and in this particular Caſe, divided ſo many Lawyers, States-men, Divines and others in their Opinions, and hath ſet a-work their Tongues, Pens and Swords, to maintain the ſame, I may ſay with far better reaſon than an old States-Man and Lawyer did in the like Caſe of Civil Diſſenſions; Erat obſcuritas, erat certamen inter clariſſimos duces: multi dubitabant quod optimum eſſet, & ſi aliquâ culpâ tenemur erroris humani a ſcelere certe liberi ſumus.

IT is anſwered, That he cannot be called in queſtion of Life and Fortune, and forced to anſwer at this time to this Dittay; becauſe he is Priſoner of War taken upon Quarters, and expreſs Capitulation with his Takers for his Safety; and by the Law and received Cuſtoms of all Nations, where War is not turned in a downright Butchery, there be jura Belli held ſacred and inviolable: Whereof a main one is captivis parcendum, & ſicut reſiſtenti violentia redditur, ita captivo miſericordia debetur, which are Auguſtin's words repeated in C. 3. 23, 4, 1. Danda enim eſt ad minimum vita his qui vitam hoſtibus & capientibus reliquerunt. This was the Law of Lycurgus, of the Romans, and other Warlike Nations, as is clear from Hiſtory and Writers de jure Belli. It is founded not only upon common Equity, but upon the ſpecial Equity of an expreſs Paction, where any Capitulation is made; and where there is no expreſs Capitulation, it is founded upon a tacite and preſumed Paction, nam qui hoſtem non interficit, ſed capit, videtur velle eum vivum habere; & capto eſt jus ex tacita pollicitatione ne poſſit poſtea interfici, & qui ſe dedidit cum hoſte paciſci de vita videtur: eſpecially where Captives have rendred themſelves in Arms, qui pugnando potuerunt non capi, aut non ſine ſanguine.

Scripture itſelf confirmeth this Law and Practice: For the Syrians being ſtriken blind, and brought Captives by Eliſha, to the King of Iſrael at Samaria, he enquires at Eliſha, whether he ſhould ſmite them or not? He anſwers negative, ſaying, Would thou ſmite thoſe whom thou haſt taken with thy Sword and Bow?

This Law thus confirmed, is moſt obſervable in a Civil War betwixt a Prince profeſſing nothing but the Maintenance of his juſt Power, without prejudice of Religion, and his People's Liberties, to whom adheres a part of his Subjects: and his People on the other ſide profeſſing Loyalty to his Majeſty, Maintenance and Reformation of Religion, betwixt whom there is a Concurrence of ſo many Relations and Intereſts publick and private, as not only Quarters, but Exchange of Priſoners, both flowing from one Fountain, ſhould neceſſarily be obſerved. This is the Caſe of our unnatural War: Priſoners have been exchanged: And it ſhould be a Stain to this Kirk and Kingdom, if Quarters ſhould not be inviolably kept. The Conſequence alſo may prove dangerous, the Fortune of War being ambulatory; what is now the Defender's Caſe, may poſſibly be the Condition of others who appear ſecure for the preſent.

The Hiſtory of Wars betwixt the Swedes and Ruſſians ſheweth, That theſe Nations who at firſt have been ſo full of Animoſity as to refuſe Quarters, finding in the Progreſs ſo great Inconveniencies to follow, have been forced to acknowledge the neceſſity.

And therefore the Defender upon Quarters, having rendered himſelf, cannot now be proceſſed upon Life and Fortune; but before any Procedure whatſoever, he ought to be diſmiſſed and convoyed to a Place of Safety.

ANSWERS to the Lord Ogilvie his Defences.

THE firſt Defence founded upon the courſe of Martial Law, in giving Quarters and Conditions to parties taken, and keeping of the ſamen, can have no place for freeing of my Lord Ogilvie from anſwering to the Crimes contained in his Dittay. 1. Becauſe the Crimes whereupon he is challenged are theſe which were not only committed by him before his Apprehending, but alſo for which he was cited to compear before the Parliament, long before his Apprehending, and from Trial whereof he did withdraw himſelf by flying to England; wherein no Accident occurring to him occaſioned by his own Miſdemeanour can furniſh to him any Shadow of Excuſe. 2. The Benefit of Quarters founded upon Martial Law, is only conſiderable, when the ſamen are granted in ipſo procinctu, and by thoſe having Power, neither of which my Lord has, nor can alledge; but by the contrary in his Defences, he grants that he was not in any Service, but upon his way to his Majeſty. Likeas, they who took him, found about him certain Inſtructions from the Earl of Montroſe to his Majeſty, whereof the Copies were ſent to the Committee of Eſtates. 3. By the Martial Law, the Quarters alledged given, cannot be further extended, than to the Freedom from all Challenge lenges within that Kingdom, within which the Quarters were granted: And my Lord being taken in England, might have had ſome colour (having cleared and verified the Quarters made to him) to have craved the Benefit of the Martial Law, which either he has not craved, or if crav'd, has been judged to be unjuſt; becauſe the Eſtates of the Kingdom where he was taken, have tranſmitted him to the Eſtates of this Kingdom whereof he is a Subject.

Item, As to the ſecond part of my Lord's Defence, which is anent his Carriage, oppones the Dittay and Probation thereof.

19 February 1645.

This Day about half Hour to Ten in the Forenoon, their Replies given in by the Procurators of Eſtates for eliding of the Defences given in by the late Lord Ogilvie, are delivered to him about Ten of the Clock before Noon, and ordains him to give in his Duplies, together with all other Defences he has, either in the principal Cauſe, or againſt the Probation, againſt Friday at two a Clock in the Afternoon.

REASONS why the Defenders cannot be urged to give in any other Defences, till that of Quarters be Diſcuſſed.

FIRST, the Defence proponed is inconſiſtent with other Defences, becauſe the Defence is, that the Defender is not obliged to anſwer at all to a Dittay, ſo long as he is in this Condition, for the Reaſons adduced in the Defence; and therefore he cannot be urged to give in other Defences. For albeit Defences in cauſa may be proponed together, yet a Defence of this Nature, which is not an Exception in meritis cauſæ, but is excluſive of Proceſs, & quæ impedit litis ingreſſum, cannot conſiſt with other Defences in cauſa, becauſe the proponing of other Defences would be a tacite paſſing from the ſame; and the Defender is in the like caſe, as if being purſued before the Juſtice, he would alledge to a Remiſſion; in which caſe, he could not be urged in Juſtice or Form of Proceſs, to give in other Defences before the ſaid Defences were diſcuſſed.

2. This Defence is ſo material, that if it be found relevant, as it ought to be, the Defender will poſſibly uſe no other Defences at all; and he is ſo confident of the Relevancy of it, that he has not thought upon, nor deſired his Advocates to think upon his other Defences in Cauſa.

3. It is not uſual before any Judicatory to cauſe the Defender give in all his Defences at firſt, eſpecially where a material Defence eluſory of the Inſtance is proponed, which before giving in of any other Defences ſhould be anſwered and diſcuſſed.

ANSWERS to the Reaſons given in by James Ogilvie, William Murray, Sir Robert Spotiſwood, and Nathaniel Gordon, why they cannot be urged to give in any other Defences, till that Defence anent Quarters be diſcuſſed.

TO the firſt Reaſon, where it bears, that the Defence of Quarters is excluſive of Proceſs, & impedit litis ingreſſum. It is anſwered, That the Defence of Quarters is not excluſive of Proceſs, nec impedit litis ingreſſum, becauſe albeit it were ſuſtained to the Defenders, that theſe who are taken in War, and get the benefit of Quarters, cannot be killed or ſlain; yet they who are taken in bello (albeit Quarters were granted to be lawful, which is denyed in noſtro caſu) are ſtill Captivi; and being Captives, the Procurators of the Eſtates, in name of the Publick, may crave Proceſs againſt the Captives, ut Judex procedat ad ſententiam, that it may be clear to the World that the Captives are guilty of ſuch and ſuch Crimes; which Guilt is neither pardoned, nor taken away by the giving of Quarters (albeit it were granted that Quarters were lawful in hoc caſu, as it is not, as ſhall be cleared in the diſcuſſing of the Defence founded upon Quarters) but the giving of Quarters impedit tantummodo executionem ſententiæ, eamque partialem duntaxat, quatenus ea eſt extendenda ad vitam; but impedes not the Criminal Purſuit it ſelf, whereby it is craved to be found that the Delinquents have committed ſuch and ſuch Crimes.

And where the foreſaid firſt Reaſon bears, That the Defence of Quarters cannot conſiſt with the other Defences in Cauſa, becauſe the proponing of other Defences ſhould be a tacite paſſing from the ſame. It is anſwered, The reaſon of the foreſaid Inconſiſtency is not relevant; for albeit the proponing of other Defences before the Defence founded upon Quarters might ſeem to the Defenders to prejudge the Defence of Quarters, as they conceive the Defence of Quarters to be contra litis ingreſſum (which it is not for the Anſwer above-written) yet proponing of the reſt of the peremptory Defences ſimul & ſemel with the Defence of Quarters, the Defence of Quarters preceding cannot be a paſſing from that Defence which is proponed primo loco & per expreſſum; but to eſchew Cavillation, the Defenders Procurators know very well, that they may propone the reſt of the Peremptors with this Caution (adhering to the Defence of Quarters, and may proteſt, that the proponing of the reſt ſhall not prejudge them of the Defence of Quarters) like as the Procurators of Eſtates declare, that the proponing of the reſt of the Defences, ſhall not prejudge their Defence of Quarters, but the ſame ſhall receive its own Anſwer with the reſt.

To the laſt part of the firſt Reaſon founded upon the ſimile of a Remiſſion. It is anſwered, That the ſame cannot be reſpected, 1. Becauſe an Alledgeance upon a Remiſſion was never alledged, but where it was inſtantly verified by Production of the Remiſſion. 2. A Remiſſion perimit totam inſtantiam, for it frees the Defender from all Sentence, or Execution, of the Crime laid to his Charge: And it is truly contra litis ingreſſum, becauſe it diſcharges the Judge to proceed. But the Defence of Quarters, as is above written, nullam proceſſus partem impedit, but is only effective, when the Sentence of the Proceſs is to be put to execution.

To the ſecond Reaſon, bearing, That if the Defence of Quarters be ſuſtain'd to the Defenders as relevant, whereof they are confident, that poſſibly they will uſe no other Defences at all. It is anſwered, The Procurators of Eſtates are not to make anſwer to any thing that the Defenders mind poſſibly to do; but this anſwer they make, That this ſame may be alledged in all other peremptory Defences: For if any peremptory Defence be ſuſtained relevant and proven, the Defender needs propone no other Defences; which is abſurd, unleſs they will omit the proponing of them upon their own Peril, ſeeing it has ever been the Cuſtom of all Commiſſions from the Parliament, that all the Defences are proponed together, as has been in uſe to be proponed before the Juſtice.

To the third and laſt Reaſon, oppones the Cuſtom of the Juſtice Court, and of all preceding Commiſſions flowing from the Parliament for trying of Delinquents. For before the Juſtice Court, the Juſtice uſually urges the Pannal's Procurators to propone all the Defences, unleſs ſometimes the King's Advocat, for his own behoof, and in favours of the Purſuer, will make a Reply to a Peremptor, before he hear the reſt proponed: and before the Commiſſions of Parliament for trying of Delinquents, it has been always the Cuſtom to propone all the Defences together. And where the ſaid third Reaſon bears, that a material Defence eluſory of the Inſtance, ought to be diſcuſſed before the Defenders be urged to propone any further Defences. It is anſwered, 1. That the Defence of Quarters is not eluſory of the Proceſs, or any part thereof. 2. All total Exceptions are eluſory of the Inſtance. And therefore, in no Caſe in the Defenders Judgment, can the Defenders be urged to propone their peremptory Defences ſimul & ſemel: quod eſt abſurdum.

DUPLIES for Ogilvie, William Murray, Sir Robert Spotiſwood, and Nathaniel Gordon.

TO the Anſwer to the firſt Alledgeance, it is duplyed; That the Defence founded upon Quarters, not only impedes the Execution of the Sentence, but elides the very Propoſition of the Libel, and impedes the Sentence it ſelf, at the leaſt in ſo far as the Propoſition of the Libel carries, that whoſoever are Art and Part of the Crimes libelled, incur the pain of Treaſon, and Forefaulture of Life: Which is expreſly libelled in the Propoſition of their Libel. And the Life being the greateſt of all Pains, a Defence alledged for Safety thereof, and eluſory of that part of the Propoſition and Concluſion foreſaid againſt the ſamen, ſhould firſt, and per ſe be diſcuſſed: Eſpecially in regard that the Defenders are very loth to entangle themſelves in a Diſpute with the Eſtates concerning the Relevancy of the Libel, wherein many tender Points may occur to be agitate, and it ſhould tend to an unneceſſary protracting of them, if the Defenders ſhould be forced to give in all their Defences, which the Defenders Procurators have not as yet thought on, being confident that the Defence upon Quarters will be found relevant, and carry that whereof the Defenders ſhould be moſt careful, viz. Safety of their Life. And it is known, that before the Juſtice, and other inferior Judicatories, Defences are moſt frequently proponed and diſcuſſed in the ſame order. And it is time, after this material Defence ſhall be diſcuſſed, then to urge the Defenders to give in all their Defences. Likeas, in the former Proceſs purſued againſt Ogilvie, there being one of the ſame nature given in by him; there paſt in that Proceſs, Replies, Duplies, Triplies, and Quadruplies, before he was urged to give in any further Defences.

Secundo, Whereas it is alledged, That in all Commiſſions from the Parliament, it has been the Cuſtom to propone all Defences together, juſt as before the Juſtice General. The Defender denies any ſuch Cuſtom; but by the contrary Defences have ſeverally, and without Cumulation, been proponed and diſcuſſed, as in Ochiltry's Proceſs, Toſchock's, Meldrum's, and many others.

The ſame Duply the Defenders repeat againſt the remanent Members of the Reply: And humbly repreſents to the Honourable Lords of the Committee the Expediency of diſcuſſing of this Defence primo loco, ſeeing the diſcuſſing thereof in their favours (which they expect) will ſhorten the Proceſs, and make them ready to give all poſſible Content to the Eſtates, and no wiſe to vex them with many more Defences, or tedious Diſpute.

The Report from the Commiſſioners for the Proceſs to the Parliament againſt Sir Robert Spotiſwood.

AT Sanct-Andrews the eight day of January one Thouſand ſix Hundreth and fourty ſix Years, The Lords and others Commiſſioners underwritten, appointed by the Eſtates of Parliament for the Proceſs, They are to ſay, William Earl Mariſhal, William Earl of Glencairn, John Earl of Caſſils, John Earl of Weymes, Robert Lord Burghly, James Lord Coupar, Sir Archbald Johnſton of Wariſton, one of the Lords of Seſſions, Sir William Cochran of Colldoun, Mr. George Dundaſs of Maner, Sir Thomas Ruthven of Frieland, Sir John Weyms of Bogie, James Mackdougal of Garthland, John Kennedy Burges of Air, George Gairden Burges of Bruntiſland, Mr. Robert Cunningham Burges of Kingborne, Mr. Robert Barclay Burges of Irwing, William Glendinning Burges of Kirkudbright, Mr. James Campbel Burges of Dumbarton, and Mr. Alexander Colvil of Blair, one of his Majeſty's Juſtice Deputes, not as Ordinary Judge in the Office of Juſticiary, but as one of the Commiſſioners delegate by the the ſaids Eſtates of Parliament with the remanent Commiſſioners foreſaid, Anent the Dittay given in by Mr. Roger Mowat, Mr. James Baird, and Thomas Nicolſon Procurators for the Eſtates of this Kingdom to Sir Robert Spotiſwood, Makand Mentioun, &c. as in the Dittay it ſelf is more fully contain'd. The ſaid Mr. Roger Mowat, Mr. James Baird, and Mr. Thomas Nicolſon Procurators for the ſaids Eſtates, Compearand perſonally, who for inſtructing of the Points of the ſaid Dittay produced the foreſaid Commiſſion granted by the King's Majeſty to the ſaid James Graham, making and conſtituting him Lieutenant Governour and Captain General of all the Forces raiſed or to be raiſed within this Kingdom; and giving him Power and Authority to raiſe and levy Forces within this Kingdom, and to lead and conduct them againſt the Forces raiſed and levied by Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom, as the ſamen of the Date, Tenor and Contents foreſaid, ſigneted, docqueted and ſubſcribed by the ſaid Sir Robert, at more length bears. And likewiſe produced the foreſaid Proclamation for holding of Parliaments within this Kingdom, together with the foreſaid Commiſſion granted by his Majeſty to the ſaid James Graham to be Commiſſioner for his Majeſty for holding of the ſaid Parliament, as the ſamen of the Tenor and Contents foreſaid, docqueted and ſubſcribed by the ſaid Sir Robert, alſo at more length bears. And in like manner likewiſe produced the foreſaid miſſive Letter written by the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood during his being with the ſaid James Graham, to ſome of the Noblemen about the King's Perſon in England, as the ſamen of the Date, Tenor and Contents foreſaid, ſubſcribed by the ſaid Sir Robert, likewiſe at more length bears. And the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood Defender Compearand Perſonally, who acknowledged Judicially the Signeting of the foreſaid firſt Commiſſion, and the Docqueting and Subſcription thereof; the Docqueting and Subſcriving of the foreſaid Proclamation, and ſecond Commiſſion to the ſaid James Graham for holding of the Parliament; and the foreſaid miſſive Letter and Subſcription thereof, to be all the ſaid Sir Robert's own proper Hand write; whereupon the ſaids Procurators of Eſtates asked Inſtruments. Thereafter the Rights, Reaſons and Allegations, together with the Alledgeances, Replies and Duplies given in by the ſaid Parties hinc inde, with the hail Writs foreſaid, and other Probation deduced by the ſaids Procurators of Eſtates, being at length heard, ſeen and conſider'd by the ſaids Commiſſioners, and they being therewith ripely adviſed, the ſaids Commiſſioners according to the Power and Authority given to them by the ſaids Eſtates of Parliament, makes their Report as follows, viz. They find the ſaid Dittay founded upon the foreſaid Act of Parliament made in May 1584. anent the impugning the Dignity and Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, ſeeking or procuring the Innovation or Diminution of the Power of the ſamen, being ſubſum'd upon, and qualified in manner contain'd in the ſaid Dittay, relevant to infer againſt the ſaid Defender any arbitrary Cenſure or Puniſhment the ſaids Eſtates of Parliament ſhall think expedient. And in the like manner find the ſaid Dittay founded upon the Act of Parliament above-written made in June 1644. anent the taking up of Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates of the Country, relevant to infer the Concluſion contain'd in the ſaid Act, notwithſtanding of the hail Defences and Duplies proponed for the part of the ſaid Sir Robert in the contrary. And repels the Defence founded upon Quarters proponed by the ſaid Sir Robert, as the ſamen is proponed by him againſt the ſaid Dittay, to ſtay and impede the foreſaids Commiſſioners to proceed to diſcuſs the Relevancy and Probation of the ſaid Dittay. But the ſaids Commiſſioners remits and refers the ſaids Defences given in by the ſaid Sir Robert or James Ogilvie, to which the ſaid Sir Robert adheres, and which he repeats founded upon Quarters, to be diſcuſſed and decided by the honourable Eſtates of Parliament before the pronouncing of any Sentence of Condemnation to follow hereupon. And finds that Member of the Aſſumption of the ſaid Dittay, bearing Sir Robert has docqueted and ſubſcribed with his Hand, ſigneted with the Signet of the Office of Secretary, the foreſaid Commiſſion granted to the ſaid James Graham upon the firſt of June 1645, for raiſing and levying of Forces within this Kingdom, leading and commanding them againſt the Forces raiſed and levyed by Authority of the Eſtates of Parliament, and ſiklike, bearing that the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood has docqueted and ſubſcribed with his hand the foreſaid Commiſſion granted by his Majeſty to James Graham, to be Commiſſioner for his Majeſty for holding the ſaid pretended Parliament, ſufficiently proven againſt the ſaid Sir Robert, to infer any arbitrary Cenſure or Puniſhment the foreſaids Eſtates of Parliament ſhall think fit. And in like manner find that Member of the ſaid Aſſumption of the foreſaid Dittay, bearing that the ſaid Sir Robert has joined himſelf with the ſaid James Graham and his rebellious Army, and his being with him at Acts of Hoſtility committed by him in the Month of September laſt, at the Battel of Philiphaugh, being taken in the Battel, and his Sword drawn in his hand; and ſo having taken up Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates of the Country, ſufficiently proven againſt the ſaid Sir Robert, to infer the Pain and Puniſhment of Treaſon, and that therethorow he is puniſhable by Forefaulture of Life, Lands and Goods, or any other Cenſure the Parliament ſhall pleaſe to inflict, the Defence of Quarters being firſt diſcuſt as aforeſaid. Sic Subſcribitur, Read in Audience of the Parliament, and remitted to the ſeveral Bodies.

THE Eſtates of Parliament having heard the whole Diſpute contain'd in the Alledgeance, Reply and Duply, above and a back written, founded upon the Exception of Quarters, proponed for Sir Robert Spotiſwood, Nathaniel Gordon, William Murray, and Mr. Andrew Guthrie, and after full reading of the ſamen hail Diſpute in plain Parliament, and after full Debate there, the ſaids Eſtates repel the Alledgeance and Duply contained in this Paper, and in the other Papers produced, in reſpect of the Reply propon'd for eliding of the Alledgeance; whereupon Mr. Thomas Nicolſon, one of the Procurators for the Eſtates asked Inſtruments. Sic ſubſcribitur, 16 January, 1646.

THE Report above written produced from the Commiſſion for the Proceſs, againſt Sir Robert Spotiſwood, together with the Interlocutor of Parliament given this day, repelling the Defence and Duply propon'd by him, founded upon Quarters, in reſpect of the Reply proponed for eliding of the ſame Defence, being read, heard, conſidered and adviſed by the Eſtates of Parliament; they approve the ſame Report and Interloeutor of Parliament foreſaid, and find and declare that the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood has incurr'd the Capital Puniſhment of Death, in reſpect the Dittay founded upon the Act of Parliament in May 1584, is found relevant and proven againſt him by the foreſaid Report. And als find and declare, That the ſaid Sir Robert Spotiſwood has incurred the Pain and Puniſhment of Treaſon, and Forefaulture of his Life, Lands and Goods, in reſpect the Dittay founded upon the Act of Parliament made in June 1644, anent the taking up of Arms againſt the Kingdom and Eſtates of this Country, is alſo found relevant and proven againſt him by the Report above ſpecified. And therefore the Eſtates declare him a Traitor to this Kingdom and Eſtates thereof, and forefault him in Life, Lands and Goods, to be applyed to the uſe of the Publick; and ordain his Arms to be riven, and delete out of the Book of Arms, and himſelf to be execute to the Death by ſtriking of his Head from his Shoulders at the Mercat Croſs of St. Andrews, upon Tueſday next the twentieth day of January inſtant, at twelve a Clock that day, and ordain the Magiſtrats of St. Andrews to ſee the ſame done. Sic Subſcribitur,

The Procurators of the States preſented to the Commiſſioners the Form and Directory for proving Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Dittay.

St. Andrews, 27 December 1645, The Subſumption of Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Dittay, in the ſeveral Members and Aggravations thereof libelled, is proven as after follows.

THE Gracious Favour mentioned in his Dittay granted by the Eſtates of Parliament in Anno 1641, is contained in the 33 Act of King Charles his ſecond Parliament dated the 16 of November 1641.

The Nomination of the Earl of Lanerk to be Secretary by the King's Majeſty and Parliament is proven by the Act of King Charles his ſecond Parliament in Anno 1642.

The King's Majeſty's Declaration anent the Defender is in the Act of King Charles his Parliament in Anno 1641.

The Defender his Docqueting and Signeting of the two Commiſſions, and of the Proclamation mentioned in the Defender his Dittay, are proven by the ſaids two Commiſſions and Proclamation produced.

The Defender his Joining with James Grahame and his Army is proven by his own Declaration of the ſecond of January 1646.

The Writing of the Letter by the Defender of the date the tenth of September 1645. is proven by the Production of the Letter.

DOUBLE of the King's Majeſty his Commiſſion to the Marquis of Montroſe, to be Lieutenant Governour, and General of all His Majeſty's Forces in Scotland.

CHARLES R.

CHARLES by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our Right Truſty and Right entirely beloved Couſin James Marquis of Montroſe, greeting. Whereas divers traiterous and ſeditious Perſons of our Kingdom of Scotland, have levied War againſt us, and to the manifeſt Forefaulture of their Allegiance, and the Breach of the Act of Pacification, lately made between the two Kingdoms, have invaded our Kingdom of England, and poſſeſs'd themſelves in divers places therein, to the great Diſturbance of our Peace, and the Deſtruction and Spoil of our People: And yet further, if no courſe be taken by us to prevent that, intend to make a new Invaſion upon this our Kingdom, and bring in Forces for the Aſſiſtance of the Rebels here. Know ye therefore, that we repoſing eſpecial Truſt and Confidence in your approved Wiſdom, Courage, Fidelity and great Ability, whereof you have given hitherto moſt extraordinary and undeniable Proof, do by theſe Preſents name, conſtitute, ordain and authorize you the ſaid James Marquis of Montroſe to be our Lieutenant Governor, and Captain General of all our Forces raiſed, or to be raiſed in our Kingdom of Scotland, and of, and over all others brought, or to be brought thither out of our Kingdom of England and Ireland, or from any part whatſoever. And we hereby give you Power and Authority to raiſe and levy Forces meet and apt for the Wars within all the Parts of our ſaid Kingdom of Scotland, and to command and enjoin the Sheriff Lieutenants, Magiſtrats of Cities and Towns, and all others having Power and Authority under us, within every ſeveral County of our ſaid Kingdom, to ſend, or cauſe to be ſent unto you ſuch Number of our ſaid Subjects apt and meet for the War, to ſuch Place, or Places, and at ſuch time as you ſhall think expedient. And we do further by theſe Preſents, give you full Power and Authority to put in readineſs the Perſons ſo by you raiſed, or to be raiſed, levied, or aſſembled, ſent, conducted, or brought unto you and them, from time to time, to arm, lead and conduct againſt all and ſingular Enemies, Rebels and Traitors, and every of their Adherents attempting any thing againſt us, our Crown and Dignity, within any part of the ſaid Kingdom, and the ſaids Enemies, Rebels and Traitors, to invade, purſue, repreſs, and in caſe of Oppoſition or Reſiſtance, to ſlay, kill, kill, and put to Execution of Death, by all ways and means, according to your good Diſcretion: And to do, fulfil and execute all and ſingular other things, which ſhall be requiſite for the Levying, Conducting and Government of the ſaid Forces, particularly to make, conſtitute and ordain Laws, Ordinances and Proclamations from time to time, as the Caſe ſhall require, for the good Government and Order of all the Forces that are, or ſhall be under your Command; and the ſame alſo, and every one of them to cauſe to be duly proclaimed, performed and executed. And likewiſe to puniſh all Mutinies, Tumults, Rapines, Murders, and all other Crimes and Miſdemeanours of any Perſon under your Command in your Army, according to the Courſe and Cuſtom of the Wars and the Laws of the Land. As alſo for us, and in our Name, as you in your Diſcretion ſhall think fit, to ſave ſuch as you pleaſe of theſe Traitors, Rebels, and Offenders as ſhall be apprehended or brought into Priſon, and make tender of our Royal Grace and Pardon to ſuch of them as ſhall ſubmit to us, and deſire to receive our Mercy. And further, we do give unto you full Power and Authority, for the better Execution of this our Commiſſion, to appoint and aſſign all Commanders and Officers neceſſary and requiſite for the Government and Command of our ſaids Forces, and to command all Cities, Towns, Caſtles and Forts within our ſaid Kingdom of Scotland to place Governors and Commanders within the ſame, and to remove, diſplace or continue ſuch as are in any of them already, according as you ſhall think meet for the Good of our Service, and Safety of that our Kingdom. And our further will and pleaſure is, and we do by theſe Preſents give unto you full Power and Authority, not only to repreſs and ſubdue ſuch as are in Arms againſt us within our ſaid Kingdom of Scotland, but alſo to advance your Forces into ſuch parts of our Kingdom of England, or any other of our Dominions as are infeſted and oppreſſed by any of our Scotiſh Subjects already brought, or hereafter to be brought in for aſſiſting the Rebels of this Kingdom, and there to purſue and beat out of ſuch Towns, Caſtles and Forts, as they have got Poſſeſſion of, without any part of our ſaid Kingdom of England, or other our Dominions, to recover the ſame for our uſe, and to relieve and free our Engliſh Subjects, and others, from the heavy Yoke that by that means lieth upon them. And becauſe of the ample Teſtimony you have given us of your ſingular Wiſdom and Fidelity in the ordering and diſpoſing of our great and weighty Affairs hitherto, to the end you may reward and encourage ſuch as have given, or ſhall give Aſſiſtance unto you towards the Advancement of our Service; We do hereby give unto you full Power and Authority from time to time to confer the Title, Degree and Honour of Knighthood upon ſuch Perſons, either Natives or others imployed under your Charge and Command, whom you in your Diſcretion ſhall conceive fit to receive the ſame; and whatſoever you ſhall do herein, according to the true Intent and Meaning of theſe Preſents, we do for us, our Heirs and Succeſſors, ratify and confirm upon the great Truſt and Confidence which we repoſe in you, that ye will make ſuch uſe of this Power given to you as may beſt conduce to the Advancement of our Service and Honour. Wherefore we will and command you our ſaid Lieutenant Governor, with all Diligence duly to execute the Premiſes with effect. And whatſoever you ſhall do by vertue of this our Commiſſion, and according to the Tenor and Effect of the ſame, touching the Execution of the Premiſſes, or any part thereof, you ſhall be for the ſame diſcharged, by theſe Preſents in that behalf againſt us, our Heirs and Succeſſors. And therefore we will and command all and ſingular our Subjects within our ſaid Kingdom of Scotland, of whatſomever Degree and Quality, whether Noblemen, Gentlemen, Burgeſſes, Magiſtrates in the Country or Towns, Privy-Counſellors, Officers of State Militant, Commanders and Soldiers, to whom it ſhall appertain, that they and every of them ſhall be from time to time attendant, aiding, aſſiſting and helping to you, and at the Commandment of you as aforeſaid in the due Execution hereof, and that they diligently and faithfully perform and execute ſuch Commands as you ſhall from time to time give them for our Service, as they and every of them tender our Diſpleaſure, and will anſwer the contrary at their utmoſt Perils. And theſe Preſents ſhall have Continuance during our Pleaſure, and ever while they be expreſly revoked by us. Given under our Sign Manual, and Privy Signit; At our Court at Hereford the twenty fifth of June 1645, and of our Reign the one and twentieth.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

THIS is a Double of the former Commiſſion granted by your Majeſty to the Marquis of Montroſe, to be Lieutenant Governor, and General of all your Majeſty's Forces in Scotland.

Robert Spotiſwood.

CHARLES R.

CHARLES by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our Lovits, Lyon King of Arms, Heralds, Purſevants, Meſſengers and Officers at Arms, our Sheriffs in that part, conjunctly and ſeverally greeting. Whereas by the ſeventh Act in the firſt Seſſion of our late Parliament in that our Kingdom, we with Advice of our Eſtates there, did ſtatute and ordain, that in every three years once at leaſt a Parliament ſhould be kept within that our Kingdom, in ſuch a convenient place and time as we with Advice aforeſaid ſhould at the cloſe of every Parliament determine and appoint; likeas by the laſt Act of our ſaid late Parliament, it was appointed, that the next Triennial Parliament ſhould meet and conveen at Edinburgh upon the 1ſt Tueſday of June laſt 1644. Which Date, in regard of the great Diſtempers both of this and that Kingdom, we could not keep at that time, neither in our own Perſon nor by our Commiſſioner. But now amidſt the many and weighty Affairs we have in hand, not laying aſide the Care of that our antient and native Kingdom, we have thought good not to fruſtrate any longer the Expectation and Deſires that our good Subjects there may have of ſuch a Parliament; and that the rather, leſt any of them ſhould be abuſed in thinking, that we do or ever intend to acknowledge for lawful the Meeting begun at Edinburgh the firſt Tueſday of June laſt, and continued ſince under the Name of a Parliament; which howſoever the appointing of it to conveen by us at that Day and Place, might have been a ſufficient Warrant to them for their firſt Meeting, yet to continue the ſame in abſence of us, or ſome one at leaſt to repreſent our Royal Perſon amongſt them, and by themſelves, without our concurring Authority, to make pretended Laws and Ordinances, is ſuch a Preſumption as we are reſolved never to endure. For theſe therefore and other Cauſes us moving, but chiefly out of the tender Affection we carry to that our native Kingdom, the preſent diſtracted Eſtate whereof we much pity, and think it cannot better be remeided than by the Wiſdom and Authority of a lawful and free Parliament, by whoſe Counſel and Advice we will be govern'd in what may conduce to the perfect ſettling of Peace and Tranquillity there. We Will and Require you and every one of you conjunctly and ſeverally to paſs to the Mercat-Croſs of our Town of and there by open Reading of this our Proclamation, Summond and Warn all and ſundry Dukes, Marquiſes, Earls, Viſcounts and Lords within that our Kingdom, to give their perſonal Appearance within the of our ſaid Town of the Day of next, where and when we intend to hold our High Court of Parliament by ourſelf or our Commiſſioner to be appointed by us for that effect; as alſo that ye make Intimation of and Warning to the Sheriffs and Freeholders of every Shire within that our Kingdom, and to the Magiſtrates of all our Burroughs Royal within the ſame, having Place and Voice in Parliaments to elect and choiſe Commiſſioners to be ſent from their ſeveral Shires and Burroughs reſpective, that may give their Opinion and Counſel in ſuch things as ſhall be propoſed in the ſaid Parliament, and concur with our Nobility aforeſaid, to make ſuch Acts and Statutes as may conduce moſt to the Peace and Welfare of that Kingdom, and ſhall be approv'd and ratify'd by us or our Commiſſioner aforeſaid in our Name: Likeas we will and command you to intimate publickly to all our Lieges of whatſoever Quality and Condition, that may have any Suits, Complaints or Grievances to be repreſented to us in Parliament, that they reſort for that effect to our ſaid Town of at the Day aforeſaid, and have their Recourſe no where elſe within that our Kingdom (eſpecially to the pretended Parliament kept by the Rebels there at Edinburgh) as they would not have us to eſteem of them as Perſons diſaffected to our Royal Perſon and Government. Furthermore, it is our Pleaſure, That this being done, you paſs immediately to the Mercat-Croſſes of all the Head-boroughs within every ſeveral Shire of that our Kingdom, (or at leaſt to ſo many of them as are preſently under our Obedience) and publiſh this our Proclamation; provided always, that the Publication thereof at the Mercat-Croſs of our ſaid Town of allenarly ſhall be a ſufficient Intimation to all our Lieges to repair thither; and that ſuch of our Nobility and Commiſſioners of Shires and Burroughs as ſhall compear and attend upon us or our Commiſſioner at the Day and Place appointed hereby, ſhall have Power with the Conſent and Approbation of us or our Commiſſioner foreſaid, to make Laws and Acts of Parliament that ſhall bind all our Subjects of that Kingdom in the ſame manner that any preceding Acts of Parliament, either in our Time or our Predeceſſors, have done: And that you report this duly execute and indorſed Day and Place above written, as you and every one of you will Anſwer upon your Perils; whereanent theſe Preſents ſhall be a ſufficient Warrant. Given under our Royal Hand and Signet at

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

This is a Proclamation for calling of a Parliament to meet in the Town of upon the Day of next.

Robert Spotiſwood.

CHARLES R.

CHARLES by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our right truſty and right entirely beloved Couſin, James Marquiſs of Montroſe, Lieutenant Governor of our Kingdom of Scotland, greeting. Whereas for the ſettling of the preſent Diſtractions within that our Kingdom, we have thought fit to call a Parliament, which is to meet and begin the Day of next within our Town of And in regard of the great and weighty Affairs we are taken up with here at this time, we not being able to be preſent in our own Perſon at that Meeting; therefore we repoſing a ſpecial Truſt and Confidence in your approved Wiſdom and Fidelity, do by theſe Preſents, Name, Conſtitute and Ordain you our Commiſſioner at the ſaid Parliament, authorizing you at the Day and Place above-mentioned for us and in our Name to meet and conveen with ſuch of our Nobility and Commiſſioners of Shires and Burroughs, as ſhall give their Appearance for holding of our High Court of Parliament in our ſaid Town of There to adviſe and conſult with our ſaid Nobility and others, of all ſuch things as may tend to the Peace and Welfare of that our Kingdom; and in our Name to propone unto them ſuch things as you ſhall think expedient to be enacted in our ſaid Parliament, which may conduce to the Good of our Service and happy State of our ſaid Kingdom: Giving you hereby full Power and Authority for us and in our Name, to approve and ratify all ſuch Acts and Statutes as ſhall be agreed upon by you and them, and to give them the Strength of Laws to bind and oblige all and whatſoever our Subjects of that Kingdom; with Power alſo to you to adjourn and continue the ſaid Parliament from time to time, or to diſſolve the ſame as you ſhall find it meet and expedient; and generally to do all and every thing that any Commiſſioner from us heretofore hath had Power and Authority to do. Likeas alſo we give you full Power and Authority in abſence of our Chancellor, to appoint a Vice-Chancellor to ſupply his Place, and to do and perform ſuch things as any Chancellor heretofore in preceding Parliaments have been in uſe of: As alſo in abſence of the Clerk Regiſter and other neceſſary Members of Parliament, to appoint ſuch as you ſhall think fit to fill their Places and exerce their Charges during the Sitting of the ſaid Parliament. And furthermore, we Will and Ordain you to make publick Intimation to all our Lieges within that our Kingdom of all ſuch Acts, Statutes and Ordinances as ſhall be enacted and concluded in the ſaid Parliament; and generally to uſe all Solemnities requiſite for giving of them the Strength and Power of Laws, which may bind all our Subjects of that Kingdom, in the ſame manner that any preceding Act of Parliament in our time or any of our Predeceſſors have done. Given under our Royal Hand and Signet.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

This is a Warrant for the Marquis of Montroſe to be your Majeſty's Commiſſioner in this next Parliament, giving him Power to appoint a Vice-Chancellor in caſe of the Chancellor's Abſence, and other Officers during the Sitting of the ſaid Parliament, in caſe they that are now in place do abſent themſelves.

Robert Spotiſwood.

Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Declaration from St. Andrews, 2*d* January 1646.

In Preſence of the Laird of Bogie and Mr. Robert Barclay, two of the Commiſſioners for the Proceſs.

SIR Robert Spotiſwood being examined and interrogate when he went into James Graham's Army, declares he went in to him at Bothwel upon the firſt Day of September laſt bypaſt, and went along with the ſaid James Graham and his Army all the way, till he came to Philiphaugh, and being in Selkirk the time of the Allarm, he followed down to the Haugh after James Graham had drawn down all his Men to the Haugh; and when the Deponer was come down, he found the Armies ready to join, and before he could come thro' the Haugh to the other ſide where the Baggage ſtood, James Graham's Army was put to flight, and the Deponer ſeeing them flee, reſolved to flee alſo, and was thereafter taken by the Laird of Silvertonhill, and ſome of his Accomplices, holding his Sword in his hand. Robert Spotiſwood, Ja. Weems of Bogie, Robert Barclay.

For clearing the Generality of that part of my Depoſition, bearing that I was taken with my Sword in my Hand, the Manner of it was this. By the time that I came from the Town of Selkirk down to Philiphaugh, the Fight was begun (wherein I was never ingaged) and the Flight taken, in the which I was carry'd along with the Throng, having nothing but a Cane in my hand. But being upon a borrow'd Nag, that was not able to take me off, and being purſued cloſe by ſome Troopers with their drawn Swords, ſeeing no means to get free of them, I then drew my Sword to keep them off, if poſſible I might, until I had obtained Quarters of them; which I did, and in that Poſture was taken.

Robert Spotiſwood.

Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Letter to the Laird of Bogie and Mr. Robert Barclay, from St. Andrews Caſtle, 4 January 1646.

Right Worſhipful,

HAving bethought myſelf of my Depoſition laſt Day before you, leſt I might be prejudged by the Generality thereof, in regard of my Anſwer made to your Queſtion, That I was taken with my Sword in my Hand; I humbly deſire that this Specification of my ſaid Depoſition may be admitted at the time of the adviſing thereof, to wit, That as I have deponed already I was not ingaged in the Fight, neither ever drew Sword till after the Flight begun; in the which I being carry'd away with the reſt, and my Nag not being able to take me off, when I ſaw ſundry Troopers coming upon me with their drawn Swords, then I drew mine, to keep them off, if I could, until I had obtained Quarters, in which Poſture I was taken. This being the Truth, I hope to clear my Carriage in that Place the better, your Worſhips will allow me the Favour to let me eik this to my former Depoſition, re adhuc integra, before the concluding of my Proceſs. In Expectation whereof I reſt your Worſhips very humble Servant,

Robert Spotiſwood.

Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Letter to the Lord Digby.

MY LORD,

WE are now arrived ad columnas Herculis, to Tweed-ſide, diſperſed all the King's Enemies within this Kingdom to ſeveral Places, ſome to Ireland, moſt of them to Berwick, and had no open Enemy more to deal with, if you had kept David Leſly there, and not ſuffered him to come in here, to make head againſt us of new. It is thought ſtrange here, that at leaſt you have ſent no Party after him, which we expected: altho he ſhould not come at all. You little imagine the Difficulties my Lord Marquiſs hath here to wreſtle with; the overcoming of the Enemy is the leaſt of them, he hath more to do with his own ſeeming Friends: Since I came to him (which was but within theſe ten days, after much toil and hazard) I have ſeen much of it. He was forced to diſmiſs his Highlanders for a Seaſon, who would needs return home to look to their own Affairs. When they

they were gone, Aboyn took a Caprice, and had away with him the greateſt ſtrength he had of Horſe: Notwithſtanding whereof he reſolved to follow his work, and clear this part of the Kingdom (that was only reſting) of the Rebels that had fled to Berwick, and kept a buſtling here. Beſides he was invited hereunto by the Earls of Roxburgh and Home, who when he was within a dozen Miles of them, have rendered their Houſes and themſelves to David Leſly, and are carried in as Priſoners to Berwick. Traquair hath been with him, and promiſed more nor he hath yet performed. All theſe were great Diſheartnings to any other but to him, whom nothing of this kind can amate. With the ſmall Forces he has preſently with him he is reſolved to purſue David Leſly, and not ſuffer him to grow ſtronger. If you would perform that which you lately promiſed, both this Kingdom and the North of England might be ſoon reduced, and conſiderable Aſſiſtance ſent from hence to his Majeſty; however nothing will be wanting on our parts here: theſe that are together are both Loyal and Reſolute, only a little Encouragement from you (as much to let it be ſeen that they are not neglected, as for any thing elſe) would crown the Work ſpeedily. This is all I have for the preſent, but that I am your Lordſhip's moſt Faithful Servant,

Robert Spotiſwood.

Dated, Near to Kelſo, September 10. 1645.

THeſe are the Evidences whereupon the Sentence condemnator is founded, in pronouncing of which there was much Diviſion in the Court; and tho many liked not Sir Robert's Party, yet they lov'd his Perſon, which made him many Friends, even among the Covenanters, in ſo much, that after the Sentence was read, ſome of the Nobility ſpoke in his behalf, and intreated the Houſe to conſider the Quality and Parts of that excellent Gentleman, and moſt juſt Judge, whom they had condemned, and begged earneſtly his Life might be ſpar'd: but an eminent Knowledge and Eſteem, which in other Caſes might be a Motive to ſave a Criminal, was one Cauſe of taking away his Life. For theſe Gentlemen who ſpoke were told, That the Authority of the then eſtabliſhed Government was not ſecure, while Sir Robert Spotiſwood was ſpared. Whereupon theſe Noblemen who preſided in the Meeting of the Eſtates at Glaſgow, and in the Parliament at St. Andrews, when they ſign'd the reſpective Sentences, openly declared to the reſt of the Members, That they did ſign as Preſes, and in Obedience to the Command of the Eſtates, but not as their particular Judgment.

The day before his Death, he wrote a Letter to the Marquiſs of Montroſe, telling, 'That he 'was condemn'd to die for being faithful to the 'King, and becauſe he had ſhown an inviolable 'Reſpect to his Lordſhip's Perſon. That whatever 'the Eſtates might pretend, he believed his 'taking part with his Lordſhip, was the only Motive which made them determine his Deſtruction, 'and he hop'd by his Death he would contribute 'more to his Majeſty's Service, than he could 'have done, had it pleas'd the Sovereign Providence to have prolong'd his Life. He intreated 'his Lordſhip to notice one thing he found neceſſary for the King's Service, which was, to continue his Gentleneſs and Moderation of Conduct, 'and not to imitate the barbarous Inhumanity of 'their Enemies, who gave his Lordſhip but too 'great Cauſe to follow their Example. And as a 'mark that his Services were not diſagreeable to 'his Lordſhip, he conjur'd him to take under his 'Protection his poor Orphans, and the afflicted 'Family of his Brother Sir John Spotiſwood of 'Dairſey.'

The day of Sir Robert Spotiſwood's Execution being come, the People were ſurprized with Aſtoniſhment, when they ſee appear upon the Scaffold, a Perſon whom in former Time they had with Love and Admiration ſeen preſide in the Supreme Judicature of the Nation, with great Sufficiency, and much Honour. He appeared with the ſame Gravity and Majeſty which did ever ſhine in his Countenance; and as he was about to ſpeak to the People, a Miniſter of the Place, knowing that the laſt Words of this great Man would make Impreſſion on the Minds of all the Spectators, cauſed the Provoſt of the Town impoſe on him ſilence. But Sir Robert foreſeeing this Treatment, had put in Writing what he had purpoſed to ſpeak to the People; ſo that finding himſelf interrupted, he threw among the Multitude the following Paper.

YE will expect ſomething from me of the Cauſe for which I am brought hither at this time to ſuffer in this kind; which I am bound to do for clearing the Integrity of my own Proceedings, vindicating his Majeſty's juſt and pious Intentions, and withal to vindicate you that are miſled in Ignorance, and made to believe that you are tied in Conſcience to ſet foreward this unnatural Rebellion, masked under the Covert and Pretext of propagating Religion, and maintaining of the Publick Liberties. You have perceived by the Fact that is gone before, viz. carrying Arms, &c. that I ſtand here adjudged to die by this pretended Parliament, as a Traitor to the Eſtates, and an Enemy to my Native Country. This is a Treaſon unheard of before in this Kingdom, againſt the Eſtates, a thing of a late Creation, which I believe there be ſome would have erected in Oppoſition to the juſt and lawful Authority of the King, under which we and our Predeceſſors have been ſo many hunders of Years governed. To come to my treaſonable Demeanour (as they eſteem it) the main one is, That I did docquet and bring down a Commiſſion of Lieutenantry from his Majeſty, to the Lord Marquiſs of Montroſe, with a Proclamation for indicting a Parliament by the King's Authority, wherein the ſaid Lord Marquiſs was to be Commiſſioner. Not to excuſe myſelf upon the Neceſſity laid upon me to obey his Majeſty's Command in a buſineſs of that Nature, in regard of the Charge I had about him, I cannot ſo far betray my own Conſcience, as to keep up from you my Judgment of the thing itſelf, ſeeing it may tend to the juſtifying of the King's part, and your better Information; for lack whereof, I know many are entangled in this Rebellion unwittingly: And who knoweth, but God in his merciful Providence hath brought us hither, to be Inſtruments of freeing you from the manifold Deluſions that are made uſe of to enſnare you. I ſay then, it was juſt and neceſſary to his Majeſty to grant ſuch Commiſſions, and by Conſequence an Act of Duty in me, to perform what he was pleaſed to Command me. It is known well enough what Contentment his Majeſty gave to this Kingdom at his laſt being being here, both in the Affairs of Church and Policy; notwithſtanding whereof the World ſeeth what meeting he hath gotten from us. When the Rebellion burſt forth in England, all that he deſired of us, was only to ſtand neutral, and not to meddle between him and his Subjects there: Of which moderate deſire of his little reckoning was made; but on the contrary, at the requeſt of theſe Rebels, by the Power of their Faction amongſt us, an Army was raiſed and ſent to England, to aſſiſt them againſt our own native King. His Majeſty being reduced to this Extremity, what expedient could he find ſo fair and eaſy, as to make uſe of the help of ſuch of his Loyal Subjects here, as he knew had ſuch an unparallel'd Diſloyalty in Horror and Deteſtation? Amongſt whom that matchleſs Mirror of all true Worth and Nobility, the Lord Marquiſs of Montroſe having offered himſelf, it pleaſed his Majeſty to give him a ſubaltern Commiſſion at firſt; which he having execute with ſuch unheard of Succeſs, that his Memory ſhall be had in Honour for it in all Ages: his Majeſty for the better furthering of his own Service, and to countenance and encourage him the more in it, gave him an abſolute and independent one thereafter, which is that I delivered into his hands by his Majeſty's Command. Herewithal his Majeſty pitying the Miſery of this poor Kingdom, occaſioned by the rebellious ſtubbornneſs of a few factious Spirits, thought fit to give Power to the ſaid Lord Marquiſs to call a Parliament in his Majeſty's Name, to try if by that means, a Remedy might be found againſt the preſent evils, and to have all his Subjects of this Kingdom reduced by one means or other under his Obedience. In all this I ſee not what can be juſtly charged upon his Majeſty, or upon me as his Servant, who have done nothing againſt any authorized Law of the Kingdom, but have ſerved him faithfully, unto whom by Truſt and natural Allegiance I am ſo much bound.

Whereas I am declared an Enemy to my native Country, God be ſo propitious to me, as my thoughts towards it have been always publick, and tending to the Good and Honour thereof. I do profeſs, ſince the firſt time I had the Honour of that Noble Marquiſs his Acquaintance, I have been a Favourer of his Deſigns, knowing them to be both loyal and honourable: Beſide that I knew his Affection towards his Country to be eminent in this eſpecially, that he did ever ſhow himſelf paſſionate to vindicate the Honour of this Kingdom, which ſuffereth every where, by this ſtrange Combination of theirs with the Rebels of another Kingdom againſt their own Prince; wherein I concurred in Judgment with him, and thought there was no other way to do it, but by ſetting up a Party of true and loyal hearted Scots-Men for his Majeſty, whereby it might be ſeen that it is not a national Defection, but only ſtirred up by a Faction therein, who for their own Ends have diſhonoured their native Kingdom, and diſturbed the Peace thereof. In enterprizing and proſecuting of which heroical Deſign, God hath ſo favoured that Noble Lord, that he hath righted our Country in the Opinion of all the World, and diſcovered where the Rottenneſs lieth.

Thus far I am content to be accounted a Traitor, in their Opinion that have condemned me, being fully aſſured that God the righteous Judge of all, who knoweth the Uprightneſs and Integrity of my Intentions, will impute no fault to me in this kind; ſince to my Knowledge I have carried myſelf according to the direction of his Word, and the Practice of all good Chriſtians before theſe miſerable Times we are fallen into. My Exhortation therefore (which coming from one at the Point I am at, will, I hope, have ſome weight) ſhall be this unto you; That you will break off your Sins by Repentance, and above all, free yourſelf of this Maſter Sin of Rebellion that reigneth in this Land: whereunto moſt part are either forced, or drawn unawares, chiefly at the Inſtigation of thoſe who ſhould direct you in the way of Truth. It cannot be but a great Judgment upon a Land, when God's ſingular Mercies towards it are ſo little valued. He hath not given us a King in his Wrath, but one for Piety, Bounty, and all Virtues both Chriſtian and Moral, may be a Pattern to all Princes beſides. How thankful we are to God for ſo great a Bleſſing, our Reſpect towards him manifeſteth. Yet I fear there is a greater Judgment than this upon it, which occaſioneth all the Miſchiefs that afflict this poor Land, ſuch as was ſent upon Ahab: God hath put a lying Spirit in the Mouths of the moſt part of your Prophets, who inſtead of the Doctrine of Salvation, labour to draw your Hearts unto the Condemnation of Core. God Almighty look upon this poor miſerable Church and Kingdom, and relieve you out of the intolerable Servitude you lie under, which I do heartily wiſh for in your behalf. So let me have the Aſſiſtance of your Prayers, that God would be pleaſed to pardon all my Sins in Jeſus Chriſt, and gather my Soul with the Saints and Martyrs that are gone to their Reſt before. So I bid the World and you farewel.

Sir Robert was not diſturbed at the unmannerly Interruption he met with, when he was about to addreſs himſelf to the People; ſo that turning from them, he wholly beſtowed himſelf in Devotions and Prayers to Almighty God. The ſame Miniſter having asked, if he would have him and the People to pray for the Salvation of his Soul, he made anſwer, That he deſired the Prayers of the People, but was not ſollicitous for his Prayers, which he believed were abominable unto God: for (added he) of all the Plagues with which the offended Majeſty of God had ſcourged this Nation, this was much the greateſt (greater than the Sword, Fire or Peſtilence) that for the Sins of the People God had ſent a lying Spirit into the Mouth of the Prophets. With which ſaying this Preacher finding himſelf touched, grew ſo extremely in paſſion, that he could not forbear ſcandalous and contumelious language againſt Sir Robert's Father, who had been long dead, and againſt himſelf who was now a dying: Which this mild Gentleman took no notice of, having his mind fixed upon higher Matters. At laſt with an undaunted Air he advances towards the Inſtrument of his Execution, and ſhewing no alteration either in Voice or Countenance, he laid down his Neck to the fatal ſtroak, and uttered theſe his laſt Words; Merciful Jeſu, gather my Soul unto thy Saints and Martyrs, who have run before me in this race.

CONTAINING

Several RECORDS relating to the foregoing TRIALS and PROCEEDINGS.

THE Second and Third Trials in this Collection being for Hereſy (a Crime heretofore very frightful, and puniſhed with great Severity) it may not be amiſs to ſtate how the Law formerly ſtood relating thereto, and, ſince we have not the Precedents of the Proceſs iſſued in thoſe particular Inſtances, to give a Precedent or two in ſome others of the ſame Nature.

By the ancient [a] Law, Burning was the Puniſhment for Hereſy; but the Party accuſed was firſt to be tried and convicted thereof by the Archbiſhop and the reſt of the Clergy of his Province aſſembled in Convocation. After Conviction the Offender was delivered over into Lay-Hands, and the Sheriff of the County, by virtue of the Writ de Hæretico comburendo, was to cauſe him to be burnt. Brit. lib. 1. c. 17. Bro. Abr. tit. Hereſy. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 595.

The firſt Statute in relation to Hereſy is the 5th of Rich. II. cap. 5. whereby it is enacted, That the Sheriffs and other Civil Officers ſhould apprehend and impriſon Perſons ſuſpected of Hereſy, in order to their being tried by the Laws of Holy Church; and it being found inconvenient to ſummon the Convocation for the Trial of every Offender, a Statute was made the 2d of Hen. IV. cap. 15. impowering every Dioceſan to impriſon Perſons ſuſpected of Hereſy in their reſpective Dioceſes, and try them (ſo that ſuch Dioceſan proceeded judicially and openly againſt ſuch Perſons) and where any Perſon was convicted, he might be impriſoned at the Diſcretion of the Ordinary; or, if the Party refus'd to abjure his Errors, or, having abjured them, relaps'd, he was to be left to the Secular Arm; and the Sheriff (whom the Ordinary might call to be preſent at the Trial) was to cauſe the Party to be burnt in ſome high (or open) Place.

The Lord Chief Juſtice Brook (in his Abridgment, Tit. Hereſy) ſays, that upon this Statute it was reſolved, That if a Perſon was convicted of Hereſy in the Preſence of the Sheriff, the Ordinary might commit him to the ſame Sheriff, and he was to cauſe him to be burnt without the Writ de Hæretico comburendo; but if the Sheriff was abſent, or if the Heretic was to be burnt in another County, in either of theſe Caſes the Writ de Hæretico comburendo muſt be firſt obtained, before the Sheriff could burn him.

Some Authors have wonder'd, why the Writ de Hæretico comburendo was iſſued for the burning of Sawtre, when by the laſt mentioned Act the Sheriff was impowered to execute Perſons convicted of Hereſy without that Writ: But the Wonder ceaſes, if we conſider that the Sheriff could not proceed to execute the Offender by his own Authority, unleſs he was preſent at the Conviction; and though the Dioceſan might call the Sheriff to attend the Trial, yet he might too convict the Offender in his Abſence. And further, Sawtre was convicted by the Convocation; and it may be difficult to give one Inſtance where the Convocation called the Sheriff to aſſiſt at the Trial of an Heretic; and, if they had, ſuch a Conviction was not within the Letter of the Act: Therefore, upon this Conviction, the Sheriff was under a Neceſſity of waiting for the Writ de Hæretico comburendo, before he could execute him.

By the 2d of Hen. V. cap. 7. all Civil Officers were to be ſworn to aſſiſt the Ordinaries in extirpating Hereſies; and one convict of Hereſy was to forfeit his Goods and Chattels, and Fee-ſimple Lands.

By the 25th of Hen. VIII. cap. 14. the Act of the 2d of Hen. IV. is in part repealed; and it is thereby provided, That no Perſon ſhall be executed as an Heretic, without the Writ de Hæretico comburendo firſt obtained.

By the 1ſt of Eliz. cap. 1. the aboveſaid Statutes, as well as that other Statute of the firſt and ſecond of Phil. and Mar. cap. 6. againſt Heretics, are repealed.

[a] See Whitlock's Speech in behalf of James Naylor, Vol. II. p. 273 N°. 52.

And by the 29th of Car. II. cap. 9. the Writ de Hæretico comburendo, with all Proceedings thereon, and all Capital Punishments in pursuance of any Ecclesiastical Censures, are from thenceforth utterly abolished.

So that at this day a Person convicted of Heresy is liable only to Excommunication, and such Pains and Disabilities as Persons standing excommunicated for any other Offence.

JAMES Rex.

JAMES, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our right trusty and right well-beloved Counsellor, Thomas Lord Ellesmere, our Chancellor of England, Greeting. Whereas the Reverend Father in God, John Bishop of London, having judicially proceeded in a Cause of Heresy against Bartholomew Legatt, of the City of London, in the Diocese of the said Bishop of London, concerning divers wicked Errors, Heresies, and blasphemous Opinions, holden, affirmed, and published by the said Bartholomew Legatt, and chiefly in these Thirteen blasphemous Positions following, viz. That the Creed called the Nicene Creed, and Athanasius's Creed, contain not a Profession of the true Christian Faith, or, that he will not profess his Faith according to the same Creeds; That Christ is not God of God begotten, not made, but begotten and made; That there are no Persons in the Godhead; That Christ was not God from everlasting, but began to be God when he took Flesh of the Virgin Mary; That the World was not made by Christ; That the Apostles teach Christ to be Man only; That there is no Generation in God, but of Creatures; That this Assertion, God to be made Man, is contrary to the Rule of Faith, and monstrous Blasphemy; That Christ was not before the Fulness of Time, except by Promise; That Christ was not God otherwise than anointed God; That Christ was not in the Form of God equal with God, that is, in Substance of God, but in Righteousness and giving Salvation: That Christ by his Godhead wrought no Miracle; That Christ is not to be pray'd unto: Wherein he the said Bartholomew Legatt hath, before the said Reverend Father, maintained his said most dangerous and blasphemous Opinions, as appeareth by many of his Confessions publickly made and acknowledged. For which his damnable and heretical Opinions, he is by definitive Sentence by the said Reverend Father John Bishop of London, with the Advice and Consent of other Reverend Bishops, Learned Divines, and others learned in the Laws, assisting him in Judgment, justly adjudged, pronounced, and declared to be an obstinate and incorrigible Heretick, and is left by them under the Sentence of the great Excommunication, and therefore as a corrupt Member to be cut off from the Church of Christ, and Society of the Faithful, and is to be, by our secular Power and Authority, as an Heretick punished, as by the Significavit of the said Reverend Father in God the said Bishop of London, bearing Date at London the third Day of March, in the Year of our Lord 1611. in the Ninth Year of our Reign, and remaining in our Court of Chancery, more at large appeareth. And although the said Bartholomew Legatt hath, since the said Sentence pronounced against him, been often very charitably moved and exhorted, as well by the said Bishop, as by many grave and learned Divines, to dissuade, revoke, and remove him from the said blasphemous and heretical Opinions, yet he arrogantly and wilfully persisteth and continueth in the same. We therefore, according to our Regal Function and Office, minding the Execution of Justice in this behalf, and to give Example to others, lest they should attempt the like hereafter, have determined, by the Assent of our Council, to will and require, and do hereby authorize and require you our said Chancellor, immediately upon the Receipt hereof, to award and make out, under our Great Seal of England, our Writ of Execution, accord-

[b] This Person was executed according to the Writ in the Year 1401, and was the first who was burnt in England for Heresy. See an Account of the Proceedings against him, and of his Execution, Fox's Acts and Mon. Vol. I. p. 586.

REX Vicecomitibus London ſalutem. Cum Reverendus in Chriſto Pater Johannes, London Epiſcopus, nobis ſignificavit, quod cum ipſe in quodam hæreticæ pravitatis negotio contra quendam Bartholomeum Legatt, ſubditum noſtrum civitatis London, dicti London Epiſcopi dioces' & juriſdict', rite & legitime procedens per acta inactitata, deducta, propoſita, & per confeſſiones ipſius Bartholomei Legatt coram præfato Epiſcopo judicialiter factas & recognitas, comperit & invenit præfatum Bartholomeum Legatt quamplurimos nefandos errores, falſas opiniones, hæreſes & blaſphemias execrandas, & ſcelerata dogmata catholicæ & orthodoxæ fidei & religioni, & ſacroſancto Dei Verbo expreſſe contraria & repugnantia, ſcienter, malicioſe, animoq; pertinaci, obdurato, planeque incorrigibili credere, tenere, affirmare, & publicare; idem Reverendus Pater London Epiſcopus, cum conſilio & conſenſu tam Reverendorum Epiſcoporum & aliorum Theologorum, quam Juris etiam peritorum in judicio aſſiden' & aſſiſten', eundem Bartholomeum Legatt, per ſententiam ſuam definitivam, obduratum, contumacem, & incorrigibilem hæreticum pronunciavit, decrevit, & declaravit, eaque occaſione tanquam protervum hæreticum, & membrum putridum & contagioſum, ab eccleſia Chriſti & fidelium communione reciſum & amputatum fore. Cum igitur ſancta mater Eccleſia non habeat quod ulterius facere & exequi valeat in hac parte, idem Reverendus Pater præfatum Bartholomeum Legatt, ut blaſphemum hæreticum, brachio noſtro ſeculari reliquit condigna animadverſione plectend', prout per Literas Patentes præfati Reverendi in Chriſto Patris London Epiſcopi in hac parte ſuperinde confect' nobis in Cancellar' noſtram certificat' eſt. Nos igitur ut zelator juſtitiæ, & fidei catholicæ defenſor, volentesq; Eccleſiam ſanctam, ac jura & libertates ejuſdem, & fidem catholicam manutenere & defendere, ac hujuſmodi hæreſes & errores ubiq; (quantum in nobis eſt) eradicare & extirpare, ac hæreticos ſic convictos animadverſione condigna puniri, attendenteſq; hujuſmodi hæreticum in forma prædict' convictum & damnatum juxta leges & conſuetudines regni noſtri Angliæ in hac parte conſuet', ignis incendio comburi debere: Vobis præcipimus, quod dictum Bartholomeum Legatt, in cuſtod' veſtra exiſten', apud Weſt-Smithfield in loco publico & aperto, ex cauſa præmiſſa, coram populo publice igni committi, ac ipſum Bartholomeum Legatt in eodem igne realiter comburi fac' in hujuſmodi criminis deteſtationem, aliorumq; Chriſtianorum exemplum manifeſtum, ne in ſimile crimen labantur; & hoc ſub periculo incumbente nullatenus omittatis. The Writ for burning an Heretic in Engliſh.

THE King to the Sheriffs of London, Greeting. Whereas the Reverend Father in Chriſt, John Biſhop of London, hath ſignified unto us, that when he in a certain Buſineſs of heretical Pravity againſt one Bartholomew Legatt, our Subject of the City of London, of the ſaid Biſhop of London's Dioceſe and Juriſdiction, rightly and lawfully proceeding by Acts enacted, drawn, propoſed, and by the Confeſſions of the ſaid Bartholomew Legatt, before the ſaid Biſhop judicially made and acknowledged, hath found the ſaid Bartholomew Legatt very many wicked Errors, falſe Opinions, Hereſies, and curſed Blaſphemies, and impious Doctrines, expreſly contrary and repugnant to the Catholick Faith and Religion, and the holy Word of God, knowingly and maliciouſly, and with a pertinacious, obdurate, and plainly incorrigible Mind, to believe, hold, affirm, and publiſh; the ſame Reverend Father the Biſhop of London, with the Advice and Conſent as well of the Reverend Biſhops and other Divines, as alſo of Men learned in the Law, in Judgment ſitting and aſſiſting, the ſame Bartholomew Legatt, by his definitive Sentence, hath pronounced, decreed, and declared to be an obdurate, contumacious, and incorrigible Heretic, and, upon that Occaſion, as a ſtubborn Heretic, and rotten contagious Member, to be cut off from the Church of Chriſt, and the Communion of the Faithful: Whereas the holy Mother Church hath not further to do and proſecute in this part, the ſame Reverend Father hath left the aforeſaid Bartholomew Legatt, as a blaſphemous Heretic, to our ſecular Power, to be puniſhed with condign Puniſhment, as by the Letters Patents of the ſaid Reverend Father in Chriſt the Biſhop of London, in this behalf above made, hath been certified unto us in our Chancery. We therefore, as a Zealot of Juſtice, and a Defender of the Catholick Faith, and willing to maintain and defend the Holy Church, and Rights and Liberties of the ſame, and the Catholick Faith, and ſuch Hereſies and Errors every where, what in us lieth, to root out and extirpate, and to puniſh with condign Puniſhment ſuch Heretics ſo convicted, and deeming that ſuch an Heretic, in Form aforeſaid convicted, and condemned according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of this our Kingdom of England in this part accuſtomed, ought to be burned with Fire; we do command you, that the ſaid Bartholomew Legatt, being in your Cuſtody, you do commit publickly to the Fire before the People, in a publick and open Place in Weſt-Smithfield, for the Cauſe aforeſaid; and that you cauſe the ſaid Bartholomew Legatt to be really burned in the ſame Fire, in Deteſtation of the ſaid Crime, for the manifeſt Example of other Chriſtians, leſt they ſlide into the ſame Fault; and this that you in no wiſe omit, under the Peril that ſhall follow thereon. Witneſs, &c.

Teſte meipſo apud Weſtm' quinto die Maii, anno regni noſtri tertio decimo. EYRE. Sicut in eiſdem brevibus, & ſchedul' eiſd' annex', in Scaccar' dicti Dom' Regis certificat', & ibidem in cuſtod' Rememorator' ejuſd' Dom' Regis de record' remanen' plenius continetur. Quibus lectis, auditis, & per ipſum intellectis, idem Johannes queritur, ſe colore ſeparal' brev', return' eorund', & ſchedul' eiſd' annexat', graviter vexat' fore & inquietat', & hoc minus juſte; quia dicit, quod præd' ſeparal' brevia ſuperius mentionat', return' eorund', & ſchedul' eiſdem annexat', materia in eiſd' content', minus ſufficien' in lege exiſtunt ad onerand' ipſum Johannem Hampden de aut cum ſolutione præd' ſumm' vigint' ſolid' ſuper ipſum in ſchedul' præd', modo & forma præd', taxat' & aſſeſſat', aut alicujus inde parcell', ad quæ ipſe neceſſe non habet, nec per legem terr' tenetur reſpondere. Unde ob inſufficien' præd' ſeparal' brevium ſuperius mentionat', return' eorund', ſchedul' eiſdem annex', ac materiæ in eiſdem brevibus ac ſchedul' content', ipſe idem Johannes Hampden petit judicium, Si dictus Dominus Rex nunc ipſum de præd' vigint' ſolid', aut aliqua inde parcell', ulterius impetere, ſeu onerare debeat aut velit.

Robert Holborne.

Et Johannes Banks Mil', Attorn' Dom' Regis nunc general', qui pro eodem Domino Rege ſequitur, præſens hic in cur' ad eund' diem in propria perſona ſua, dicit, quod præd' ſeparal' brevia, & return' eorund', ac ſchedul' præd' eiſdem' annex', materiaq; in eiſdem content', ſufficien' in lege exiſtunt ad præd' Johan' Hampden de præd' vigint' ſolid' ſuper ipſum in forma & ex cauſa præd' aſſeſſat' onerand'; quam quidem materiam ipſe dictus Attornat' dicti Dom' Regis general', pro eodem Dom' Rege paratus eſt verificare; quamq; materiam præd' Johannes Hampden non dedicit, nec ad eam aliqualiter reſpondit, ſed verificationem illam admittere omnino recuſat: Pro eodem Dom' Rege idcirco petit judicium, & quod præd' Johannes Hampden de eiſd' vigint' ſolid' oneretur, & inde ſatisfaciat, &c.

32 Car' II. O. B.

ff. JUratores pro Dom' Rege super sacramentum suum præsentant, Quod Eliz' Cellier uxor ---- Cellier, de parochia sanct' Clementis Dacor' in com' Midd' Gen', eadem Eliz' existen' religionis papalis, Deum præ oculis suis non habens, sed instigatione diabolica mot' & seduct', & falso & malitiose machinans & intendens, serenissimum Dominum nostrum Carolum secundum, Dei gratia Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ Regem, & gubernationem suam hujus regni Angliæ, necnon veram religionem protestan', infra hoc regnum Angliæ lege stabilit', in odium, infamiam, & contemptum inducere & inferre, & scandalum & infamiam imponere super quibusdam personis, qui producti fuissent testes, & testimon' dedissent ex parte dicti Dom' Regis contra præd' Eliz' Cellier', & alias personas, de alta proditione indictat' primo die Augusti, anno regni dicti Dom' Regis tricesimo secundo, apud prædict' parochiam sancti Clemen' Dacor', in com' Midd' præd', falso, malitiose, & seditiose scripsit & publicavit, & scribi, imprimi, & publicari causavit, quendam fictum, falsum, & scandalosum libellum, intitulat', Malice defeated, or a brief Relation of the Accusation and Deliverance of Elizabeth Cellier; wherein her Proceedings both before and during her Confinement are particularly related, and the Mystery of the Meal Tub fully discovered; together with an Abstract of her Arraignment and Trial, written by herself for the Satisfaction of all lovers of undisguised Truth. In quo quidem libello continentur hæc falsa, ficta, & scandalosa verba, & figuræ sequentia: ff. I hope it will not seem strange to any honest and loyal Person, of what Way or Religion soever, that I, being born and bred up under Protestant Parents, should now openly profess my self of another Church (Ecclesiam Romanam innuendo) for my Education being in those Times, when my own Parents and Relations, for their constant and faithful Affection to the King and Royal Family, were persecuted, the King himself murdered, the Bishops and Church destroyed, the whole loyal Party, meerly for being so, oppress and ruined, and all, as was pretended by the Authors of these Villanies, for their being Papists and Idolaters, the constant Character given by them to the King and his Friends; and to make them odious, they assuming to themselves only the Name of Protestants, making that the glorious Title by which they pretended Right to all things. These sort of Proceedings, as I grew in Understanding, produced in me more and more Horror of the Party that committed them, and put me on enquiring into that Religion, to which they pretend the greatest Antipathy, wherein, I thank God, I found my innate Loyalty not only confirmed, but encouraged; and, let Calumny say what it will, I never heard from any Papist, as they call them, Priest or Layman, but that they and I, and all true Catholicks, owe our Lives to the Defence of our lawful King, which our present Sovereign Charles the Second is, whom God long and happily preserve so. These sort of Doctrines agreeing to my publick Morals, and no way, as ever I was taught, contradicting my private ones, commending at the same time to me Charity and Devotion, I without any Scruple have hitherto followed, glorying my self to be in Communion with those (Papistas innuendo) who were the humble Instruments of his Majesty's happy Preservation from the fatal Battle at Worcester, and whom, though poor, no Temptation could invite to betray him to those, who by a pretended Protestant Principle sought his innocent Blood. These Truths, I hope, may satisfy any innocent Person in my present Change; nor can they wonder at my Continuance therein, notwithstanding the horrid Crimes of Treason and Murder laid to the Charge of some Persons, considerable for their Quality and Fortunes, in that Party: For when I reflected who were Witnesses, and what unlikely things they deposed, and observed that many of the chiefest Sticklers for the Plot were those, or the Sons of those that acted the principal parts in the last Tragedy, which History told me too had the Prologue of a pretended Popish Plot; I say, these things made me doubtful of the whole; and the more I searched for Truth, the more I doubted that the old Enemies of the Crown were at work again for its Destruction. I being fully confirmed in this, thought it my Duty, through all sorts of Hazards, to relieve the poor imprisoned Catholicks, who in great numbers were locked up in Gaols, starving for want of Bread; and this I did some Months before I ever saw the Countess of Powis, or any of those honourable Persons that were accused, or receiving one Peny of their Money, directly or indirectly, till about the latter end of January (1678) the Priſoners increaſing very much. Et in alia parte ejuſdem libelli (inter alia) continentur hæc falſa, ficta, & ſcandaloſa verba, ſſ. About this time I went daily to the Priſons, to perform thoſe Offices of Charity I was obliged to; and on Thurſday January 9. (1678) I dined in Newgate, in the room called the Caſtle, on the Maſter Debtors ſide; and about Four in the Afternoon I came down into the Lodge, with five Women, of which three were Proteſtants; and we all heard terrible Groans and Squeeks, which came out of the Dungeon called the Condemn'd Hole: I asked Harris the Turnkey what doleful Cry it was; he ſaid, it was a Woman in Labour; I bid him put us into the Room to her, and we would help her; but he drove us away very rudely, both out of the Lodge, and from the Door. We went behind the Gate, and there liſtened, and ſoon found that it was the Voice of a ſtrong Man in Torture, and heard, as we thought, between his Groans, the Winding up of ſome Engine. Theſe Cries ſtopped the Paſſengers under the Gate; and we ſix went to the Turner's Shop without the Gate, and ſtood there, amazed with the Horror and Dread of what we heard; when one of the Officers of the Priſon came out in great Haſte, ſeeming to run from the Noiſe: One of us caught hold of him, ſaying, Oh! what are they doing in the Priſon? Officer, I dare not tell you, Miſtreſs. Cell. It's a Man upon the Rack, I'll lay my Life on't. Offic. It is ſomething like it. Cellier, Who is it, Prance? Offic. Pray, Madam, do not ask me, for I dare not tell you; but it is that I am not able to bear any longer; pray let me go. With that he ran away towards Holbourn as faſt as he could. We heard theſe Groans perfectly to the End of the Old Baily: They continued till near Seven of the Clock; and then a Perſon in the Habit of a Miniſter, of middle Stature, grey-haired, accompanied with two other Men, went into the Lodge; the Priſoners were locked up, and the outward Door of the Lodge alſo, at which I ſet a Perſon to ſtand and obſerve what ſhe could; and a Priſoner loaded with Irons was brought into the Lodge, and examined a long time; and the Priſoners that came down as low as they could, heard the Perſon examined, with great Vehemency ſay often, I know nothing of it; I am innocent; he forced me to bely my ſelf; what would you have me ſay? will you murder me becauſe I will not bely my ſelf and others? Several other ſuch like Expreſſions they heard ſpoken, as by one in great Agony. About four of the Clock the next Morning the Priſoners, that lay in a place about the Hole, heard the ſame Cry again two Hours, and on Saturday Morning again; and about eight of the Clock that Morning, a Perſon, I employed to ſpy out the Truth of this Affair, did ſee the Turnkeys carry a Bed into the Hole: ſhe asked who it was for; they told her it was for Prance, who was gone mad, and had torn his Bed in pieces. That Night the Examiners came again, and Prance was led away to the Preſs-yard. This, and many things of like nature, made me very inquiſitive to know what paſſed in the Priſon. Soon after this Francis Coral a Scotchman, that had been put into Newgate upon Suſpicion of carrying away Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey's Body, and lay there thirteen Weeks and three Days in great Miſery, got out: I went to ſee him, and found him a ſad Spectacle, having the Fleſh worn away, and great Holes in both his Legs, by the Weight of his Irons; and having been chained ſo long double, that he could not ſtand upright: He told me much of his hard and cruel Uſage, as that he had been ſqueezed and haſped into a thing like a Trough in a Dungeon under Ground, which put him to inexpreſſible Torment, inſomuch that he ſwooned; and that a Perſon in the Habit of a Miniſter ſtood by all the while; that a Duke beat him, pulled him by the Hair, and ſet a drawn Sword to his Breaſt three times, and ſwore he would run him through; and another great Lord had laid down a heap of Gold, and told him it was Five hundred Pounds; that he ſhould have it all, and be taken into the aforeſaid Duke's Houſe, if he would confeſs what they would have him: And one F. a Vintner, that lives at the Sign of the Half-Moon in Ch—— St——, by whoſe Contrivance he was accuſed, took him aſide, and bid him name ſome Perſon, and ſay they imployed him to take up the dead Body in Somerſet-yard, and gave him Money for ſo doing; That if he would do this, both F. and he ſhould have Money enough. He alſo told me, that he was kept from Thurſday till Sunday without Victuals or Drink, having his Hands every Night chained behind him; and being all this time locked to a Staple, which was driven into the Floor, with a Chain not above a Yard long; that in this great Extremity he was forced to drink his own Water; and that the Gaoler beat his Wife becauſe ſhe brought Victuals, and pray'd he might have it, and threw Milk on the Ground, and bid her be gone, and not look at him. Et in altera parte ejuſdem libelli continent' (inter al') hæc falſa, ficta, & ſcandaloſa verba ſequentia: ſſ. My Arraignment, which, in Confidence of my own Innocency I continually preſs'd for; not but that I knew the Danger, as to this Life, of encountering the Devil in the worſt of his Inſtruments, which are Perjurers encouraged to that degree, as that profligated Wretch (quendam Thomam Dangerfield teſtem product' ex parte Dom' Regis contra præd' Elizabetham Cellier, pro alta proditione innuendo) was, and has been ſince his being expoſed to the World in his true Colours, both at mine and another's Trial. Et in altera parte ejuſdem libelli continentur hæc falſa, ficta, & ſcandaloſa verba ſequen': ſſ. Nor have I ſince received any thing towards my Loſſes, or the leaſt Civility from any of them, whilſt Dangerfield (prædict' Thomam Dangerfield iterum innuendo) when made a Priſoner for apparent recorded Rogueries, was viſited by and from Perſons of conſiderable Quality, with great Sums of Gold and Silver, to encourage him in the new Villanies he had undertaken, not againſt me alone, but Perſons, in whoſe Safety all good Men (as well Proteſtants as others) in the three Kingdoms are concerned. Et in altera parte ejuſdem libelli, vocat' A Poſtſcript to the impartial Reader, continent' hæc falſa, ficta, & ſcandaloſa verba ſequentia: ſſ. And whenſoever his Majeſty pleaſes to make it as ſafe and honourable to ſpeak Truth, as it is apparent it hath been gainful and meritorious to do the contrary, there will not want Witneſſes to teſtify the Truth of more than I have written, and Perſons that are above being made the Hangman's Hounds for weekly Penſions, or any other Conſiderations whatſoever. In malum & perniciofiſſimum exemplum omn' alior' in tali caſu delinquen' contra pacem dict' Dom' Regis, coron', & dignitat' ſuas.

having in their late Seſſion, in purſuance of your Majeſty's Direction, entred upon a ſtrict and impartial Inquiry into the horrid and execrable Popiſh Plot, which hath been for ſeveral Years laſt paſt, and ſtill is carried on, for the Deſtruction of your Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government; and extirpation of the Proteſtant Religion, and the utter Ruin of your Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects: And having ſo far proceeded therein, as juſtly to attaint, upon full Evidence, one of the five Lords impeached for the ſame, and were in further Proſecution of the remaining four Lords, and other Conſpirators therein: And as well the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, as the Commons in your ſaid Parliament aſſembled, having declared, That they are fully ſatisfied that there now is, and for divers Years laſt paſt, hath been a horrid and treaſonable Plot and Conſpiracy contrived and carried on by thoſe of the Popiſh Religion in Ireland, for Maſſacring the Engliſh, and ſubverting the Proteſtant Religion, and the antient eſtabliſhed Government of that Kingdom: And your ſaid Commons having impeached the Earl of Tyrone, in order to the bringing him to Juſtice for the ſame, and having under Examination, other Conſpirators in the ſaid Iriſh Plot: And your ſaid Commons having likewiſe impeached Sir William Scrogs, Chief Juſtice of your Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, for Treaſon, and other great Crimes and Miſdemeanors, in endeavouring to ſubvert the Laws of this Kingdom by his arbitrary and illegal Proceedings; and having voted Impeachments againſt ſeveral other Judges for the like Miſdemeanors, your Petitioners, conſidering the continual Hazards to which your Sacred Life and the Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace of the Kingdom are expoſed, while the Hopes of a Popiſh Succeſſor gives Countenance and Encouragement to the Conſpirators, in their wicked Deſigns: And conſidering alſo the Diſquiet and dreadful Apprehenſions of your good Subjects, by Reaſon of the Miſeries and Miſchiefs which threaten them on all Parts, as well from Foreign Powers, as from the Conſpiracies within your ſeveral Kingdoms, againſt which no ſufficient Remedy can be provided but by your Majeſty; and your Parliament were extreamly ſurprized at the late Prorogation, whereby the Proſecution of the publick Juſtice of the Kingdom, and the making the Proviſions neceſſary for the Preſervation of your Majeſty, and your Proteſtant Subjects, have received an Interruption. And they are the more affected herewith, by reaſon of the Experience they have had of the great Progreſs which the emboldened Conſpirators have formerly made in their Deſigns, during the late frequent Receſſes of Parliament; but that which ſupports them againſt Deſpair is, the Hopes they derive from your Majeſty's Goodneſs, that your Intention was and does continue by this Prorogation to make way for your better Concurrence with the Counſels of your Parliament. And your Petitioners humbly hope, that your Majeſty will not take Offence that your Subjects are thus zealous, and even impatient of the leaſt delay of the long hoped for Security, whilſt they ſee your precious Life invaded, the true Religion undermined, their Families and innocent Poſterity likely to be ſubjected to Blood, Confuſion, and Ruin, and all theſe Dangers increaſed by reaſon of the late Endeavours of your Majeſty and your Parliament, which have added Provocation to the Conſpirators, but have had little or no effect towards ſecuring againſt them; and they truſt your Majeſty will graciouſly accept of this Diſcovery, and Deſire of their loyal Hearts to preſerve your Majeſty, and whatever elſe is dear to them, and to ſtrengthen your Majeſty againſt all Popiſh and pernicious Counſels, which any ill affected Perſons may preſume to offer: They do therefore moſt humbly pray, that your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed (as the only means to quiet the Minds, and extinguiſh the Fears of your Proteſtant People, and prevent the eminent Dangers which threaten your Majeſty's Kingdoms, and particularly this your great City, which hath already ſo deeply ſuffered for the ſame) to permit your ſaid Parliament to ſit from the day to which they are prorogued, until by their Counſels and Endeavours thoſe good Remedies ſhall be provided, and thoſe juſt Ends attained, upon which the Safety of your Majeſty's Perſon, the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, the Peace and Settlement of your Kingdoms, and the Welfare of this your ancient City, do ſo abſolutely depend; for the purſuing and obtaining of which good Effects, your Petitioners unanimouſly do offer their Lives and Eſtates, and ſhall ever pray, &c. The Plea (drawn by Mr. Serjeant Rotheram*) which he offered to the Court.*
